The cats respond to every crack of Beatty's whip, but toss in enough growls and savage pawing to give audience a few anxious moments. At show caught there was a realistic scrap between a lion and a tiger seated next to each other on pedestals; no damage.

Animals were considerably upset and nervous at first few performances here, being accustomed to wide-opened spaces of the circus, a dead-level runway and floodlights. To provide rooms in theatre basement for the cats, a 12x2 hole had to be cut through two feet of concrete at back of stage in order to introduce a 40-foot runway leading to basement. It took Beatty and his aides more than 15 minutes before and after act to prod each animal up and down the 45-degree angle chute. In fact, probably more thrills go on backstage than those seen by audience.

Contrary to first arrangements, the Fox's entire vaude (which consisted of three acts besides Beatty) was not forced to work in 'one.' Solid aluminum cage, 38 by 28 feet, was made to fold halfway back, thus permitting other acts to go on in different settings. Two acts, however, worked before drop while animals were being moved into the basement. In the closing Don Lee and Louise, dancers, offered their numbers in regular setting.

Painted in bamboo style, cage presented a stumbling block to audience at first day's performances. Animals were hardly discernible, so cage was painted black for Saturday's show. In addition to usual pyramiding of about 15 animals, which itself evokes plenty of excitement, Beatty has two well trained cats performing individually. Rajah, a Bengal tiger, rolls a big roller while Seleka, another Bengal, rolls over and over on sawdust, whirls in one spot and then jumps a barrier at trainer's command.

The remaining nine cats, who enter from chute one by one, go through various tricks. As finale, Beatty makes most of animals jump a high barrier before they pass out through chute.

Protecting and aiding Beatty are five assistants, all armed with pistols and prodding sticks. In group of 24 animals are 10 lions, eight lionesses, and six tigers. (Bengal, Siberian and Samatran). Included is Samson, the lion whose bite proved fatal to one of Beatty's assistants at Rochester, Ind. Wem.

KINGSLEY and CASE
Piano, Songs
7 Mins.; Two (Drapes)
State, N. Y.

Man at the piano, woman of stately bearing, both working to microphones (separate) offer a combination that is more commendable as an attempt to capture something in the modern mood than a successful consummation of their aims. Pair have recently been heard over the radio. Which may be a better bet for the mixture of dramatic singing and jazz counter-phrasing that they employ. It's going after things the hard way, and as yet they have not smoothed out their technique sufficiently to hold a metropolitan audience.

Sound equipment at the State may have been a detriment. It made the woman sound shrill. At moments it almost seemed like there was an echo in the house. Her voice is high and flutey and needs careful regulation.

Pair actually did only two numbers when reviewed. Hit the wings for bows and the public did not insist on a third number. Which made a pretty scanty seven minutes and just a so-so total impression. They were presumably victims of their own determination to exploit a modernistic musical idiom which was not comprehensible to the public and not fully developed by the artists.

Their procedure is best observed in 'Frankie and Johnny' with the man carrying the story-telling lines and the woman breaking in with the quasi-operatic chanting.

Both are good looking and carry themselves well. But what they offer at the State is scarcely an effective vaudeville act. Land.

DANCE GAMBOLS (5)
Flash Act
15 Mins.; Full (Special)
G.O.H., N. Y.

Typical dance flash which has a time of it getting anywhere. First a trio, two boys and a girl in formal attire, on for something resembling a smooth ballroom taping bit, but it falls to do much in getting customers on edge. A blonde next appears with an accordion and holds the spotlight for a medley. She sticks on the stage for the next number also, providing incidental accompaniment for the threesome again who continue their hoofing fare.

As a break, there's a brunet who executes an acrobatic number to 'Truckin', a good lively tune, but synonymous with the Harlem rhythmania, so the energy seems wasted here. Company gathers for the last outburst of pep, with the accordionist back in scarlet panties and showing her agility at flips and turns.

Drop is black with some flashy trimmings. Act is dressed tamely, with no fancy outfits. Such dance acts are standard as closers at the G.O.H., and they've had much better ones than this presentation. Group is young, but needs snappier stuff to hand out. Bral.

AL VERDI and THELMA LEE
Music, Songs
10 Mi. ; One
G. O. , N. Y.

Next to closing position allotted comedy team of Verdi and Lee, the first a hefty comic, and the girl a tall blonde. Both play stringed instruments and garner some sturdy laughs with their gagging.

Man is so big that he's apparently uncomfortable standing, so he sits throughout, whether playing or not. He imitates youngsters at the reciting stage via his instrument and does it well. He strikes a coy character at times, and with his partner ribbing him for the nonsense, it registers okay.

Act is not listed in files, even though it appears somewhat weathered. Supper house liked it. Bral.

EL GARY
Singing
9 Mins.;
Century, Baltimore

Familiar voice over Balto broadcast station, and vet of many a WBAL commercial, El (for Ellwood) Gary won a radio contest which terminated the night before he opened at the Century; date was his reward as winner. Salary for week, $200.

A typical Irish tenor, with easy and ingratiating delivery, Gary looks likely to lasso something for himself before long.

Sings 'Macushla,' 'Irish Eyes' and 'Sylvia' in that order, but since first is his strongest number, he should conclude with it.

Unit Review

VANITIES
(INDIANAPOLIS)
Indianapolis, Jan. 18.

'Earl Carroll Vanities,' which played the legit English theatre here Christmas week, following Cincinnati and then went to Detroit, made its bow as a picture house unit at pop prices Friday (17) at the Indiana. Running close to 85 minutes opening day and then finally being shortened to 75 over the weekend, the revue will have to be trimmed some more to reach the big houses where five shows a day are needed.

'Vanities' has same cast it had for legit run here with exception of Billy House and Cirillo Brothers going in to make up for loss of Clark and McCullough. Still present are Buster West and Lucille Page, Jean Lorraine, Hugh Cameron, Charles Carrer, Al Sexton and mixed ensemble of 10 boys and 10 girls. Show carries its own leader and is managed by Jim Carroll.

Opens with a parade number entitled 'Through These Portals,' which is too slow for a curtain-raiser. A long comedy scene, 'Sleep-Walking,' follows which ends with a slightly spicy blackout, with House, Jean Lorraine is on next for a comedy eccentric dance in a Spanish production number. Lorraine is not established as a comedienne well enough before she goes into her dance and it leaves audience wondering a bit before she is able to get a laugh down about two-thirds of the way through her routine. They need to set her with any kind of brief comedy bit before she starts her stepping. Lucille Page comes on to do an acrobatic tap number for a finish to the scene. Gets nice hand as she works up high on a pedestal.

Cirillo Brothers follow in 'one' and get best reception in show with their start as hillbilly act and their surprise turn to white ties and tails before finish. Nearest thing to nudity in show comes next with a 'Dream Clouds' production number, most of which takes place behind scrim with girls holding silver balloons and wearing enough to please most censors.

Lucille Page comes on again and does one of her regular dance routines to an okay reception, and then Billy House does his familiar sketch in new setting. Although it was played at other house in town here only a few weeks ago, it gets good returns. Charles Carrer follows with his novel juggling routine which he sells well enough, and then Miss Page comes on again, and it's a question if they are ever going to

Standard Trio Calls It Quits After 16 Years

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

After 16 years together as an act, the partnership of Mulroy, McNeece and Ridge has dissolved, with all quitting show business.

Steve Murloy is entering the accounting business here with his brothers.

San Francisco, Jan. 21.

The Golden Gate theatre will adopt the policy dropped by the Warfield, Wednesday (15) every one back of the curtain line at the Gate received two weeks notice. New set-up, effective Jan. 29, brings Peggy O'Neill and her entire organization over from the Warfield, the first time the Gate has had a stock line of girls.

Several musicians from the Warfield go in with the new change, although now said that band will be mostly in pit. The 40c. top adhered to by the Gate is also likely to be changed, according to Cliff Work, though he says this move is not yet definite.

The Warfield in matter of grosses has for years been tops, with Golden Gate running second, and the new arrangement indicates RKO figures the Warfield has made a mistake. Nothing has been wrong with Gate's trade of late, so copping of Warfield's policy is thought by some to be move to block a change-of-mind act by Fox-West Coast, once the Gate gets the new order established.

Burns and Allen are booked for the Golden Gate week of March 18.

FIO RITO FOLLOWS HAL KEMP INTO B'WAY PAR

Ted Fio Rito's orchestra follows Hal Kemp's combo and the Yacht Club Boys into the Paramount, N. Y., when the current show ends its run, probably in two weeks. William Morris office agented.

Fio Rito's crew will go into the Broadway deluxer sans any additional acts.

Eddie Duchin's band may follow the Fio Rito date.

Holland-Hart at R. R.

Jack Holland and June Hart, ballroom team, return to the Rainbow Room in Radio City, New York, March 11, for five weeks.

Date set by Irma Marwick.

VAUDE LIKELY FOR RKO NABES

Likely that several RKO neighborhood houses in Greater New York will restore vaude on a four-day or split week basis within the next few weeks. Several meetings on the matter have been held by the theatre operating department in the last couple of days.

Among the houses affected will probably be the Madison, Brooklyn, Fordham, Tronx, and the Coliseum in upper Manhattan.

These houses played vaude on a four-day basis last year but reverted to double-feature policies in a few months with Loew's nabe spots following suit.

Doc Rockwell Earned 73G in '31, but Now Asks Alimony Shave

Providence, Jan. 21.

Decision in the legal battle waged by George 'Doc' Rockwell, comedian, and his wife, Mrs. Claire S. Rockwell, over alimony payment is expected to be handed down in Superior Court two weeks.

Rockwell is seeking a reduction of the $75 weekly alimony he is compelled by court order to pay his wife. Mrs. Rockwell wants it increased. The comedian also wants her to enter a final decree in a divorce she obtained from him in 1924.

During the hearing, counsel for Mrs. Rockwell introduced income tax returns filed by Rockwell for the year 1931, revealing that the comedian had earned a gross of $73-000. Additional evidence, however, showed that Rockwell's earnings since then have been negligible.

Follow-Up Options

As with the previous Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers films, RKO is handing out options for six weeks to acts booked with 'Follow the Fleet' (Radio) at the Palace, Chicago, opening Feb. 28.

O. L. Oz & Macklin Megley's production line of 20 girls, featuring Petch and Deauville, is the first act set thus far.

An Outside Chance

In the past few months VARIETY has received from its correspondents over the country numerous reviews of and news stories about theatres returning, or contemplating returning, to stage show policies. Most of the theatres mentioned are independently operated.

The situation is not new. There always has been a number of independent houses in highly competitive situations pinched for pictures, good pictures, thinking of vaudeville and playing it where and when possible. They constitute the greater part of the vaudeville-playing business today.

One phase lately developing is encouraging. hat is that several theatres in distant sections reviving stage shows, nd minus good pictures with them, have enjoyed heartening business. Most of these houses hadn't played stage shows for several seasons. Whether the business has been provoked by a momentary hunger for live entertainment and will shortly die remains to be seen. But it is also possible that this business can be kept alive if the stage end has merit and can entertain.

Yet there is another rub. Good stage shows are difficult to obtain. A shortage of new and fresh vaudeville talent has something to do with it. There's more to it than that, too. This concerns routing and booking.

The average independent theatre, no matter how vaude-minded, is usually situated a long way from the nearest similarly vaude-minded house. And usually further than that from a central booking source. For that reason the theatre which would like to play stage shows regularly can only play them irregularly. Such a theatre must depend for bookings on an occasional unit or wild-cat attraction, doing a catch-as-catch-can booking job with no assurance of being able to retain a steady stage show policy even if attempting one.

For their bookings the independent theatres cannot, as in the old days, depend on the circuit booking offices in New York, Chicago and elsewhere for shows. The circuit booking offices, probably grateful that their picture-minded bosses permit them to exist at all, do not appear to be equipped to book their own small 'circuits' well, let alone take on the independents. Nor can the average independent theatre depend on the average indie vaudeville booker for its shows. So the theatre operator who wants vaudeville, and would play it if he could get it, is in the middle. But there may be a solution.

A handful of determined independent theatre men might produce results via a general get-together in New York, Chicago or any other convenient city.

Variety will place its news pages, and whatever other facilities it may be deemed to have, at the disposal of any individual or group sincerely concerned with bringing-it-back-alive.

Midget 'Tarzan' and Mgr. Suing W. Va. Town for 250G, Claiming False Arrest

Pat Welch (Tarzan), the 40-year-old midget who does a monkey impersonation in vaudeville under the billing of 'The Human Ape,' and his manager, Felix Patty, are starting suit through the American Federation of Actors against the city of Wheeling, W. Va., on the grounds of false arrest. They'll ask for $250,000 damages.

Welch and Patty were arrested and jailed in Wheeling last week while playing Warners' Capitol there with the Frank Wirth circus unit. Also pinched were Wirth and the manager of the theatre, Ken Hoel. Wirth and Hoel were released in $1,000 bonds, but Welch and Patty were held in the Wheeling cooler for 14 hours.

With Welch charged with fraud and the others accused of abetting him, the arrests were ordered by the Wheeling city prosecutor, Don McKee. Arrests were made Jan. 14 after the last show of a three-day engagement. All were dismissed the following day by a justice of the peace after a one-minute hearing.

Wheeling was the last date for 'Tarzan' with the Wirth show. He opens this week with the Joe Cook unit in Providence.

NVA CLUBHOUSE ON OWN WITH 50c MEMBERSHIP

NVA Club, New York, still run by Henry Chesterfield but no longer connected with the NVA Fund, has gone on a self-supporting basis for its social activities. There's now a 50c. monthly membership fee and a 10c.-a-seat charge in the cardroom.

Club, with quarters at 46th street and Eighth avenue, is strictly social now. It recently received $50,000 in cash from the NVA Fund for a mortgage it held on the NVA Sanatorium at Saranac Lake.

Down to Half Week

Albany, Jan. 21.

Midweek stage shows at the Palace are now out, double features substituting. However, stage shows will continue on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Business had been n.s.g. on the middle three days.

Weber's Widow Gets 5G Award on Ins. Policy

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Federal court awarded $5,000 damages to Love D. Weber, widow of Bernard W. Weber, vaudevillian, who died in 1933 as a result of auto accident, from Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Plaintiff maintained money was due on policy which called for double indemnity in case of accidental death. Insurance firm claimed agreement had been changed to $5,000 straight and had paid that amount to the plaintiff. Motion for new trial will be heard Feb. 10.

OPERA-BALLET UNIT FOR VODE

Chicago, Jan. 21.

A. F. Thaviu will have new 60-minute unit of opera and ballet ready for the larger picture houses by Feb. 7, with 'Rigoletto' cut to essentials while retaining all the popular tunes, and with Ruth Page and her ballet troupe taking part in the revels scene. Cast is culled from the principals of the Chicago Opera House, with Elizabeth Rushmore, the coloratura, as Gilda.

Thaviu, who will conduct, calls his ensemble Il Mano Opera, a name he owns.

Break-in will be in Publix-Great States houses in midwest.

WALLER GOING SOUTH

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

Fats Waller and orchestra, colored, set for week of March 13 at Loew's Century here.

Will be first vaude appearance in Balto.

L. A. ORPH SETS HELLER

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Jackie Heller has been set for week at Orpheum starting Jan. 22 by the National Broadcasting Co. artists bureau.

Tenor also being offered to pictures.

F&M ST. LOUIS HOUSE AGAIN PULLS VAUDE

Is, Jan. 21.

After four weeks of stage shows, Ambassador theatre, Fanchon & Marco's downtown house, is back to dualers.

In absence of Charles E. Kurtzman, general manager of house who is vacationing in West Indies, it was reported F. & M. will resume combo policy only when an attraction is available. Musicians, it is said, have been assured of 12 weeks work during year, but contract does not specify that these weeks be consecutive.

24-Hour Cycle in Headaches Shuts Milw'kee House

Milwaukee, Jan. 21.

After operating for less than two weeks, the Alhambra has again gone dark. L. K. Brin opened house with financial backing of Robert A. Hess, ASCAP attorney here, but Hess withdrew 24 hours after house opened with a Major Bowes' unit.

Bad weather hurt first day's gross and from then on it was a dog-fight for the rest of the nine days Bowes' unit was in town. Operating under a $4,500 guarantee, it is understood Bowes ordered the company manager to pour guarantee back into the house to satisfy the labor crafts, which demanded salary before they went to work daily.

Following Bowes' unit, house opened with vaudeville and pictures, but within 24 hours the picture was pulled out to make room for an indie film and a cut from 35c top to 20c. House operated this way for two days when acts, booked in by Billy Diamond, walked out. Brin then applied the shutters.

In commenting on closing, Brin said he couldn't operate due to heavy union demands and hinted interference from other downtown managers. Still holds lease on house and is said to be seeking outside capital to reopen on strictly film basis.

At the same time Livingston Lanning, former Fox manager here, has been seeking to get Brin's lease and open with a vaude policy. Dave Miller, orchestra leader at the house when it closed, is also seeking financial assistance to reopen the house, it is said.

Rand Drops Roadshow For 60-Minute Unit To Play Fla. Time

Sally Rand is shelving her full-length road show after a month of $1.50 top one-niters in the south, and returns to a 60-minute picture house unit type show in order to play the Sparks circuit in Florida during the resort season.

Fanner's dates on the Sparks time, set by the William Morris office, run from Feb. 6 to March 6, inclusive, commencing at the Florida, Jacksonville. Paramount, Miami, plays the show for four day's starting Feb. 17.

Following the Florida bookings, Miss Rand may resume with the two-a-dayers.

Delmar Benefit Feb. 9

Benefit show being arranged by his friends for Jule Delmar is slated for Feb. 9 at the Majestic, New York. The former Keith booker of the southern 'Delmar time,' whose last connection was with the WOR artist bureau, is ill at French hospital.

Herman Levinc, 1619 Broadway, N. Y., is handling the ticket sale.

Beatty Detroit H. O.

Clyde Beatty, currently in his first week in vaude with his combined lion and tiger act at the Fox, Detroit, will be held at the house for a second week.

Beatty was booked to play the Palace, Milwaukee, starting Friday (24), but that date has been deferred to permit the Detroit holdover.

New Bankroll Holds Newark Mosque Open; Chesterfield, 17G in Red, Out

Threatened folding of the combination vaude-picture-dancing project at the Mosque, Newark, has been averted by acquisition of a fresh bankroll, and the house is continuing with its original policy. Henry (NVA) Chesterfield is out, with John L. McCurdy continuing alone as the operator.

New bankrollers are a pair of Newark businessmen, Max Tishler, who is in the electrical equipment business, and H. R. Pausin, of the Pausin Engineering Co. They succeeded the original backer, Ernest W. Mandeville, who had a 50% interest at the start. It was the second theatrical flop in a row for Mandeville, who also bankrolled 'Truly Valiant,' legit, which recently folded after one performance' Broadway.

Chesterfield claims have dropped $17,000 in the Newark venture, his first try at theatre operation, and says that Mandeville put in the same amount. Theatre was said to have lost in the neighborhood of $10,000 in its first three weeks on a total approximate gross of $27,000 for that period. First week's overhead of $15,000 has since been reduced to about $10,000.

Fanchon & Marco's New York office, which had been booking the Mosque's vaudeville, with exception of the headliner, who was placed direct, refused to deliver last week's bill for the Wednesday (15) opening when the management failed to advance 50% of the total salaries, as per agreement. House obtained practically the same line-up, however, by going to the acts and their agents direct. F&M resumes booking with the show opening today (Wednesday) on Pausin's guarantee.

El rendel filed a no-payoff complaint with the American Federation of Actors against the Mosque after headlining the theatre's second week's show at $1,500. He declared he refused to accept a 'settlement' at the end of the week, demanding full salary. AFA obtained $500 on account for Brendel Monday (20), plus the Mosque management's pledge to pay up the balance at the earliest possible date.

ALTERNATE UNITS WITH ANGER SHOWS IN CAN.

Though the first Paramount-booked shows go into Loew's, Montreal, and Shea's Hipp, Toronto, week starting Feb. 7, actual buying has not yet commenced by Charles J. Freeman and Harry Kalcheim. Booking office is waiting for Lawrence Golde of the William Morris agency and the theatres to provide it with the list of acts which have played there in the past year in order to avoid repetition.

From present indications, both Canadian theatres may alternate the productions of Harry Anger, New York producer, with independent units.

Anger, who has been staging the shows for the Famous Players-Canadian theatres for the past year, embellishes the individually-booked acts with special scenery, costumes and a line of girls.

Talk Upstate WPA Unit to Tour N. Y. At Nominal Scale

Syracuse, Jan. 21.

Organization of a vaudeville unit, with acts recruited both in Syracuse and Rochester, to tour the state with nominal admission charged, is favored by George M. Gatts, regional director of the Federal theatre project, after conferences here with WPA executives.

At the same time, Gatts gave approval to a stock company project for Syracuse, sitting in with local WPA designees as they interviewed 162 relief and non-relief players and theatre workers who have signed up for the contemplated program.

John F. Wright is the final choice for local project director, with Edward Davidson named as assistant. Edward Lynch will direct productions, Clifford Smith will be stage manager, and Earl Arnold will serve as p.a. Both Lynch and Davidson are veterans of the Frank Wilcox Co., which played five seasons at the old Wieting theatre here. Arnold has been associated with several burlesque ventures.

Opposition to the federal program, expected to get underway in 30 days, is expected by WPA officials from film exhibitors. This applies particularly to the stock company, thus far lacking a theatre. The Civic, now operated by Syracuse University is mentioned as available.

If the opposition is too stiff, it is understood that the stock company will be put on the air as a sustaining feature, presumably through WSYU, the university affiliate of WSYR (NBC).

Cameron Switching Niteries May 15

Syracuse, Jan.

'Pop' Cameron has set May 15 as the closing date for his local nightery, the Casino, formerly the Cafe Dewitt. Simultaneously he will transfer his scene of operations to Clayton, N. Y., reopening the Casino there for the summer season.

Meanwhile, Cameron will stick to straight vaudeville as an entertainment policy at his local stand, six-act bills changing weekly.

Bert Gordon Back

Bert Gordon has returned east for vaude after a year in Hollywood, where he alternated between pictures and the Eddie Cantor radio program.

With Cantor also cast, Gordon probably will continue in the air spot on a now 'n' then basis.

New NTG Unit

Nils T. Granlund, with a new unit, starts a tour of eight weeks outside of New York Friday (24) at the Norva, Norfolk, Va.

Cantor to Tour 2-a-Day Show At $2.50 Top

Eddie Cantor will take a two-a-day, $2.50 top variety show out on the road for one and two-niters commencing Feb. 15, with the William Morris office staging and booking, as in the past. Stage dates will follow bookings of the current Cantor (Goldwyn-UA) picture, 'Strike Me Pink.' Show will run two hours.

Line-up will include one or two other name acts besides Cantor, in addition to the regular Cantor-Pebeco air troupe, inclusion of which will permit out-of-town origination of the weekly Sunday night CBS broadcasts.

All dates will be on percentage. Morris office is now lining up the route.

RULE WPA PERFORMERS MUST REMAIN NON-PRO

After complaints to Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, federal theatre director for the WPA, by Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, stop was put last week to performers in WPA projects accepting outside theatrical jobs. Move was made to prevent actors on relief roles competing with performers not registered with the WPA.

Another Whitehead complaint was that WPA departmental heads were asking WPA performers to play benefits or club dates for private organizations and charitable groups gratis. Mrs. Flanagan issued orders that this practice should also be stopped.

'Jumbo' Going to Nine Show Week; Will Only Play Three Matinees

'Jumbo' is virtually going on a musical comedy basis after this week, eliminating all but three matinees weekly at the Hippodrome, New York. Sunday nights may be out, also both shows on Tuesdays because of the Texaco radio broadcasts. Afternoon performances will be played on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

A 25% salary cut accompanied the announcement to the company that the daily matinees would be dropped. Slice affected cast, chorus and all other employees except stage hands, who are protected by the union minimum. Understood that the cut will result in a dozen men going out of the Paul Whiteman band. However, under the new operating schedule 'Jumbo' is expected to stick into May.

Equity rules did not apply in the 'Jumbo' reduction of salaries, since the association has rated the attraction as not being a regular legit and out of its jurisdiction.

Change in the schedule was made because of attendance decline after the Christmas-New Year's holiday weeks and it is figured that nine times weekly is enough at 'Jumbo's' present pace. If Sunday nights are dropped, two matinees on that day will be tried.

There has been a downward revision in ticket prices and, starting last week the boxes were dropped to from $4.40 to $3.30. End sections of the lower 'grand stand' are now $2.20, those sections being the least desirable on the lower floor.

Strongest attendance for 'Jumbo' is drawn on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, capacity being registered regularly for those performances. Because of the show's juvenile draw 'Jumbo's' producer, Billy Rose, is considering another circus show for next season and Ed. Wynn is mentioned to top the cast. At that time 'Jumbo' is expected to be on tour.

Rose is still negotiating with the Ringlings on proposed touring of the Hipp. production under canvas. He claims there has been an offer from the Cole Brothers-Clyde Beatty outit, which opposed the Hagenbeck-Wallace show last season.

'Jumbo' gross for New Year's week was quoted at $88,000, but that figure is said to have included $12,500 from the radio broadcast, also concession coin. Actual gross was nearer $71,000. Current pace is around $44,000, which provides a profit.

Chicago Back

oston was the number one town for legit outside of New York last season but has apparently lost that position, Chicago reassuming the rating as the leading key city by supporting more attractions week by week during the fall and early winter.

Attention to the Hub's standing was called last week when Equity addressed a protesting letter to Boston's mayor protesting the banning of 'The Children's Hour.' It was the first time that the actors body has acted that way.

GUS BLUM, PRODUCER, 'EXPLAINS' 'VALIANT'

Editor Variety:

Quite recently the writer perpetrated a gross error. He produced a play. That, it would seem, is error enough, but he perpetrated the error of errors, "Valiant." This is not an alibi. Neither is it in the nature of an excuse. An indignant first night audience demonstrated conclusively there can be no excuse for such as this.

But perhaps the mere recital of the incidents, motives, that caused this mad folly may be of slight passing interest and reveal the mainsprings of this maddest of all undertakings—play producing. It may be something for the record. Perhaps some future Ph.D. plumbing the uncharted psychosis of misguided humans who must produce plays, will discover material for a thesis.

Why and how do plays like this come to be produced? How is it that a director-producer of 15 productions (not counting summer theatre activities) becomes involved in such a fiasco? How could his associate, an editor and a successful business man, become an accessory to the crime and condone the offense? How could one of our leading play-brokers who originally sold 'Rain,' and who represents among other notable playwrights, Eugene O'Neill, subject himself to the barter of such trash? How can the author of a best-seller write a play that invites such a ribald reception? Are these questions pertinent? (I hasten to reply for fear of a negative rejoinder.)

Among the plays produced by the undersigned, were at least five that ran on Broadway for more than 300 performances each. (See Burns Mantle's standard compendium.) He started on their successful careers, or directed early in their theatre experience, such players as Pat O'Brien, Edward Robinson, Aline MacMahon, Sylvia Sidney, Antoinette Perry, Elisha Cook, Jr., Edith Barrett, Romney Brent, etc. With a varied experience like this, why, 'Truly Valiant?'

This may be difficult for objective realization; it is perhaps too subjective a matter. But this should be known. All the 'alleged' minds implicated in the error, offered their contributions in real (if misguided) sincerity. Perhaps this is the chief indictment. The problem of the play, where each of the characters suffered innocently because of the action of the others, was regarded (foolishly, no doubt, in the light of subsequent events) as a serious situation. In Scandinavia (rights still available) or in Germany or in France or Russia, such a problem no doubt would intrigue the serious minded spectator of different temperament, but what appeared in manuscript a serious situation, became in production, comic. The audience accepted in silent judgment the first half of the play, until the 'situation' involving the father became to the realists at the premiere, merely an ugly, sordid scene, which they refused to accept. Perhaps they were right. And perhaps they were right in the method they employed. Everything thereafter was interpreted in terms of that situation. They could not take it—at least would not.

As I have already intimated, this is not an alibi. After such an experience, one might justifiably contemplate self- destruction in the usual manner, but the undersigned has decided upon the most effective, albeit painful, method—another production.

PROJECT IN DETROIT GETS $30,000 GRANT

Detroit, Jan. 21.

With a $30,000 grant, the local WPA theatre project is ready to get under way. Out of 300 applicants, a prospective company of 25 players has been selected by the committee, headed by Mrs. McKee Robison, Mrs. Arthur Taylor and Mrs. G. Allen McKaig, after several weeks of auditions at the Art Institute.

Director will be named by Thomas W. Stevens, of Chicago, in charge of this WPA district. Costumes, scenery, house staff and stage hands will be furnished by the WPA. Admission prices will be 10 and 25c, with free tickets distributed to WPA workers and families on relief. Theatre has not yet been settled on, but probably will be the Art Institute aude or one of the dark downtown houses.

Meanwhile the musicians' project is well under way, with $100,000 allotted. Director Bendetson Netzorg has organized a symphony ork and two jazz bands. Also musicians throughout the state have been assigned to teach music in schools, etc. There are 232 musicians on the relief rolls here.

John McNamee Stricken

John McNamee, Broadway ticket broker, collapsed in the Long Island station last week and was removed to his home in Woodmere, where he is reported in serious condition.

McNamee operated the original Fifth Avenue Tyson' agency with Tom Naughton, latter having withdrawn to go on his own this season. Agency moved its quarters from 42d street to Rockefeller Center last season.

Eltinge in Coast Play; Hitting Comeback Trail

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Julian Eltinge is desirous of making a stage come-back. He appeared Tuesday (14) in a new dramatic offering, 'Children of the Rich,' by W. H. Clifford, which was put on by Edward Elsner at the Little Dramatic theatre.

Understood Al Woods is trying to find a spot for him on Broadway.

Nazimova's 'Ghosts' to Road After Top Week In N. Y.; Will Return

Alla Nazimova completed more than five weeks in 'Ghosts' at the Empire and Morosco, N. Y., going to the road Saturday (18) after drawing the best weekly gross yet for the Ibsen drama either in New York or on tour. Star plans to return to the metropolis early in the spring. 'Ghosts' is rated the most successful revival this season.

Playing at $2.75 top, 'Ghosts' grossed nearly $11,000 for the wind-up week at the Morosco. Saturday matinee there were 101 standees admitted. It was estimated that around 5,000 persons seeking $1.65 tickets were turned away from the box office during the week. Because of that Mme. Nazimova plans using that as the top price in a larger theatre when she returns.

KOCH EXPLAINS URBAN PEEVE VS. WPA LEGIT

Charlotte, N. C., Jan.

Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers and regional head of the federal theatre project of WPA in the Carolinas and Virginia, is disappointed in that project to date. Red tape has 'frustrated the hopes of regional directors in their efforts to revive live entertainment on a nation-wide basis,' he says.

'It was our hope that sections of the country lacking in entertainment might have a chance to get professional talent which is concentrated in New York and California,' he said. 'We were hoping talented young actors would be sent to communities where there are no theatres. Then we hoped to send talented theatre workers into communities to start people's theatres.

'But instead federal headquarters decided we might use only unemployed theatre workers who live in the various regions. Of course that means New York, Chicago and Hollywood.'

More Leblang Squawks On Giveaway Ducats

Practice of giving away tickets to potential theatre goers was the subject of the latest complaint to managers as affecting agency trade. It appears that around 700 tickets nightly were distributed to department store clerks and telephone company employees for 'Tapestry in Gray,' which closed at the Shubert, and 'O Evening Star,' which folded at the Empire.

Matty Zimmerman of Leblang's pointed out that the, people who were 'being educated into seeing shows for nothing,' have been customers of that agency's cut rate department. In both cases the shows did not benefit by the distribution, both being flops.

WEE-LEVENTHAL SPLIT

Wee and Leventhal are now maintaining separate offices. Pair deny any complete rift, but instead, declare it's an independent partnership.

Each will operate separately on his own enterprises and combine whenever mutually agreeable.

All He Needs Is Scripts Says Mark Hellinger, Legit Producer

Mark Hellinger, author and newspaper columnist, currently doing two different syndicated series, running in the N. Y. Mirror (daily) and the N. Y. American (Sundays), has entered the Broadway legit production field. To prove that he's serious about it, he has opened offices in the Paramount Bldg.

Other than that he has ample financing (including his own), and that it is not Hollywood money, Hellinger says he has no immediate plans, meaning scripts. He's reading plenty, he says, and thinks that by next fall he should have at least one piece ready to put on, and, if he's lucky, he may have two. That, he hopes, will constitute his annual legit production schedule.

As theatrical newspaperman who has knocked around Broadway for 15 years, Hellinger states he's doing what the average show biz commentator feels he'd like to do some day—produce a play. Having the b.r., and he hopes, the necessary experience, Hellinger feels he's set. To prove which, he has turned down a Hollywood film production berth.

Although Hellinger's legit writing consisted of the librettos for the two last Florenz Ziegfeld musicals ('Follies' and 'Hot-Cha'), the newcomer-producer states he'll concentrate on straight legits. He has an idea that there's plenty of fresh playwrighting blood on Broadway which will supply him with scripts.

But, adds Hellinger, he's not 'gonna be sucker enough' to produce any of his own plays. There's a play he wrote with Georgie Jessel that Sam H. Harris has and Harris'll do that one, not Hellinger, says Hellinger.

Patience Rewarded

Leslie Adams, featured in 'A Room in Red and White,' which opened at the 46th Street, N. Y., Saturday (18), waited around for a year for the play to be produced.

He was touring in 'As Thousands Cheer' when Jed Harris sent for him. Adams immediately left the revue, saying he preferred dramatic parts to comedy skits in 'Cheer.' Harris then decided not to present 'Room' and the script finally went to Dwight D. Wiman, who is presenting it with George Kondolf.

It would have meant $15,000 in salary to Adams had be continued with 'Cheer' to the end of its long run.

MARTIN JONES TAKES OVER VANDERBILT, N.Y.

Martin , who took title to the Vanderbilt theatre, N. Y., but was forced to shift' show 'Mulatto' to the Golden, has moved the mixed cast drama back to its original berth. 'Granite,' which had a booking contract for the Vanderbilt, entered into prior to the time Jones took possession, was withdrawn Saturday (18) after a single week.

Vanderbilt's sale price was set at $300,000. Understand Jones paid $25,000 to secure title from the Drydock Savings Bank, which secured the theatre by foreclosure about a year ago. Buckwheat flour heir is expectant of landing a success for the house. 'Mulatto' has been faring mildly to date, said to have operated in the red for the past several weeks, although having an inexpensive cast.

Maine Vaude Unit

Augusta, Me., Jan. 21.

Vaudeville entertainment in the WPA relief centers located in Maine will be furnished by a group of unemployed professionals under the direction of Albert L. Hickey of Portland. Group includes 30 troupers.

Programs, in addition to being presented in Maine's WPA work camps, will also be given in CCC Camps and possibly in hospitals and State institutions.

They are now rehearsing under the direction of Hickey in Fraternity House, Portland.

'Waltz' Chi Engagement Extended for a Month

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Fred Crowe, manager of the Auditorium, is back from New York with enough additional weeks for 'The Great Waltz' to carry the Max Gordon show to Feb. 22. While booking was indeterminate from Dec. 26, minimum clause embraced 32 performances, through Jan. 18.

Two weeks had been added before Crowe left for New York, carrying it to Feb. 1.

Barriscale, Hamilton Showcase on Coast

Beverly Hills, Jan. 21.

Hale Hamilton and Bessie Barriscale top cast of 'Night on Earth,' which will be presented at the Bliss-Hayden little theatre in February.

It's a new play by Julian Lamonthe.

Moore's Balto Breakin

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

Raymond Moore will break in his forthcoming production, 'Danger—Men Working,' at the indie Auditorium here Feb. 6, with four performances in a three-day stand. Before hitting Broadway he will probably also go into Philly for a week or so, with Sam Nirdlinger's Broad St. theatre the likely house.

Past autumn Moore had a stock company here at the Maryland which spanned seven weeks.

Curtis Doing 'Postman' On Own; Hoagland Out

Legit managerial team of Jack Curtis and Carleton Hoagland has split, latter withdrawing. Curtis is going ahead with the production of 'The Postman Always Rings Twice,' now in rehearsal. Metro purchased all rights to the James Cain novel and sold dramatic rights to Curtis but declined to finance the show.

Sam H. Harris, who has Metro backing in legit production this season is, however, reported interested in 'Postman,' having posted the salary guarantee with Equity. George White was to have so acted for Curtis, but withdrew for an unexplained reason. Cain has been working on the 'Postman' script for over a year. Show was slated for Theatre Guild presentation at one time.

Curtis entered the legit managerial end last season with a 25% interest of 'Anything Goes.' With Hoagland he proposed to produce a Damon Runyon-Irving Caesar musical, 'Saratoga Chips,' but that has been indefinitely postponed. Pair were in with Howard Lindsay on 'A Slight Case of Murder,' which started okay, but slipped. They then presented 'Stick in the Mud,' which lasted eight days.

Commuters

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Percy Hammond, Gilbert Gabriel and Robert Garland were in town last week to view 'Ethan Frome' before its New York opening.

Hammond and Garland attended the Saturday matinee while Gabriel caught the show Wednesday matinee.

MACFARLANE'S ARM

Because of a broken arm, suffered at the premiere of 'I Want a Policeman,' which he was attending backstage, Bruce MacFarlane has been forced to quit rehearsals of 'Home Town Boy.'

Actor will resume in with 'Home' when his wing's healed.

Harold Hecht's Revue

Harold Hecht's untitled revue is due to go into rehearsal first week in February. William Schorr will direct.

Arthur Pearson and Charles Sherman wrote sketches. Norman Zeno and Will Irwin collabbed on score. Ernest Truex, Jr., is set for the lead.

'Living Newspaper,' 1st WPA Show In N. Y., Postponed; Rice Explains Delays, Answers Sundry Charges

First of the Works Progress Administration theatre project units, the 'living newspaper,' dated to open today (22) at the Biltmore, New York, is off for at least one week. Delay in getting lighting apparatus and other stage accessories is the given cause and blamed on the Procurement Bureau at WPA headquarters.

That is merely one of the series of headaches Elmer Rice, regional director, is having in attempting to get the units actually functioning. Early this week Rice said that he was informed the 'newspaper' would 'positively' open Jan. 29 and that the managers' try-out theatres and the Negro theatre would open the week of Feb. 3. Rice also said there had been some withdrawals from the various casts by players securing better jobs. He is inclined to favor such moves, but explained it is generally the leads who step out, making it necessary to ready two casts for the proposed plays.

Director sought to speed up the 'newspaper' opening by lendin lights, lamps and props, which he has stored in the Belasco theatre. Stage hands, however, took the position that such accessories could only be handled under union rules, which call for $30 per load, rate charged for transfer trucks because the Belasco is a professionally operated theatre. Rice stated he did not blame the union in the stand taken, but added that there would be no difficulty in trucking materials from one WPA house to another by people on the project's payrolls. Also that once the theatres are equipped future plays would not be hampered.

Requisitions

All materials must be requisitioned. Although there is a rule that materials not costing more than $300 may be purchased without competitive bidding, requisitions must go through the usual procedure and the bureau cannot be speeded. In the meantime all professionals rehearsing are getting regular pay allotments. Rice was disappointed because, when he produced shows, he never postponed an opening once it was advertised.

There appears to be plenty of money remaining for the federal theatre project. New York has spent about $750,000 out of its $3,000,000 roll, mostly on wages. Some weeks ago Rice mentioned the possibility of getting another $1,000,000 for the project in New York and he believes there would be no trouble getting such an additional allotment if needed.

When the various show units for which admission will be charged are functioning, there will be a certain number of tickets set aside for the use of persons unable to afford them. Planned to have from 10% to 20% held out for such purpose. Likely that persons exhibiting home relief cards at the box office will be admitted free of charge.

Statement

In a statement addressed to 'all workers on the federal theatre project,' in reference to 'certain misunderstandings which apparently exist,' Ice said, 'I am a firm believer in collective bargaining and the right of workers to organize. These principles will be applied to the operation of the federal theatre project insofar as I have jurisdiction and power. . . . I am not authorized to run the project as a closed shop,' but 'this is a professional project and only those who have the proper professional qualifications are entitled to jobs.'

Statement explained the purpose of the re-classification board, that of checking on qualifications of the various workers on the payrolls. Also explained that the board's function is merely advisory and it has no power to place anyone on the payroll and have anyone transferred, although its recommendations would receive 'every consideration from me.'

Answering the reported charges of discrimination the statement proceeded:

'No Favoritism'

'It would seem hardly necessary for me to state that I am militantly opposed to any kind of favoritism on the project. In view of certain groundless charges which have been made, however, I want to state explicitly that, as far as I am concerned, all workers are entitled to the same consideration and treatment and that there is no discrimination in favor of or against anyone because of race, creed, color, nationality or political opinion. Numerous charges of discrimination have already been investigated by me, and so far one has been shown to have any foundation in fact. If actual discrimination does exist anywhere on the project, I shall be only too glad to have it called to my attention.

'I want to remind you again of the difficulties under which we are operating. In the face of almost incredible obstacles, we have succeeded in getting nearly 4,000 people on our payroll in the space of two months. The job of organizing the various projects and putting everybody to work has not been an easy one. Consequently, I think it is only reasonable to ask every worker on the project to meet us at least half way and to make an honest attempt to adjust himself to the conditions under which the project has to operate.'

Blocki-Howard Play

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Fritz Blocki, playwright and p.a., is in New York this week on confabs with Willie Howard on their collab play, 'House of Chance.'

It will mark Howard's debut as a playwright. He won't be in the show, however, due to his current 'Scandals' job.

THREE SHOWS OUT

At least three shows are on the list to leave Broadway and one or more in addition may bow out this week-end. 'Hell reezes Over' stopped at the Ritz last Saturday after three weeks plus one night. Was cut-rated.

'HELL FREEZES OVER'

Opened Dec. 28, 1935. 'Hell Freezes Over' didn't melt the hearts of the top flight playwrights. Brown (Post) said it 'went resolutely through its unpleasant paces,' while Lockridge (Sun) claimed 'the efforts of the actors, as well as those of the author, left me unpursuaded.'

Variety (Ibee) said its engagement would be 'limited.'

'Granite,' which opened at the Vanderbilt last week, was withdrawn Saturday, after drawing thumbs down from the reviewers.

'GRANITE'

Opened Jan. 13, 1936. Was first produced by the American Laboratory Theatre about 20 years ago. Didn't hold much weight with the first-stringers. Pans were general. Hammond (Tribune) said, 'I cannot advise you to go see it.'

Variety (Ibee) sai , 'It stands no chance.'

'Porgy and Bess' will finally depart from the Alvin, Show was announced to close last Saturday, but attendance picked up and it was decided to remain open instead of laying off, as originally intended Engagement is for 16 weeks.

'Unmarried Mother,' lorence Edna May, first production of the American Theatre Group.

Plays Out of Town

CALL IT A DAY

Washington, Jan. 21.

Comedy in three acts (nine scenes) by Dodie Smith; presented by Theatre Guild in association with Lee Ephraim; featuring Philip Merrivale and Gladys Cooper; directed by Tyrone Guthrie; settings by Lee Simonson; produced at National theatre, Wash., D. C., Jan. 20, '36.

Dorothy Hilton	Gladys Cooper
Roger Hilton	Philip Merivale
Vera	Valerie Coesart
Ann Hilton	Jeanne Dante
Martin Hilton	John Buckmaster
Catherine Hilton	Florence Williams
Cook	Florence Edney
Mrs. Wilson	Lillian Brennard Tonge
Paul Francis	Glen Anders
Ethel Francis	Frances Williams
Muriel Weston	Viola Roache
Frank Haines	Lawrence Grossmith
Elsie Lester	Esther Mitchell
Beatrice Gwynne	Claudia Morgan
Alistair Brown	William Tacker
Joan Collett	Mary Mason

'Call It a Day' is one of those light, satisfying, true-to-life comedies that leaves its characters precisely where it found them. It proves nothing and makes no attempt to. Its sole aim is entertainment. And, because it is presented by a gilt-edged cast, it succeeds perfectly.

It is filled with action, yet nothing ever really happens. Its situations are built up and carried along by lines that are both clever and human. Its real charm lies in its characters and what they think, what they feel and what they want to do, rather than what they actually do. In fact, under a cold, matter-of-fact appraisal—which is impossible while the curtain is up—they wind up having done nothing.

The plot, although utterly devoid of serious complications, is as intricate as a piece of lace. It is a master stroke not of tying loose ends together, but of catching them up and leaving them in an orderly pattern. Each scene, except the first and last, is almost a complete playlet in itself, revolving about its own central character and gaining added interest through what has gone before and what is to come.

Curtain rises on the master bedroom of the Hilton household in London. Roger Hilton, a successful accountant, and Dorothy Hilton, his mature but attractive wife, are asleep in twin beds. A maid enters to serve tea.

Whole action takes place between the time the household arose and the time it retires. Half the key characters have never met, yet each has touched the other and each has fitted into the pattern perfectly.

The lines, which never drag, frequently evoke applause above the steady hum of chuckles. Their humor, like the humor injected by the players, derives its effectiveness from naturalness, both in subject and manner.

Philip Merivale as Roger; Gladys Cooper as Dorothy; Jeanne Dante as Ann; Glenn Anders as Artist Paul, and Florence Williams as Catherine stand out in the cast which includes not a single inadequate performer.

Sets, of which there are eight, are all complete and striking. Although the changes are accomplished quickly, their number slows the production, especially since the play is a good two-and-a-half hours in length.

Judging from the audience restlessness at the opening performance, it will have to be speeded up, if not in the staging then by slicing lines, a job which, because they are atmospheric and not essential to the action, should be simple. Craig.

THREE WISE FOOLS

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Comedy in three acts by Austin Strong. Stars William Gillette. Revived by John Golden at the Chesnut, Philadelphia, Jan. 20, '36.

Cast: William Gillette, James Kirkwood, Charles Coburn, Elizabeth Love, Isabel Irving, Brandon Tynan, William Post, Jr., John Blair, Sydney Booth, Scott Moore, Edmon Ryan, John McKee, Robert Burton.

A dozen curtain calls at the conclusion of 'Three Wise Fools' last night at the Chesnut indicates the audience pull of William Gillette's return to the theatre. Unquestionably the Philadelphia forum audience which bought out the opening was swayed by its sentimental regard for the star and by the color of the event, but it also paid genuine tribute to the deft, graceful veteran, who put a lot of substance and humor into the creaky Austin Strong comedy.

Role is a happier choice from the physical standpoint than Gillette's last appearance in 'Sherlock Holmes.' It makes no great demands for action and, in consequence, the star looks much younger and much more nimble than he did. Owing to the illness of Mary Rogers, Elizabeth Love went into the cast at the last minute here in the ingenue lead. A Philadelphia favorite, she took second honors in the cast, showing no discernable traces of her quick substitution in the part. Charles Coburn as the doctor and James Kirkwood as the judge add their stage love to Gillette's as the other two 'Wise Fools,' the three veterans giving a pretty demonstration of shrewd comedy characterization.

William Post, Jr., as the juvenile holds his own against the veteran competish and Brandon Tynan, Isabel Irving and John Blair are other names in the cast which evoke pleasant memories among the oldsters in the audience.

Play, of course, is 1918 vintage. It has a gentle sentimentality not much in vogue today and, when the plot gets into a jam, it has plenty of naive melodrama devices to get the curtain down. Excuse for its revival is that it offers its 80-year-old star a good vehicle. And that will be enough excuse for a good tour, though it will probably fall into the 'Special Engagement' class on Broadway. Waters.

Light Behind the Shadow

Baltimore, Jan. 20.

Drama in three acts presented by Ed Wynn at Ford's, Baltimore; adapted by Jose Rubens from Hungarian by Dezso Szomory. Mady Christians, Russell Hardie, Albert Van Dekker and Lee Baker featured; stage by Ed Wynn; $2.20 top.

Kitty Helvet	Lucille Meredith
Stephan	George Morgan
Max Durak	Lloyd Gough
Professor Golts	Leo Curley
Karl Markovitz	Russell Hardie
Alice Takats	Mady Christians
Ludwig	Emmett Rogers
A patient	Frank Jones
Fritz	G. Andrews
Homer Horeb	Percy Ames
Zsand Takats	Alfred Kappeler
A patient	Al Baron
Mrs. Markovi	Kate Mayhew
George Kross	Albert Van Dekker
Professor Gross	Lee Baker
Mrs. Baney	Edna West
Mrs. Gantz	Marjorie Wood
Mrs. Dubra	Florence Auer

Appears that Ed Wynn, in the first production he ever presented without self representation in the cast, has picked a winner. Doesn't look earmarked as a smash, but a tidy run on Broadway suggests itself.

Advance reports were that the play concerned 'mercy killings,' which recently claimed squires of page one publicity. On examination, the play turns out to contain such a deed, but does not pro and con to any extent on the moral interpretation of it. Rather, the killing motivates and colors the subsequent life of the two principals.

A femme m, d. gives a patient in a private hospital an overdose of morphia to end his pain, the patient being a friend and sobbing for such a release from misery. Girl's guilt is never discovered because the young doctor in the institution is the first to find out and he shoulders the blame. He is sentenced to 10 years, with the courts disbelieving the girl's self-accusation because the lad had thought to plant some evidence that irrefutably establishes himself as the guilty one. Pair are in love, of course.

In two years the nurse has made herself quite a rep as assistant to a famed medico in Vienna, having migrated from Berlin, the first scene locale. She supports the impoverished mother of the boy in jail, stuffing her with tales of the son's chemical lab job in South America.

In love with her is the son of her employer, and she is his mistress. It is established that she is not in love with him but goes to him out of loneliness. And on an action-jammed evening (which serves as the second act) the lover and his father learn that the girl is with child, while the girl learns that the boy who took her rap has been pardoned and is in Vienna.

The lover wants to marry her, and the jail-freed rival also, when he learns the facts. Girl is in a vortex, but the ending is satisfactory enough, despite the probability is seeded by stretches of impassioned talk. Denouement is pretty logical.

Strong angle and certain to win comment is the intellectual point-of-view held towards almost everything by the characters, it is not fancily tricked out with pseudo-sophistication, but frank and natural. Construction of the play is excellent, and a bulky factor in giving the play merit. Suspense is strong from the first curtain.

Miss Christians has not had a successful show on Broadway, though the flops she appeared in were all brightened by her trouping; she looks to be in with this effort, and deservedly. She and the rest of the cast are spiritually and physically apt embodiments of the characters. Among those sure to be acclaimed is 82-year-old Kate Mayhew, who is grand as the mother of the rap-taking young medico man (Hardie). Albert Van Dekker is the lover; Lee Baker his father.

There are four scenes, good ones, designed by the vet, Raymond Sovey. Play isn't such that it would serve as fodder for a film; it would have to be almost completely altered or the Hay. office would brand it. Scharpe.

NAME YOUR POISON

Comedy in three acts (four scenes) by Herbert C. Lewis and Louis Weitzenkorn. Stars Lenore Ulric. Presented by H. H. Woods, Ltd., at the Shubert, Newark, Jan. 20, '36.

Pellegrino	George Tobias
Pat	F. J. Kelly
Scopulo	Walter Armin
Tonts	Horace MacMahon
Mary	Lenore Ulric
Louie	rank McCormick
Jonas	George Leach
Muna	Jeanne Kelly
Mike Malloy	Percy Kilbride

This play is hard to classify. Maybe it is a mere display of sordidness, but certainly it is no vehicle for Miss Ulric, who plays what is only a minor role.

Entire action takes place in an unlicensed and nondescript bar off Times Square. To it comes a bum, completely down and out. Great deal of fun is had with him when he asks to use the washroom and the proprietor and his friends prevent him going. For those who like this sort of thing the details must be enjoyable, since they are quite realistic; fastidious customers will certainly rebel.

Bum is finally allowed to stay the night, and his hosts decide to insure him and collect the insurance on him. Mary (Miss Ulric), discarded mistress of Pellegrino, one of the gang, joins in the plot. But it is decided they must be sure of the bum's death. As they have considerable wood alcohol disguised as whiskey, they decide to give the bum plenty of good whiskey and then let him drink himself to death on the alky. This they attempt, but the bum drinks the poison and thrives on it.

Muna, a country girl, shows up with a man, and Pellegrino offers her his apartments, which she accepts. As the gang is disappointed by the bum's vitality, they plan to hasten his end by running a taxi over him and then leaving him on a bench covered with snow. Muna comes back, having learned that Pellegrino is an undertaker, and is horror-stricken. After a quarrel, Pellegrino kicks her into the street, with a warning to leave town.

After carrying out their plot against the bum they sit waiting for news from the police or hospital, too nervous even to drink. Mary, who is mostly sodden with drink, has imbibed some wood alcohol and now raves in a stupor while she finds herself blinded. At last there is a knock at the door and the bum returns, not at all badly hurt. He is unsuspicious and still loyal to his supposed friends. Muna bursts in with some police and has everyone arrested except the bum and Mary. Mary is in a stupor and apparently will die.

Play shows several defects in construction, which will doubtless be ironed out.

Miss Ulric looks the drunken girl, but gets little chance to do anything else. For nearly a whole scene she is in a stupor, with her head on a table. Center of the play's attraction (if any) is Percy Kilbride's work as the bum. He has the character he is portraying down to the last eyelash. Other men seem not real. Jeanne Kelly in the small part of Muna is vital and real. Austin.

JULIE THE GREAT

Washington, Jan. 15.

Drama in three acts (nine scenes) by John Taintor Foote, based on his story 'Julie;' staged by Worthington Miner; settings by Arne Lundborg; music arranged by Alexander Haas; produced by Alex Yokel at the National theatre, Washington, Jan. 14, '36.

Doris Franklin	Louise Campbell
Jim Burke	Damon O'Flynn
Charlie	Charles Mather
Rollo Lockhart	Nicholas Joy
Professor Bailey	Morgan Farley
Julia Madden	Beth Merrill
Miss Drood	Edith Gresham
Mary Lou Gregg	Mary Orr
Mrs. Gregg	Kathleen Comegys
Dave Worth	James Shelburne
Emily Grubb	Maud Richmond
Sid Paul	Louis Polan
Mrs. Daly	Eda Heineman
Gerald Lane	Hal Conklin
Sam Markowitz	Irving Stiefel
Johnny	Harry Gresham

Alex Yokel has another horse, but he hasn't got any three men on it. In other words, 'Julie the Great' is an idea, but not a play, or not a good play. After a week here, it was withdrawn for revision.

Sifting all the criticism, the answer is that the piece lacks lines. Author John Taintor Foote's story is just as interesting behind the footlights as it was in print. His situations, if sometimes melodramatic, still keep up suspense. But when a tale that could be told in 15 minutes is stretched out to two hours, it's got to be dressed up, and 'Julie' isn't. It's straight narrative, padded with much that is trite, much that is stiff and much that is

2 CHI HOUSES FOR FEB. 1 WPA ACTING

Chicago, Jan. 21.

About Feb. 1 is the time now announced by Thomas Wood Stevens, regional director for the belated start of WPA legit shows here. Stevens, director for five years of the semi-professional Goodman Memorial Theatre, says he has two theatres ready—the Great Northern and the Star and Garter.

Stevens is undecided as to the opening plays, explaining that choice for the Great Northern lies among 'Model Tenement' by Mayor Levin, of Chicago; 'Enemy of the people,' or Ibsen revival; and 'Servant to Two Masters,' an Italian classic by Goldoni.

Opener for the Star and Garter, with Harry Minturn directing, will be Hoyt's 'Texas Steer,' dated 1890; Herne's 'Shore-Acres, 1894, or Gillette's 'Secret Service,' 1895.

Colored actors will form a unit for 'Everyman' (which will be given with interpolated spirituals!) under Robert Dunmore, who learned about drama in a class at Northwestern University.

Loop Legit List Ups to Quintet; 'Waltz' Zooms to $29,500; 'Goes' 19G

Chicago, Jan. 21.

After a short slump the current legit season is again picking up speed, with the hold-over theatres building their grosses while two new entries add their support towards general rehabilitation. New ones, which opened last night (Monday) are the second company of 'Boy Meets Girl' at the Selwyn and 'Ghosts' at the Erlanger. Latter is the second item on the American Theatre Society subscription list.

'Boy Meets Girl' shows indications of clicking here, despite the fact that Hollywood stories have not been good in this town. Even 'Once in a Lifetime' never got started locally.

Notice is posted on 'Anything Goes.' Cast, with exception of two minor people, has agreed to take a 25% cut if Vinton Freedley will keep show rolling. Underreported terms of agreement Freedley will continue the show as long as it does $18,000 or better and will pay full salaries if the show hits $20,000. Show is closing here next Saturday (25), will hit Detroit and then float back to New York in easy stages.

Perking nicely last week were 'Great Waltz,' which boosted itself some three grand above the previous session and 'Personal Appearance,' which is rapidly gaining strength on word-of-mouth.

Following 'Ghosts' at the Erlanger will be 'Taming of the Shrew,' with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, on Feb. 3. Will stick four weeks and will be followed on March 2 with the premiere of the new Lunt-Fontanne show 'Idiot's Delight' by Robert Sherwood.

Estimates for Last Week

'Anything Goes,' Grand (1,200; $3.30) (5th, last week). Musical had a tough up and down time of it since opening. Music too well-known for regular legit-goers. Around $19,000 last week. Detroit next.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Selwyn (1,000; $2.75) (1st week). Opened Sunday night (19) to strong play at $3.30 top. Advance good.

'Great Waltz,' Auditorium (3,700; $2.75) (4th week). Mammoth production will stick into Feb. on present pace. Lifted cleanly last week to fine $29,500.

'Ghosts,' Erlanger (1,200; $2.75) (1st week). Second show on local American Theatre Society season opened last night (Monday) for a two-week stay.

'Personal Appearance,' Harris (1,000; $2.75) (5th week). Perked to fine $10,000. Showing strength.

'LETTY'S' 4 WKS. IN HOLLYWOOD, $46,000

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Charlotte Greenwood's 'Leaning on Letty' ('Post Road') already has taken about $46,000 out of Hollywood. On the fourth week piece got approximately $10,000 at the El Capitan. Looks set for three more.

Coast production of 'Petrified Forest' is skeded to follow, with Al Woods' touring production of 'Night of January 16' next in line. Conrad Nagel tops the cast of 'Forest,' which opens its Coast tour in San Fancisco.

Salt Lake Community Theatre Incorporated

Salt Lake City, Jan. 21.

Salt Lake City Community Theatre group incorporated Thursday (16) and following election of officers announced that 'The Last Mile' would be its first production.

Robert Guggenheim, Jr., nephew of the mining man and fin ncier, is new presy. Louis Marcus, former Salt Lake mayor and intermountain theatre operator, was named on the board of director.

Young Guggenheim will portray the Major of 'Major Prose Amateur Hour' at the annual Beaux Arts ball, Feb. 1.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 21.

Convinced that Salt Lakers are theatre-minded, Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatic fraternity, has decided to produce four shows here.

First, 'Marco Millions,' by Eugene O'Neill, is slated for Friday (24). Subsequent dramas scheduled are 'The Double Door,' Feb. 14; 'Winterset,' March 6, and 'Post Road,' March 28.

All will be shown at Kingsbury Hall on the college campus. Season tickets selling at $2.

'MEN' $10,500, HUB

Only Show in Boston its 11th Week

Boston, Jan. 21.

'Three Men on a Horse' soloed last week in a town ridden with conventions. Shoe men, ice cream chiefs, and big bottlers, helped swell the take of this track comedy in its 11th frame at the Plymouth.

Mary Young goes into her own production of 'Ceiling Zero' at the Copley this week, fourth frame. The Lunts opened Monday (20) at the Colonial in 'Shrew' for two stanzas. Cornelia Otis Skinner opened up a one-week stand at the Shubert the same night. Walter Hampden is slated to follow with 'Cyrano.'

Estimates for Last Week

'Three Men on a Horse' (Plymouth, $2.75; 11th week). Hypoed by convention trade and unopposed by major productions this long-runner drew around $10,500.

'ROAD' $22,200 PITT RECORD

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

'Tobacco Road' at the Nixon last week was the biggest show of its kind ever to hit town. Playing at $2 top, gross soared to better than $22,200 in eight performances, which is a couple of grand better than absolute house capacity.

Management pulled out the orchestra pit and stuck in 70 chairs, all of them filled at every performance at the prevailing top. In addition, boxes went clean straight through, a phenomenon for this city, and there were standees at every performance. Even the announcement of a second week on Thursday (16), together with the worst snowstorm of the season that night, didn't have any effect, with the 2,100-seat-theatre going clean.

Advance for the second week, which got under way last night (20), indicates another close-to-capacity session. Next week is also being held open temporarily by both house and show, but if 'Road' pulls out Saturday there's a possibility that 'Ziegfeld Follies' may follow right in. Shuberts are said to be figuring on another week out, which would push the Broadway opening back.

After that, Cornelia Otis Skinner comes in for a full week, beginning Feb. 3; 'Porgy and Bess,' Feb. 10; with Hampden's 'Cyrano de Bergerac' slated for another return engagement Feb. 17.

Estimate for Last Week

'Tobacco Road' (Nixon; 2,100; $2.28). Town hasn't seen anything like it since 'Strange Interlude.' Smashing all records at this top, with around $22,200 on opening week. That's a couple grand above capacity, overflow representing 70 extra seats in orchestra pit in addition to a flock of standees. Holds over and may stay a third week.

'Julie' $3,400, D. C.

Washington, Jan. 21.

'Julie the Great,' which got an opening tryout here for Alex Yokel last week slipped away to nothing towards the end of the week and folded Saturday (18) with a pathetic approximate $3,400 for the seven days.

National, Capital's only legit spot, is now in throes of another opening, the Theatre Guild's 'Call It a Day.' Advance sale is heavy and it looks like a bi week.

Omaha's Feast

Omaha, Jan. 21.

Omaha Drama League is bringing in the most prolific season of drama town has had in a decade.

Season began with the Katharine Cornell comp ny, continued with Walter Huston's 'Dodsworth' and goes on currently with 'Three Men On a Horse' and 'The Old Maid,' former for a two-night stand and 'Maid' for a mat and night.

'Odyssey,' by Dan Totheroh, to be staged by Julius Evans and his wife, for Joan Hathaw for - bert Ingalls, Jr.

'Fresh Paint,' comedy, uncan Ross and Edmund Dorsey, being readied by Jack L. Hart, RK official turned producer.

Legit Giveaways Now

San Francisco, Jan. 21.

Give-away fever is contagious, it seems.

First local legit theatre known to fall for it is the Geary. In connection with 'Night of January 16,' current, house announced that every baby born Jan. 16 will receive a $5 bank account and parents of the infant will receive six ducats good at any performance.

'FOLLIES' $20,000 'ETHAN' 10G PHILLY

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

rom an average of four legit houses open at a time here during the fall, town has now dropped to two, with no indication of more future activity than that, although a more or less steady flow of bookings is indicated for the next few weeks.

Last week it was the Forrest and Garrick that were lighted; this week the latter house has an amateur offering and the Chestnut reopens with William Gillette's revival of 'Three Wise Fools.' Last night and tonight are assured of capacity, having been taken over by the Philadelphia Forum. Sale for rest of the week is good, though not capacity.

Bookings officially set are George Cohan's 'Dear Old Darling' at the Garrick next Monday; 'Porgy and Bess' at the Forrest on the same evening, and Walter Hampden's 'Cyrano' at the Garrick on February 10.

'Follies' got generally okay notices at the Forrest last week and reported $20,000 on its seven-performance week (opened Tuesday). Should beat that substantially this week. Max Gordon's 'Ethan Frome' got a very sweet $10,500 at $2 top at the Garrick.

Estimates for Last Week

'Follies' (Forrest, 1st week). Opened Tuesday. Okay $20,000 in seven shows. 'Porgy and Bess' in next Monday for two weeks on ATS subscription.

'Ethan Frome' (Garrick, 2d week). Very fine record for tryout; $10,500 in second week at $2 top meant plenty. 'Fortune Teller,' by amateur local group this week.

Bad Weather Fails to Affect Hits On B'way; 'Victoria' Up to $23,500

New York was inundated with rain last week, but that made little or no difference so far as the hits were concerned. Early this week business was distinctly affected because of traffic conditions following Sunday's sleet and snow storm, which blanketed the city with ice. It would have been worse had the blizzard gone on a week-day, so Broadway figured it got a break.

Five top shows maintained their pace and position of the week previous, with 'Victoria Regina' even better at $23,500; 'Boy Meets Girl, $19,500; 'First Lady,' $19,000; 'Dead End,' $17,500 and 'Pride and Prejudice,' $16,000.

Straight show successes may be added to by 'R sset Mantle,' which came in late last week at the Masque. It drew a good press and business thereafter was reported excellent.

Other arrivals look doubtful. 'A Room in Red and White,' 46th Street, opened Saturday, a weak press affecting its chances; 'I Want a Policeman' has about the same status, while 'Granite' opened and closed at the Vanderbilt.

Musicals have not been standouts this season. 'Jubilee' rates number one with $30,000. While 'Jumbo' bettered $40,000, it is considerably under the expected pace and operating cost has been reduced by means of salary cuts. 'At Home Abroad,' which moved from the Winter Garden to the Majestic, has revised its ticket scale.

'Scandals' moved up to around $28,000 and should make a stay of it. Fresh musical leader (excepting 'Jumbo') will probably be the new 'Follies,' which opens at the Garden next week. Also due then are 'Call It a Day,' Morosco; 'Lady Precious Stream,' Booth; 'Name Your Poison' and 'The Sap Runs High,' houses to be named.

'Porgy and Bess' held over this week but goes out Saturday. 'Hell Freezes Over' stopped at the Ritz last Saturday.

Estimates for Last Week

'A Room in Red and White,' 46th St. (1st week) (D-1,375-$3.30). Opened Saturday (18), drawing divided opinion; better line on chances this week.

'At Home Abroad,' Majestic (19th week) (R-1,776-$3.30 top). Moved here from Winter Garden Monday; expected to stay into spring; estimated around $25,000 last week.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Cort (9th week) (C-1,059-$3.85). Comedy smash holds to capacity all performances and at new scale weekly gross approximates $19,500.

'Children's Hour,' Elliot (62nd week) (D-957-$3.30). Picked up last week until bad weather somewhat affected Saturday attendance; however over $8,000; good money in house.

'Dead End,' Belasco (13th week) (D-1,000-$3.30). Some scale lifting added $1,000 to capacity and for last two weeks dramatic standout has gotten around $17,500.

'First Lady,' Music Box (9th week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Advance sale stronger now than previously and comedy looks set into warm weather; around $19,000, virtual capacity.

'Ethan Frome,' National (1st week) (D-1,164-$3.30). Presented by Max Gordon; dramatized by Owen and Donald Davis and Lowell Barrington from Edith Wharton novel; highly touted; opened last night.

'Granite,' Vanderbilt. Yanked Saturday after playing one week.

'Hell Freezes Over,' Ritz. Withdrawn Saturday after laying three weeks and one night.

'I Want a Policeman,' Lyceum (2nd week) (D-957-$3.30). Drew mixed notices after mid-week premiere; business picked up by Saturday, however; better line this week.

'Illustrator's Show,' 48th Street (R-969-$3.30). Presented by Tom Weatherly; revue culled from privatc performance of New York artists which was raided by cops; opens tonight (22).

'Jubilee,' Imperial (15th week) (M-1,468-$4.40). Continues as musical standout with excellent attendance, although not capacity, around $30,000.

'Jumbo,' Hippodrome (10th week) (M-4,327-$4.40). Night attendance markedly off since New Ycar's excellent afternoon business at week-ends; around $43,000.

'Libel,' Henry Miller (6th week) (D-944-$3.30). Has steadily climbed and looks set into spring; English courtroom drama nearly $10,500 last week.

'May Wine,' St. James (8th week) (M-1,520-$3.85). After doubtful start operetta without chorus appears fixed through winter at moderate money; $12,500.

'Mid-West,' Booth (3rd week) (D-704-$3.30). Not getting much coln and slated to slide out this week; about $3,500; 'Lady Precious Stream' to follow into house next week.

'Mulatto,' Vanderbilt (14th week) (D-804-$2.75). Moved back here from Golden Monday; getting real little money; estimated under $2,500.

'Night of Jan. 16,' Ambassador (19th week) (D-1,156-$2.75). First courtroom play of season continues to fare well, with weekly pace around $10,000.

'One Good Year,' Fulton (9th week) (C-913-$3.30). Not getting real coin but claimed bettering an even break at around $4,500; laugh show has cut rate support.

'Parnell,' Barrymore (11th week) (D-1,096-$3.30). Has done fairly well but slated to leave after another week; takings topped $9,000 last week.

'Paradise Lost,' Longacre (7th week) (D-1,019-$3.30). Also listed out after another week; business disappointing, with takings around $6,000, latest announcement play will stick.

'Porgy and Bess,' Alvin (16th week) (M-1,355-$3.30). Was to have layed off this week; continued because of good business when final week announced; goes to road after Saturday; bettered $20,000.

'Pride and Prejudice,' Plymouth (12th week) (D-1,046-$3.30). Especially strong at matinees; some cast changes, but slated into spring; around $15,000 and among the dramatic leaders.

'Russet Mantle,' Masque (2nd week) (C-900-$3.30). Opened late last week and drew favorable press; capacity by Saturday was claimed; best chance among last week's arrivals.

'Scandals,' New Amsterdam (5th week) (R-1,717-$4.40). Revue doing well and should click, with few musicals in town; estimated pace $29,000.

'The Puritan,' Belmont (1st week) (D-500-$3.30). Presented by Chester Erskin; adapted by same from Llan O'Flaherty's novel; opens Thursday (23).

'Three Men on a Horse,' Playhouse (52nd week) (C-889-$3.30). Making money here and on tour, three companies being out; paced over $11,000; completes year's run this week; mid-western company got $18,000 in one nighters last week.

'Tobacco Road,' Forrest (112th week) (C-1,017-$1.65). Run leader still getting profitable support and may last out third season; around $8,500 last week.

'Victoria Regina,' Broadhurst (5th week) (CD-1,118-$3.30). Gross leader with Helen Hayes should run out the season; last week more standees; nearly $23,500.

'Winterset,' Beck (18th week) (D-1,214-$3.30). Will probably be succeeded by 'Saint Joan,' now in rehearsal; has made a good showing with average over $10,000 weekly.

Other Attractions

'Let Freedom Ring,' Civic Rep theatre. Propaganda play on 14th street.

Ruth Draper; Booth. A series of Sunday night appearances.

GEORGE M'S 'DARLING' GOOD $10,000, DETROIT

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Gaining momentum after merely fair sessions in Pittsburgh and Cleveland, George M. Cohan's 'Dear Old Darling' picked up around $10,000, good for eight performances last week at the Cass here. Play was well-liked and given good exploitation, but the cheaper seats were generally unfilled throughout the six days.

Current show is 'Personal Appearance,' which opened well Sunday eve (19) at $2.20 top. Show stays for a week, followed by 'Anything Goes' during the week of Jan. 27. Theatre Guild's 'Porgy and Bess' may come in Feb. 10 prior to Chicago opening. The Wilson, other local legit, is still dark and with no signs of life.

Estimate for Last Week

'Dear Old Darling' (Cass; 1,400; $2.75). Behind good exploitation, Cohan show gathered a good $10,000 for eight performanccs last week. Real Cohan fans gobbled up th high-priced seats but general public, which usually goes in the cheaper brackets, passed up the low-price chairs. Current show is 'Personal Appearance' which opened Sunday (19) for a week at $2.20 top.

'Boy' $8,000, Cincy

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

En route to Chicago, the No. 2 'Boy Meets Girl' got approximately $8,000 on last week's engagement at the Cox. Theatre will recess for several weeks.

Booking of 'Three Men on a Horse,' penciled in and rubbed out several times, has definitely been set for the week of March 15.

Plays on Broadway

RUSSET MANTLE

Comedy drama in three acts by Lynn Riggs; presented by Jerome Mayer and Murray Jay Queen at Masque, N. Y., Jan. 16, '36; staged by Alexander Dean; sets, Donald Oenslager; $3.30 top.

Horace Kincaid.....Jay Fassett
Pablo.....Harry Bellaver
Susanna Kincaid.....Evelyn Varden
Effie Rowley.....Margaret Douglass
Manuelita.....Helen Craig
Kay Rowley.....Martha Sleeper
Scout.....James Lawrence
John Gait.....John Beal
Mrs. Fawcett.....Claire Woodbury
Salvador.....Chief Bear
Dr. Brown.....rederick Barton

Lynn Riggs, author of this play, is one of the more intelligent and honest workers of the theatre. He's been at playwriting for a long time, his nearest thing to success being 'Green Grow the Lilacs,' which the Theatre Guild produced. He'll eclipse that now, easily, with this piece. It's his fullest, maturest play; a really worthwhile effort and a likely candidate to fame, if not necessarily profits. Chances are that, from a strictly b.o. standpoint, it will eke out a moderate run, but that talk of it, and about it, will linger longer.

In writing this play, Riggs undertook to delve into the problem of the younger generation as opposed to the older. Not very novel that, but as tackled, honestly, it makes intriguing theatre.

'Mantle' sets up first a contented elderly couple. Horace Kinkaid has made and lost a lot of money in Wall street. His wife, Susanna, has had her day, too. Now they're living in a genteel way in Santa Fe, making believe they're poor; he, pottering around with fruit trees; she, raising chickens. They're both happy with their unhappiness; both make-believe; both hiding from their real emotions and native desires.

As opposed to them are the two youngsters. Kay is a wild young thing, offspring of wealthy but careless parents; rich and spoiled; repressed and showing off by a constant stream of meaningless affairs with men. And John Galt is a poet, erupting at specified periods against the unfairness of life and its maneuverings; bitter against the world that affords him no shelter or corner; constantly in search of whatever truth there is.

Kay and her mother are visiting the Kinkaids. John comes seeking, and gets, a job tending the chickens. They fall in love, despite all the admonitions of the elders. When Kay finds herself about to become a mother, there is an eruption. The youngsters decide to brave the world and go on into it, hand in hand. The elders would like to give them their blessing, but can't; their habit of life is too strong in them; they can but repeat the platitudes they have learned; and these are censure.

All of which could very easily have been mighty boring or mighty dramatic, or both. But, fortunately, Riggs has a splendid sense of humor. He laughs at it all. The play is resplendent with really fine dialog and beautiful character drawings.

Play's greatest weakness is that Riggs fails pretty badly to get away with the character of the boy. Reason is obvious. The boy is supposed to be the dramatist himself. He sees all the other characters clearly and can laugh at and with them. But when he portrays a poet, quite obviously of his own age and sensitivity, he goes berserk; he feeds the character lectures instead of speeches; he turns him into a preacher rather than what he is—a simple poet.

Possibly were the part handled more thoroughly than John Beal does it, it would have carried. And then again, probably not. The speeches are simply too goshawful for any actor to utter and expect the audience to believe and accept.

Two excellent character portrayals are turned in by Margaret Douglass and Effie Rowley and Evelyn Varden as Mrs. Kincaid. They're really caricatures, rather than characters, but why not? Splendid trouping in both parts should rate the players a lot of comment and Miss Douglass will quite certainly land in Hollywood prone. Jay Fassett is fine, too, as Kincaid, though in a lesser key. Another good portrayal is by Harry Bellaver as Pablo, a puzzled and amusing Mexican.

Martha Sleeper as the femme lead, Kay, is just a mite too energetic and goes at her job a bit too heartily. Possibly that will wear off after the first night enthusiasm (or nervousness) wanes. Chief Bear and Claire Woodbury are fine in bits.

Excellent sets by Donald Oenslager help a lot and the young director, Alexander Dean, on his first assignment, distinctly deserves a bend. Kauf.

WPA's RFC

Broadway sprang a gag when the Biltmore, N. Y., was taken over for federal theatre project shows. Wise guys alluded to the deal as 'R.F.C.—relief for the Chanins.' Latter have been operating the house for a bondholders' committee for seasons, but were unable to book in a hit.

WPA has lease on the house until the end of June at $700 weekly on a four wall deal. Mansfield across from Biltmore has been under lease to Rowland Stebbins at $500 weekly.

I WANT A POLICEMAN

Mystery melodrama in three acts presented at the Lyceum, N. Y., Jan. 14, '36, by Francis Curtis and Richard Myers; written by Rufus King and Milton Lazarus; staged by Arthur Sircom; $3.30 top.

Eric Davidson.....Dudley Hawley
Karl.....Con MacSunday
Fern Davidson.....Sylvia Field
Police Commissioner.....Paul Huber
Alfaro.....Weldon Heyburn
John Davi.....Eric Wollencott
Jepson.....Thomas Hambleton
Dennis.....Harold Moffet
Charles Talbot.....Clinton Sundberg
Eleanor Breen.....Wendy Atkin
Lady Breen.....Estelle Winwood
Sergeant Lynch.....Barry Sullivan
Cotswold.....Robert Barrat
Arthur Semple.....Frederick Graham

'Policeman,' a mystery meller, would have landed moderately, given a better first night break. Play provides thrills, but moves slowly and that spiked its chances.

Rufus King is a specialist in that direction. His collaborator, Milton Lazarus, attended to the comedy end and succeeded in supplying more laughs than shows of this type usually have.

Persons with a flair for guessing the guilty man in murder-mystery plays—there is an outright assassination in addition to the puzzling killing at the opening—may detect the murderer before the play proceeds very far. Yet that does not lessen the interest that 'Policeman' maintains, although the over-long first act doubtless had the director swinging at times.

Down on Long Island, the home of Eric Davidson is startled by a shot. So far as the audience is concerned a .22 calibre pistol went off while the eccentric banker was struggling with his young wife. The lights went out and presumably that gun went off.

Police commissioner of New York city is asked to investigate and he sends two detectives as bodyguards for Mrs. Davidson, who has received threatening notes. One is Dennis, a thick-headed dick, the other Alfaro, handsome as cops go. John Davidson, son of the slain man, is called to headquarters and reveals that the house has a secret passage.

That explains how a fellow who tossed a rock-weighted message through the window had disappeared. Story becomes involved when the doctor's diagnosis of death by apoplexy is declared phoney, as is the autopsy. Mysterious notes make such claims and insist that Davidson was shot. Undertaker is involved and he confesses that the widow gave him 50 G's to keep secret the fact that a small-bore bullet was the cause of death.

Sylvia Field is attractive as Mrs. Davidson and the part does her well, a change from the mousy assignments she has fallen heir to for several seasons. Harold Moffit is the comic flatfoot and is okay, too. Off stage they are Mr. and Mrs., this being the first time they have worked together in a show.

English Lady Breen and her daughter, as house guests, figure in the lighter moments. Not a meaty part for Estelle Winwood, nor for Wendy Atkin, who play the parts. Paul Huber is nervous as the police commissioner but, after the earlier scenes, does better. Weldon Heyburn is the better looking cop.

State police are called in to help the cops and are authentically impersonated, Barry Sullivan as sergeant Lynch looking and conducting himself like a real trooper. Ibee.

A Room in Red and White

Tragedy in three acts presented at the 46th St., N. Y., Jan. 18, 1936, by Dwight Deere Wiman and Georgo Kondolf; written by Roy Hargrave; Chrystal Herne starred. Leslie Adams featured; staged by the author; $3.30 top.

Lawrence Crandall.....Richard Kendrick
Joan Heyland.....Louise Platt
Beatrice Crandall.....Chrystal Herne
Philip Crandall.....Leslie Adams
Elinor Humphreys.....Brenda Dahlen
Robert Humphreys.....Joshua Logan
Marion Mellon.....Ivy Troutman
John Mellon.....Karl Stall
Stewart.....William Sanders
Peter Mansky.....Tenen Holtz

Distinguished production was greeted by first nighters, which included quite a number of socialites. But whether the average playgoer will accept tragedy such as 'A Room in Red and White' is to be proven. Despite its splendid playing its appeal will probably be limited.

It is another rama with trouble in the foreground, but it is far above the plane of the recent misery series. Roy Hargrave comes forward with this one indicating high promise as an actor-author. There will be glory and coin for him, the pair staring blankly in anguish there will be glory and coin for him, even if his 'Room' does not click.

Setting is that of a drawing room and foyer, with a steep stairway. It is still another masterpiece of stage design, current season having had several outstanding displays of scenic art. Jo Mielziner is the designer and his set provides an atmosphere of culture and good taste.

The home of the Philip Crandalls, however, is tainted with fear and cruelty. Crandall has been wed to Beatrice for 20 years and they have a grown son. Latter is engaged to a debutante whom, although she is his mistress, he is to marry. Philip at one time took dictation from his novelist mate but of late she is unable to concentrate. He was a good man but suddenly began to terrorize his wife and son. Not only did he accuse her of an affair with Peter Mansky, an artist whom she hardly knew, but he beats her.

Cause of the man's insane jealousy is revealed in the last minute of the play—a truly tragic moment.

At the opening the Crandalls arrive home from a gay party, Philip is sweet to Beatrice until the guests depart, then comes the first assault. From then on the play is mostly between father, mother and son.

A few days after striking Beatrice, Philip knocks out the son, Lawrence, and again slugs the wife. It is then that the victims plan murder. It is to be a perfect crime. Philip takes down a story by Beatrice, Yarn comes to the point where he is called on to write his own suicide note. That accomplished, Philip is given strychnine.

Six months later mother and son learn that Philip was afflicted with cancer of the brain. He had revealed that to the artist during a drinking bout, having said the doctor advised him death was a matter of only two months. Curtain finds the pair staring blankly in terror, realizing they would not have had to commit the homicide.

Chrystal Herne is starred as Beatrice and it is a difficult assignment. Acting honors go to Leslie Adams, who has been waiting a whole year to play Philip Crandall. Richard Kendrick as the rather weak son has a thankless part. Louise Platt, making her debut in New York, does well as Joan but all the characters are subjective to the three leads. Ibee.

In Again, Out Again

Cornel Wilde, juve, is back again in 'Moon Over Mulberry Street,' in the role he originated when the play opened. He replaces Norman Stuart, who goes to 'Lady Precious Stream.'

Wilde deserted 'Moon' for a role in the Theatre Guild's 'Love Is Not So Simple' which never reached Broadway.

Mysterious Opera Static

Both NBC and Metropolitan Opera management are prepared to take extra precautionary measures if the 'ghost of the opera broadcast' persists in showing up on the regular Saturday afternoon programs. Special detection equipment installed in the radio loft and scouts scattered throughout all levels of the Met are instructed to see if any patron might have an instrument on his person which would create some detracting buzz.

First time the 'visitor' was noticed was three weeks ago. Engineers were unable to locate the source of the trouble. Noise was a rhythmic tattoo which kept up throughout the entire opera, and drew heated comment from officials and listeners afterwards.

Next week only a short interference was picked up, but then it disappeared. Best description of it was like a dentist grinding a tooth.

Frieda Hempel Sues Heckscher For Annuity

Declaring that August Heckscher, millionaire philanthropist, was attempting to force Frieda Hempel, former opera star, to accept a lesser amount than that which he had agreed to pay her for the remainder of her life, attorneys for the diva opposed a move on Heckscher's part for a further delay of Mme. Hempel's suit in the New York Supreme Court, last Friday.

Mme. Hempel is suing the millionaire for payment allegedly due Dec. 1 on a $15,000 annuity which she has been receiving since 1928. Hackscher's attorneys on Monday (13) obtained an ex-parte order from Justice Charles B. McLaughlin granting them an additional twenty days in which to answer the singer's suit. On Friday (17) Irving L. Ernst, appearing for Mme. Hempel, who is in Europe, asked that the order be cavated. Justice McLaughlin reserved decision. Should he vacate the order, Mme. Hempel would be granted judgment by default.

Two other defendants besides Heckscher are named in the action. They are Elias C. Stuckles and William Dickinson Hart, who are named as trustees of a fund set up by Heckscher for Mme. Hempel in May, 1928, under which, it was said, the singer was to receive $15,000 annually in quarterly payments for life. The last payment due in December was not made and the suit was instituted.

Last September, according to Ernst, Mme. Hempel received a payment under the old agreement. It was then, the lawyer asserts, Heckscher's representatives tried to induce Mme. Hempel to accept a lesser amount. She refused.

Present action is one of several which have brought the affairs of the millionaire and the former opera star into court. The first suit instituted by Mme. Hempel occurred early in 1928 when the singer demanded $1,000,000 damages, charging breach of an alleged agreement on the part of the philanthropist to pay her $48,000 a year for life. he singer's part of the bargain was that she was always to be at the beck and call of Heckscher so that she could give her services in any of the charity benefits in which he might be interested. Singer, according to the agreement, was never to be further away from New York than two days' train travel.

Following the filing of the suit the present agreement was made and apparently everything was satisfactory as far as the singer was concerned until Heckscher neglected to send her the last quarterly payment. Two were at one time reported engaged to marry.

STUDENTS MAKE GOOD

Reduced Prices Draw Capacity Audience

St. Paul, Jan. 21.

Minnesota Daily, student pub at the U of Minnesota, recently devoted its editorial columns to a challenge to Eugene Ormandy, wagering the Minneapolis Symphony conductor that if he would play a special concert for students at reduced prices, they'd pack the auditorium.

Ormandy accepted, played the concert last week, found 4,000, capacity crowd, on hand. So enthused is the baton-waver that he now plans at least two more all-student concerts during the year.

CHI OPERA BENEFIT FOR CURRENT COSTS

Chicago, Jan. 21.

City Opera heads have now set Jan. 31 for a special performance originally planned for before Christmas in the hope of taking in enough over expenses to carry overhead of skelton staff working for 1936 season in Civic. 'Madama Butterfly' will be sung, with Edith Mason in name-part, Armand Tokatyan and Henry Weber, concert-director of WGN, conducting. Cost of show will be light, with all singers volunteering, no rent or light-bill and opera requiring no orchestra-rehearsal.

Meanwhile, the city treasurer is holding on to the $15,000 'donation' toward 1935 losses on five-week season.

2 GROUPS PROVIDE WASHINGTON OPERA

Washington, Jan. 21.

Capital will get its first opera of season this week with local debut of Art of Musical Russia group doing matinee and night at National Theater and Edouard Albion, ex-local vocal teacher, staging two shows at Constitution Hall.

Russian group will do 'Coq D'Or' and 'Boris Godounov' Sunday (26) at $3 top. Albion, who presented several series of local talent operas between 1928-30, will do 'Lakme' tonight (21) with Bidu Sayo, Brazilian singer in first try here, and children's mat of 'Hansel und Gretel' Saturday afternoon with Cecile Sherman and Marian Seele imported for leads. Albion will sing for first time here in 'Lakme.'

Junior Kubelik's Debut

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Jan Kubelik, Czech violinist, will be the third offering of Nick Londes, local wrestling-concert impresario. Will appear in Orchestra Hall, Wednesday, Jan. 29, at $2 top.

Kubelik's son, Rafael, pianist, and his daughter, Anita, violinist, will also be on program, making their first American appearances.

Tour Poland

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Choir of Thuringian Boy Singers has been signed a second time for a tour in Poland and will give concerts in Lodz, Warsaw and Alexandrowo.

Radio Warsaw has also booked the choir.

CULTURE CAPITAL OF U.S. IN CONN.?

Varied Program of Concerts, Opera, Novelties Laid Out Under Inspiration of Friends and Enemies of Modern Music

ANNUAL IDEA

Hartford, Conn., hopes to establish itself as the American Salzburg, culture spot No. 1 of the U. S. A. Idea is to set up the Connecticut town as the forerunner of American art in all its varied forms of expression. With this purpose in mind, town will hold its first of a projected annual series of festivals during the week starting Feb. 2.

Program set up for the week's festival includes the American premiere of a new modernist opera and a series of film revivals from a 'modernist' and 'artistic' standpoint.

Festival will be spotted at the Wadsworth Atheneum under the direction of the Friends and Enemies of Modern Music. A. Everett Austin, Jr., of that organization, is in charge. It was this organization which sponsored the first American production of 'Three Saints in Four Acts,' by Gertrude Stein, three seasons ago and it is from this start that the current festival idea sprang. Group also sponsored the premiere performance of the American Ballet last year and was the first to give the Balanchine group a hearing.

Atheneum has a seating capacity of 1,000 and is run in connection with the city's museum. Despite its hideaway character town's museum is generally considered one of the finest (from a modernist standpoint) in America, largely due to the donations and interest of wealthy New Yorkers who live in the vicinity. Hartford is about four hours distance from New York, and the state capital. Museum also acts as a sort of focal point for other museums and galleries in the state, giving it sales importance in the eyes of painters and art patrons.

As an insurance and diversified town with payrolls less effected than usual by depression trends Hartford ha long been a 'test town' for radio advertising campaigns.

Feb. 2

Following is the program so far set:

Three p.m.: Works by local composers, old and new. Music of the Connecticut Valley. At 8:30 p.m., rare films with music: 1902, 'A Trip to the Moon,' by Georges Melies; 1914, 'Whirl of Life,' with Irene and Vernon Castle; 1914, 'A Fool There Was,' with Theda Bara; 1924, 'Entr'acte,' by Rene Clair and Francois Picabia. Music by Erik Satie and program notes by Iris Barry.

Feb. 7

Friday, 8:30 p.m.: American premiere of Kurt Weill's oper , 'The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny,' with Lotte Lenja, direction by John Houseman; choreography, Edwin Denby; conducter, Van Grove, and settings, A. E. Austin, Jr.

Feb. 8

Saturday, 5 p.m.: Special performance of 'Mahagonny'; 10 p.m., paper ball for benefit of the Wadsworth Atheneum, 'A Ragpicker's Circus'; direction, Mrs. R. M. Bissell; artistic direction, Pavel Tchelitchew.

Feb. 9

Sunday, 3 p.m.: Chamber music by contemporary French composers. Henri Saugent, 'Divertimento,' for five instruments; Igor Markevitch, 'Partita,' for piano and small orchestr ; Cliquet-Pleyel, variations on 'Swing Low Sweet Chariot,' for violin, piano, trumpet and string quartet; settings, Eugene Berman; Erik Satie's, 'Socrates,' with setting by Alexander Calder.

World-Wide Orchestral Tours

Stokowski Informs His Board About It Via the Newspapers

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Sudden and brief flare-up between Leopold Stokowski and board of Philadelphia Orchestra resulted from maestro's public announcement of projected series of world tours by orchestra. Following last week's statement by Stoky that group would visit principal cities of four continents in tours to take place next few years, Alfred Reginald Allen, manager of the Orchestra Association, asserted that any such plans were news to the board and could not be carried out without action and approval of that body. He termed maestro's action 'unauthorized.'

Prospective tours, to include virtually every large city in the world, would begin next spring with previously announced trip to the west coast and return. Others, to follow, would be to Europe, South America and Hawaii, Japan and working back across the Southwestern route. In making the announcement at a farewell dinner given him by members of the orchestra, Stoky stated he had made tentative plans for whole project with a prominent European manager. Allen's statement was made next day.

Cases of Stoky taking orchestra matters into his own hands have been cause of similar friction between him and board on numerous previous occasions. The proposed tour is generally agreed to be 'nebulous' but not beyond possibility.

ARTY DANCE CIRCUIT

Frances Hawkins Will Travel to Break the Ice

Frances Hawkins, dance manager, will go on the road in March for three months to line up student bodies and other groups as auspices for a swing-around of arty dance groups next season.

Organized circuit of bookings for modern dancers like Martha Graham, Doris Humphrey, Charles Weidman, Esther Junger, Tamiris, Jose Limon, etc., is contemplated.

MET $3 CYCLE NEEDS A FEW STARS

Main problem confronting Metropolitan Opera management on the coming supplementary spring season is the question of names. With $3 top and novices and comers used for most of the roles, it's still considered vital that some big personalities participate. So far no established stars have okayed the bids.

Board picked last week to operate this added season includes: Lucrezia Bori, Edward Johnson, John M. Perry, Mrs. Edward . R. Isaacs, Mrs. Marcia Davenport, Kay Swift, Cortland Barnes, Edward Wardwell, Paul D. Cravath, Cornelius Bliss, Mrs. August Belmont, John Erskine, Edward M. M. Warburg, Mrs. William Francis Gibbs, Audrey Lewisohn, DeWitte Barlow and Theodore Ryan.

St. Pierre Plans More Opera in Rockford, Ill.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 21.

Big intake at $2 top Jan. 8 of commonwealth 'Rigoletto' in Coronado Theatre has impelled Louis St. Pierre, district manager, to put on hot campaign for second show, Feb. 4, with 'Carmen.' Promise of St. Pierre's co-operation has fired Jean Baptiste DeKeyser, Chi Opera chorister who promoted and made a success of Jan. 8 venture, to spread for 'Carmen.'

Coe Glade, preferred songstress in name-part in recent years with Chi Opera, will come here, with Edouard Molitore as principal tenor and Mari Barova, Janet Fairbank, Helen Freund, Howard Preston, Wilfred Engelman and Guiseppe Cavadore, all names familiar to Chi Opera patrons.

DeKeyser promotes himself in casting, also, by taking over two roles—Morales and one of the comic smugglers. Dino Bigalli will conduct, his daughter will be principal dancer, and Chi Opera lends sets and costumes.

Meanwhile, DeKeyser is busy negotiating to build up an easy-distance circuit for idea, with South Bend, Springfield (Ill.), Peoria and Joliet on tentative arrangements with Publix-Great States.

GRAVEURE IN HAMBURG

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Louis Graveure is current at the Volks Oper in Hamburg in 'The Count of Luxembourg.'

Gianinni Debut

Dusolina Gianinni's debut at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., is about set in 'Aida' for February.

She sings at a Pixa musical program on Jan. 26, which will introduce her to a small gathering.

BALLET COPS 5G'S ON SOCIAL IMPETUS

San Francisdo, Jan. 21.

Society turned out en masse for opening at the Civic Opera House of this season's presentation of Ballet Russe. Every seat sold and local sheets spreading themselves beyond usual limits, Examiner using six column society page spread of photos of social celebs.

Scaled from $1.10 to $3.30 show grossed close to $5,200 for the premiere and, according to Peter Conley, local impresario, engagement will possibly gross $45,000 on run of eight nights and three matinees.

Berlin Concerts

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Musical celebrations here recently included a concert at the Volksbuehne (Poeple's Stage), where the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra gave a performance of Beethoven's Ninth. Four more concerts by the same orch are slated for this and next week, conducted respectively by Georg Oscar Schumann, Herbert Albert, Paul Winckelsesser, and Victor de Sabata. Performances include the works of Wagner, Richard Strauss, Chopin, Brahms, Schubert, Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Dvorak.

Other concerts this week include Adelina Korytko, Maria Firenza, Wladislaw Ladis, Emmi Leisner, Gieseking, Elly Ney, Kulenkampf, and the Landes Orchestra Berlin, conducted by Gustav Havemann.

The Deutsch Opernhaus is also arranging a series of concerts under the conductorship of Arthur Rother, with Prof. Ed Erdmann as soloist, performances to contain works of Beethoven, Weber and Schumann.

Agnes De Mille East

On completion of her commitment to MGM in Hollywood, where she is presently arranging choreography for 'Romeo and Juliet,' Agnes de Mille will return east for a season of dance recitals.

She opens in St. Louis on Feb. 2 and then proceeds to Des Moines, Ia., to appear March 4. On April 1 and 4 she will appear in New York. One of dates is tentatively set for the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

Plays Abroad

A KIRALYNE

('The Queen')

Budapest, Dec. 30.

Play in three acts by Laszlo Lakatos, at the Vigszinhaz, Budapest.
Cast: Margit Makay, Imre Raday, Oscar Beregi, Alexander Goth.

Two plays by Lakatos within one week. Both 'Rich Man,' Lakatos' other play now current at Magyar theatre, and 'The Queen' are rather clever and well done, but artificial, and, in spite of many good lines, not quite there.

This one has a milieu seen time and again—that of ex-royalty in exile. It is difficult to say anything witty, satirical and new about the exiled royal family of a fictitious kingdom, biding the time of their return to the throne at the Paris Ritz.

King enjoys being on the dole, according to the tradition of ex-royalty plays; it is the queen who represents the monarchical idea, and insists on etiquette. Which does not prevent her from being consquered by the ardent courtship of the son of the arch-republican who drove them out and made himself president. When the president comes to beg the king to once more take charge and run the country, which has proved too much for him, the queen prevails over the amorous woman once more and the adventure ends.

Not an important play, but some of the situations are good, so a foreign run or a screen chance are possible.

Margit Makay, who took over the leading part from another actress only a week before the premiere, acts very creditably and looks nice in queenly gowns. Raday makes a rather charming lover, and Alexander Goth is very funny and characteristic in the part of a lawyer-demagogue. Jacobi.

EZUSTMENYASSZONY

('Silver Bride')

Budapest, Dec. 30.

Comedy with music by Laszlo Szilagyi, based on a play by Bus Ikete, score by Michael Eisemann. At the Royal theatre, Budapest.
Cast: Sari Fedak, Lola Laszlo, Ferike Vidor, Gero Maly, Rezso Harsanyi, George Denes, Emil Fenyo, George Devenyi.

Sari Fedak, Hungary's once overwhelmingly popular local stage star, has found for herself a vehicle in which she is able to display the many facets of her splendid gifts, re-establish her contact with the public and recall her former triumphs.

Story is that of an ex-musical comedy star of a third-rate touring company who left husband and son to elope with a barnstormer. She has called herself his affianced bride for the last twenty-five years—hence the title of the play—during which she has lived with him and brought up a daughter. It is for this daughter's sake that she tries to patch up the relations with her son by her previous marriage, who has become a doctor of fame and standing.

He and his family are not very eager to welcome the disreputable mother, who does her best to fit into a highly respectable background once more, but gives it up when reminiscences of her old stage triumphs assail her. She returns to her old comedian, who pacifies Mrs. Grundy by really marrying her.

Miss Fedak is as brilliant as ever when she gets the opportunity to let her temperament and her sense of humor sparkle. She still has that supreme gift of filling the stage, but she has also taken care of getting a first-rate production. Lola Laszlo, as the daughter, is a young actress showing exceptional promise in this, her first appearance on the stage. So does a child actor, George Devenyi, whose small brother had great success in the child part of 'First Legion' earlier in the season. Entire cast is good, and 'Silver ride' is a definite success. Jacobi.

PARADE DU MONDE

('World Parade')
(Second Version)

Paris, Dec. 30.

Two act revue at Casino de Paris, starring Jules Ladoumegue, featuring Cinda Glenn. Produced by Henri Varna.

Withdrawal of Maurice Chevalier from Casino show on expiration of contract made it necessary for Henri Varna to do some tanti fixing in order to keep going the big success with which the Casino started the season. He not only had to replace a star of the first calibre, but to fill in nearly an hour of time in the second act of the revue.

He does it in a daring way which clicks beautifully. Hired Jules Ladoumegue, world's champion long distance runner, extremely popular with the sports public here as one of the three or four French athletes of real international eminence. A long row, accompanied by lots of publicity, had ended in the final disqualification of Ladoumegue as an amateur, and he can no longer compete.

Opens his number with a little speech on how devoted he is to the cause of French sports, and then does a little dance number with the English line, the Helena Stars. Helena Greasley, ballet mistress who trained him (and did a swell job) says the runner took to dancing naturally. His timing in the Tiller work is perfect.

Then he runs—first around a small, highly banked track, and then on a treadmill. And he is a beautiful runner. Ladoumegue is no beauty, and his body—particularly legs—are so muscular that it looks as if he were built of heavy steel cable, so that his appeal is to men rather than women, but that's oke in a Casino show.

Cinda Glenn, also taken on to fill in, gets a big hand for her crazy imitations of film stars and fantastic arm-twisting. She's a lanky gal, and she gets her arms twisted around her head in so complicated a manner that it looks as if she doesn't know which is which. Combined with funny faces and eccentric dances, this goes well. Miss Glenn broke into local prominence last season, at the Theatre de l'Humour show, and has been rising ever since.

Ray Huling's seal, Charlie, was to have gone into this show, but something happened at the last minute. Instead, Varna has put on some additional nudism, particularly a tableau in which ten women, stripped to limit, indulge in daring poses.

Backbone of show remains Miss Greasley's girls, who do dances of all nations and are on stage nearly half the time. Stern.

A GAZDAG EMBER

('The Rich Man')

Budapest, Jan.

Three act comedy by Laszlo Lakatos, at Magyar Szinhaz, Budapest.
Cast: Ilona Titkos, Eugene Torzs, Vera Sennyey, Dezso Kertesz, Tibor Szakacs, Eugene Szigeti, Kopeczy Book.

Sound comedy idea on which this play is based is the character of a big business man who turns over every penny and hasn't got a single interest outside his business as long as he's got money. When he goes broke he wants to keep up appearances and therefore freely squanders the money that no longer belongs to him, thereby acquiring a taste for the good things in life, including women. When Fortune smiles upon him again, but his lady-love deserts him, the rich man returns to his miserly habits and plunges headlong back into business.

Lakatos emulates Molnar's satirical vein but lacks the latter's finesse, although there are plenty of laughs in the dialog, mainly of local bearing. 'Rich Man' might have made a hilarious one-act comedy, but lacks sufficient meat for a whole evening's entertainment. It may have a fairly good run here, owing to good acting and local allusions, but has small prospects of a foreign career and none for the screen.

Eugene Torzs gives a thoroughly good characterization of the big business man but Ilona Titkos, as the vamp who arouses the middle-aged man's susceptibilities and then deceives him, is not up to the mark. Jacobi.

Plays Out of Town

funny although intended to be serious.

Claims that a half dozen top actresses wanted the leading roles are easily understandable. Whole thing is centered on justifying 'temperament' and stirring up sympathy through painting the trials and tribulations along the road to fame on Broadway. It's a natural for every star of the Gay White Way who has 'put aside all human emotions' and dedicated herself to the 'theat-ah.'

Show opens with a set resembling an empty stage during rehearsal. Juvenile, ingenue and prompter are on stage. Director ambles down the aisle. Julie, the big star, bursts in late. After plenty of fireworks to convince the audience that she has to be handled with kid gloves, she goes through a scene or so with the ingenue. Suddenly she stops cold and announces that the ingenue must be fired for imitating her. Rehearsal is called off and the author, a college professor who is making his debut as a playwright, remains to persuade her to change her mind. In answer to his charges that she is inhuman, cold and devoid of any womanly emotions, Julie gets up from her couch to explain—via reciting her rise to the pinnacle on which she now resides.

Scene jumps back to the rags household in Lexington, Ky., in the year 1913. Mrs. Gregg is a widower with two daughters, Mary Lou, who is crazy over horse races and men, and Julie, who aspires to be an actress. Mary Lou runs off with a city slicker. Julie wavers for a moment when Dave Worth, heir to a tobacco factory, proposes marriage, but the offer of a job in a stock company wins out and she takes her bag and scrams.

Next comes a cheap room in Dayton, O., a year later. Julie, living with another trouper, has her chance to go to Broadway but she won't sell her soul to Sid Paul, a producer with a checkered suit and a proposition.

Next comes Greenwich Village. Tossed out of her room for not paying her rent, she moves in with Gerald Lane, a struggling playwright. Over the pork chops they fall in love and everything goes along fine until Mary Lou, who has walked out on her race-horse tout, arrives. Mary Lou makes a play for Gerald, there is a squabble, Mary Lou marries him and Julie takes it on the lam.

Two more years pass. Mary Lou has disappeared. Gerald is sick. Julie returns to have Gerald die in her arms, takes his play (which he wrote for her alone) and presents it to Sid Paul, now a big-time producer.

So much for Julie's biography. By this time you are supposed to realize that it has been a long, tough climb and any gal that makes it is true blue despite her hard exterior. Last scene, which takes place where the first left off, finds the fireworks even more elaborate, until Julie discovers that the ingenue is really the daughter of Gerald and Mary Lou—and, instead of wanting her fired, takes her under her wing to make a great actress out of her.

There is little or no humor in the show. What there is, is accomplished through inserting profanity into otherwise flat lines in the first and last scenes. And the serious moments, which are played dead straight, are couched in language that smacks, at times, of 'The Drunkard.'

Beth Merrill, who looks older as the young girl than she does as the famous star, does noble service but even she cannot put across the lines that are handed her. Louise Campbell as the ingenue, Morgan Farley as the professor, Hal Conklin as the struggling author and Louis Polan and Producer Paul come as close to being convincing characters as anybody in the show. And the credit is entirely due to their performances.

Three acts and nine scenes are smoothly staged by Worthington Miner, effectively mounted by Arne Lundborg and the changes are accomplished with remarkable speed. Craig.

ANTI-FOREIGN TALENT WAIL UP IN MEXICO

Mexico City, Jan. 21.

Invasion of foreign showfolk, majority of them Americans, which has become greater and greater since last fall and threatens to monopolize talent in revues, theatres, cabarets and niteries, has aroused the active ire of the home guard. Various vaude performers and musicians have asked the civic government to strictly enforce the labor law clause which demands that all commercial enterprises must have at least 90% native employees. Complaints say that in some cases native talent on stages, floors and in bands is as little as 25%.

Musicians' unions are urging the government to ive native tunesters more of a break in competition with foreigners, practically all of whom are transient imports.

SYDNEY'S SOLE PANTO

Sydney, Dec. 30.

Frank Neil will produce the only panto here this season, 'Babes in the Wood.'

Cast includes Alfred Latell, Syd Beck, Maud Edwards, and Nick Morton.

Sydney Expo Plan

Sydney, Dec. 30.

Sydney will celebrate its 150th anniversary in 1938.

Premier Stevens has announced that energetic preparations are under way for a national celebration. Plans will be discussed at the next Cabinet meeting. Anticipated that celebration will be along similar lines to those of the Chicago World Fair.

Stanley S. Crick, m.d. of Fox, here, will probably be placed in charge of a section of the proposed activities. Government is already considering certain proposals set out by Crick.

Tait's Lineup

Sydney, Dec. 30.

Williamson-Tait will run daily mats of Gilbert and Sullivan revivals during the Christmas holidays.

E. J. Tait arrives back here next week with a load of new attractions, including 'Anything Goes,' and 'Three Men on a Horse.'

Harry Langdon and Elsie Pertka have been engaged for a season in 'Anything Goes.'

BOOM IN JUVE ACTS IN BERLIN

Berlin, Jan. 12.

An epidemic of children acts has hit German vaude. Ever since the Wintergarten staged a Children-Performer straight vaude bill some months ago and made quite a hit with it, hardly any variety program here seems complete without at least one or two juve acts.

Child labor protection law seems to be shelved; there are permits forthcoming even in cabarets. And kids are never over 14.

The Rivels not alone brought their children onto the Wintergarten stage in their acts but during the month, on account of quarrels between the brothers, kids were separated and signed for the local Europa Cabaret.

Scala last month had a 12-year-old girl, Wicky, playing a number of instruments and leading the house orchestra as a finale.

Noni, English clown, who has been doing a Grock copy act for years, is featuring his 11-year-old daughter Anita at the Flora Altona; she's a dancer and mimic.

Twenty-four Gypsy Juveniles from Budapest are the current star attraction at the Wintergarten in a musical act.

Lamb and Allis, Baird Click in Paris Houses

Paris, Jan. 21.

Lamb and Allis opened last night at the Alhambra to a satisfactory reception. Former is Gil Lamb, of Lamb and Bellett, who split with latter in London last week. New pair went over well despite being spotted after Harry Baur, local cinema favorite.

Raymond Baird, saxophonist, also a click at the ABC last night.

Orgs a Must

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Ruling goes to say that whoever entertains in public or private, no matter what capacity or style of entertainment, and likewise whoever is connected with show biz in the shape as agent, booker, impresario, manager, associate, must belong to an organization under the Reichs Kultur Kammer (Culture Chamber), a court here has ruled.

Anybody caught without his organization identity card is liable to arrest and further complications.

Munich Festival Season Is Planned

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Bavarian State Theatres at Munich have arranged for an elaborate Festival Season next summer, July 2-Aug. 30.

State Opera will present at the Prinzregenten theatre 'Meistersinger,' 'Flying Dutchman,' 'Tristan,' 'Rienzi' and 'Tannhauser.'

At the Residenz theatre the following will be given: 'Magic Flute,' 'Don Giovanni,' 'Titus,' 'Cosi Fan Tutte,' 'Idomeneo' and 'Alcesti.'

National theatre will stage 'Antonius and Cleopatra,' 'Merchant of Venice,' 'Demetrius.'

Open-air performances of 'Lumpaci Vagabundus' and 'Uncle Theodore' are also on the program.

Good London Meller

London, Jan. 21.

'No Exit,' melodrama, opened at the Embassy Monday (20).

It is intriguing and was well received.

ROME THEATRE CONFAB UNDER IL DUCE

Rome, Jan. 10.

The Theatre Guild or the Corration of Public Performances (or whatever you want to call the Corporazione dello Spettacolo, which is one of the numerous corporations into which Fascist and corporative Italy has organized its industries) is scheduled to meet next week under the presidency of Mussolini at the Palazzo Venezia.

Agenda for the meeting is long enough to give even a man of the Duce's w.k. energy a nifty headache. Here are the highlights the skedded discussion:

1. National situation of the activities of the lyric and dramatic theatres and of the concert theatres, followed by examination of the effects of state aid by way of money.

2. Condition of Italian theatre and music outside of Italy and ways and means of expanding their prestige and influence. It is thought that one or two companies of A-1 Italian actors will be picked and sent abroad to assure representation worthy of Italy outside the country; special attention will probably be given, and help and privileges showered upon, companies booked for engagements in America.

3. Revision of rules of employment affecting stage, concert and film work.

4. Consideration of the use of community theatres, of which there are now 371 in existence.

5. Problem of city directory boards for the theatre, with special reference to the problem of constructing mass theatres.

6. Review of all the problems of the Italian film industry, including inspection of general situation of industry, construction of an experimental center for filming, control of the number of moving picture houses, problem of prolog acts on cinema stages, etc.

PARIS OPERA HOUSE TO BE RENOVATED

Paris, . 12.

Paris Opera House, which usually is open 52 weeks a year, will probably be closed for four months thi year for thorough overhaul. Electrical equipment will be entirely renewed, a new transformer, said to be world's largest, is being installed to replace that which was put in way back in 1885.

New fire extinguishers and emergency sprinkler system will be constructed. Scenery storerooms also will be equipped with new sprinklers.

Elevators will be fitted in the center of the spiral staircases which customers must now climb to get to the upper galleries. Further plans are not yet announced in detail by the state architects who will have the job in hand, but their purpose is to make the Opera as modern as any theatre in Europe, in time for the 1937 Paris expo.

Copeau Set

Paris, Jan. 21.

Jacques Copeau, little theatre pioneer, after batting from one theatre to another in an attempt to find a spot for a comeback this year, has hooked up with the Theatre de la Madeleine. He'll put on a new version of Shakespeare's 'Much Ado About Nothing,' adapted by Jean Sarment.

It won't be right away, however, for the current Madeleine show is Sacha Guitry's 'End of World,' comedy hit which should run a while yet.

LOCATELLI'S BUM GLIM RUINS SURE-FIRE WIN

By JACK PULASKI

The boys who laid 3 to 1 that Cleto Locatelli of Italy would stay 10 rounds with Bobby Pacho yowled in anguish when the referee stopped the bout in the eighth round to save the visitor's left eye, which was badly cut. It went as a technical kayo and the short-enders collected. Madison Square Garden was slimly attended.

Wagering gentry had tabbed the match correctly, making Cleto a 7 to 5 favorite to win on points. He was much the better boxer and was so fast that Bobby found it hard to hold the pace. It seemed that Pacho was stronger when the fight was stopped, but doubtful if he could have evened up the score had there been no interruption.

Pacho looked very good against Leonard Del Genio the previous Friday, but was up against too much class this time. Several rounds before the sudden ending he opened Locatelli's peeper and kept picking on it. First half of the match found Pacho taking it by the left hand route, Cleto never seeming to miss with that mitt. Then he changed to the right hand and smacked the Mexican at will.

Bob Pastor, former Golden Glover, was beaten by Steve Dudas of Jersey in an eight-rounder. Pastor, formerly of the University of New York, had been doing rather well against other heavies, but Steve proved a stumbling block in a slugging match.

OBITUARIES

RUDYARD KIPLING

Rudyard Kipling, 70, died in London Jan. 18, following an operation for a perforated stomach ulcer five days before. After the operation his chances were regarded as at least even, but peritonitis developed and he was soon beyond the aid of medical skill. Since the death of his son in the world war he had been virtually a recluse.

Both as a writer of poetry and prose, Kipling was outstanding in his generation and probably would have been named poet laureate but for an unfortunate allusion to Queen Victoria as 'The Widow at Windsor.' He was given the Nobel prize in literature in 1907, the first Englishman to be thus civil servant in India, he first came to attention through his contributions to the Lahore Civil and Military Gazette, but fame spread rapidly. His first published work was a collection of these in book form. He is now represented by some 90 volumes.

Kipling was averse to motion picture production of his work, but in 1921 Pathe made 'Without Benefit of Clergy,' the late Randolph Lewis going to England to complete the script under the author's personal supervision. His 'Captain Courageous' now process of release. Maude Adams several times agitated the production 'Kim,' with herself in the title role, but the deal never went over, partly on account of the huge production costs involved. 'The Light That Failed' also made by Pathe in 1916.

He was married to Caroline Starr Balestier, and for a time (1892-96), he lived in Brattleboro, Vt., but went to England. He came back in 1899 and on that visit suffered an attack of pneumonia so serious that newspaper 'death watch' was maintained for about 10 days. During this time his daughter, Joseph- died during his illness and this seemed give him a distaste for America. He carried her ashes to England and never returned to the States, though he subsequently visited Canada.

His widow and a daughter, Mrs. George Bambridge, survive.

IE RUSSELL

Annie Russell, long a favorite on the American and British stages, led at Winter Park, Florida, Jan. following a long illness. She had made no professional appearances since 1918, but made occasional appearances at Rollins college, where she was a member of the faculty.

Miss Russell made her first success in 1881 in 'Esmeralda' at the Madison Square theatre, then under the management of the Frohmans. She was only 17 and when turned down because of her youth, let down her dresses, did up her hair and again applied to William Gillette. Her first New York appearance, however, was made three years before in a juvenile company doing 'Pinafore.' In the late '80's she withdrew from the stage because of illness, but came back in 1894, her popularity undiminished.

She made her London in 1898. Essentially feminine, she scored a mild sensation in one play by smoking a cigar. She became associated with Rollins college when her friend, Mrs. Edward Bok, founded and built the Annie Russell theatre for the use of her dramatic classes. It was dedicated in 1923 when she appeared in 'In a Balcony,' and she made two later productions.

She was twice married, to Eugene W. Presbry and to Oswald Yorke, who survives her.

CHARLES H. MELTZER

Charles Henry Meltzer, 83, died in New York Jan. 14 of pneumonia. He had been ill for about a week.

Almost forgotten by the present generation, he was an influential spirit in the early part of the century. Born in London, he was made foreign correspondent for the New York Herald and Chicago Times. He was brought to New York by James Gordon Bennett as critic of te Herald, in 1890, and later changed over to the morning edition of the World, for which he did much important work. In 1903 he was appointed assistant to Heinrick Conried, then head of the Metropolitan opera, and dur his four years with that impresario he started the movement for opera in English. He translated the libretti of 22 standard operas into English. He later was music critic for the New York American, and did much foreign correspondence for various papers. He also worked on a book of memoirs, due for early publication.

He is survived by his widow, a son and two daughters.

CHANNON COLLINGE

Channon Collinge, 61, composer and conductor, died in New York Jan. 15, following an operation. He has been coductor of the CBS 'Cathedral Hour' and was connected with other musical broadcasts for the same company. He was organizer and founder the children's orchestra taken by John Priestly and now known as the Dean Clough orchestra, of Halifax. He wrote the music for 'Seminary Girl' and was with A. L. Erlanger was composer for a number of musical productions, including ' iris of Gottenburg' and 'Chin Chin.'

In 1920 he became a comic strip artist for the old Tribune and later was handled by news syndicates. In 1927, a few weeks after the Columbia Broadcasting System was organized, he became its musical director.

He is survived by Patricia Collinge, of the stage,

GEORGE ALLISON

Geor Allison, 70, who came to this county in 1892 with the Kendalls and remained here under Daniel Frohman when they returned home, died at Norwalk, Conn., Jan. 15, after a year's illness.

He was in the original cast of 'Ben Hur,' had supported Helen Hayes, Lynn Fontanne, Madge Kennedy and Ethel Barrymore. He was in the long run of 'Butter and Egg Man' and was highly successful in stock, playing for five seasons in Brooklyn as well as in other cities. His most recent N. Y. appearances were in 'Dinner at Ei ' and 'Merrily We Roll Along.'.

He is survived by his widow, the former Susan Gertrude Pratt, professionally known as Gertrude Allison, and a daughter. Mrs. Allison usually played in the companies with which he traveled.

WILLIAM J. BARRY

William John 'Jack' Barry, 68, veteran minstrel and circus trouper, died Jan. 19 in Auburn City Hospital, Auburn, N. Y., following a five day illness. He was a buck and wing dancer and acrobat, starting his career in 1881 with the Comstock and Eggleston Excelsior Minstrels. Subsequently he was with the Meredith and Fitts Parlor Minstrels, the Hurlbut and Huntington Circus, Reid's European Circus, Phil Defanball's Circus and Hi Henry's Minstrels.

For a period, he teamed with William M. Sullivan in C. W. Vreeland's Operatic Minstrels, the duo being widely known in minstrelsy for their number, 'Happy Little Darkies on the Levee.'

Barry, who had been living in rural retirement at Dresserville, Cayuga County hamlet, is survived by three sisters.

Night club and bottle-party business will be even worse affected for a similar length of time, while trade at all deluxe restaurants will be down. Probability is, however, that the grillroom supper trade will go up, attracting the white tie brigade which would normally be hitting the brighter spots.

In legit, 12 shows in rehearsal and scheduled for immediate production have been indefinitely postponed. C. B. Cochran's 'Follow the Sun,' new revue due from Manchester, where it is breaking in, is a cinch not to open at all. Cochran is understood to be holding the cast off with a view to opening a fortnight after the funeral, but may have to postpone farther than that. With a show which would normally be the town's dressiest, he's in a tough spot.

Straight hotel business should move up. Places like the Savoy and Dorchester hotels already report heavy overseas bookings as the funeral rites will bring thousands of monied people into town. But once over, the town, including hotels, is likely to be very quiet for months to come.

Has been announced that there will be no normal radio programs on the air until further notice. Microphones will all be used for official announcements, speeches by parliamentarians and memorial services.

It is expected that the Prince of Wales will make his first radio speech as King of Britain before the end of the week, although no announcement has yet been made.

ramatic in spontaneity, gaiety ended here with the announcement of His Majesty's death.

Music and dancing ceased in hotels and guests quietly left as soon as the word arrived from Sandringham. All beverage rooms and dance spots were closed. Social events were cancelled and business will be suspended during the funeral period.

For the first time all radio stations in Canada were silent, following the announcement of the King's death. Theatres refrained from announcing the news to their audiences, on theory it would only have caused sadness, and that the news came too late to stop performances. Meeting is being held by Famous Players-Canadian to determine what steps will be taken in tribute.

let this girl rest in the show and make somebody else work. Following this is 'isorder in the Court,' comedy sketch with House presiding as judge in Bobby Clark's shoes, a task to which he was not equal opening day apparently cause of insufficient rehearsals.

Buster West is next in his dance and comedy routine in 'one' to fair results, although he seems spotted too far down after everyone has been tired out by the attempts of the show to get started. Finale is next with all members on stage in full dress to be introduced individually and then to tune of 'Music Goes Round and Round' comes final curtain.

Setings are same as used in the roadshow with possibly one exception. They are all right without being in any way outstanding. The girls and the boys in the ensemble work well in their few spots in the show, and the mixed chorus idea seems to take very nicely. Music is not especially distinguished for what is supposed to be a big revue. All in all, there is plenty of talent present, but the show needs to be speeded up and cut considerably to give it a swifter pace. Lucille Page, although good, is on too many times and Buster West is not used enough.

Business way above par at the Indiana here at increased price scale, but take will be five grand under another edition of same show, last season.

CHICAGO FOLLIES

(ORPHEUM, WINNIPEG)

Winnipeg, Jan. 15.

This marks the return of vaudeville to the Orpheum after having been over the Capitol for the past few weeks. The old style bill of double feature and units is being continued for the present.

Three acts share honors as the standouts on the show. First of these is Frank 'Peg-Leg' Jones. He starts out a little slow, but works up to a fast finish. Helping him out with the comedy is the unit band under Ted Harris, one of the best to hit town with a troupe. Jones makes ample use of his wooden leg to garner laughs as he directs the orchestra, later going into a fast-moving tap dance, ending up with flips across the stage. He is spotted between a contortionist and a dance team, which helps plenty.

Second standout is the Emio Schmitt Trio. Two boys dressed in black, with a femme nifty in white apparel; help to get the show under way at a fast tempo due to their early placement. Props used are a 10-foot stand and a teeter-board. Two lads alternate at jumping on the raised end of the see-saw, sending the girl shooting through the air, mostly the usual stuff, but this group adds a few new touches.

Ned Haverly, billed as 'star of the late Al. G. Fields Minstrels,' takes the third edge of the spot. Act is fast and smooth, catching all the way. Uses a sand dance to close, something not seen here for some time, and it goes over big.

Henry Neiser does an imitation of a frog that is unusual. Twines his legs all over the place, using the standard stuff and then some. Zander and Xandria show some effective stepping. Their dress helps plenty as they do, in one spot, one of these modernistic dance numbers, under a green spot. Skating Swingers close the show, which they do in no uncertain terms as they tear around the boards giving out a mess of dizzy spins.

Only one or two weak spots in the show. One is Bobby Bedford, a Fred Allen amateur winner, according to the billing. He gives out some good warbling of both sentimental and swing type, but would improve his act if he stuck to the swing stuff. Anita Muth would improve if she wasn't so nasal. Has a trick with her voice that is amusing though, but doesn't use it too much.

Remaining dancers, the Ellison Sisters and Joyce Barker, both impress. Miss Barker uses the shimmy stuff to short but good effect.

Ches Davis, unit director, makes a brief appearance to plug the next week's show, welcome the folks back to the Orpheum and introduce the Skating Swingers.

Whole group is attractively costumed and stage setting is effective.

House near full when caught.

Pony that could rollerskate was jazzing business for some rinks.

General blizzard raised troubles. In Indianapolis one night performance was dropped because of the slim attendance. Even New Orleans suffered.

A ball marked the 500th performance of 'Adonis' and Thomas Paysen tried to crash the gate. The manager, John F. Donnelly, was obdurate and finally had Paysen arrested. When fined $5 Paysen was broke so Donnelly paid for him. Cutting down the profit.

Metropolitan pleased with German opera and was planning three-year contracts with the art sts and with Anton Seidl, who conducted. Good move, but around 1890 there was a crusade against the heavy German music.

Panorama building at Madison and 59th was opened with a battle picture. Later it was converted into a concert hall, in spite of a bad echo. Still, later, became the Plaza, predecessor of the new building of the same name.

Richard Mansfield signed to play Ko-Ko in the Boston (No. 2) company of the 'Mikado.'

Hawley, Pa., noted that poor shows drew better than good ones. Answer was that poor shows played to only 50c. top. Town was hard up.

Hyatt Frost was advertising he would rent the Van Amburg name with outfit for a road or rail show as preferred.

In Quincy, Ill., Isabelle Coe tore the opera house apart when she could not find her jewels after a performance. All the stage hands and the stage itself searched. Then she went to her hotel and the clerk handed her the stones. Another member of the company took them over.

J. H. Haverly in money trouble again in several spots. He never quite got over his big smash.

Lights Out

flooded with telephone calls from people who wanted to know if performances were to be given. Despite wet weather and the fact that many were marooned in apartment houses, attendance in legit theatres was not appreciably affected. Transportation was slowed because traffic lights went haywire or did not work at all. Subway trains crawled. There were 500,000 more phone calls than usual during the early hours of the evening.

RKO's losses from forced darkening of theatres were relatively small. In the 86th street and 81st street houses the managers turned to the electrical converters on the organs, while in other RKO houses in the zone north from 59th street converters were hurriedly installed. Loew, Skouras and independent houses in the affected area were closed down from 4 o'clock for the rest of the day, leaving all of what pickings there were to RKO.

Nelson Taking Cats To Floto-Barnes Trick

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Bert Nelson, Habenback-Wallace's ace act, and Alfredo Cadona, equestrian director of the circus, probably will join the renamed Sells-Floto-Al G. Barnes trick next season, inasmuch as H-W has been pulled off the road by Samuel Gumpertz.

Nelson, formerly of vaude, where he worked his lioness, Princess Pat, replaced Clyde Beatty with the H-W show, working a mixed group of 35 lions. Cadona, once famous flier, has been with the show for two years.

Barnes outfit is being built from 30 to 40 cars.

Millard Bobs Up in Frisco As West Coast's Burly King

San Francisco, Jan. 21.

S. S. Millard, onetime sex picture producer in Hollywood, has bobbed up here as the Coast's King of Burlesque, operating the Capitol and President theatres as burlesque houses with around 170 people on his payroll.

Millard's latest venture is to roadshow his strippies. Company now in rehearsal will open at the Civic Auditorium next Thursday (23) playing there three days, with George Alabama Florida, Millard's g.m., expected to line up additional booking on the Coast. Road show try was undoubtedly stimulated by the recent Minsky showing on the Coast.

Millard has been operating here for the past year. His burley offerings are the first since Clamage and Irons folded two years ago. Outside of Dalton's Follies and the Burbank in Los Angeles, the Millard shows are the only burley offerings on the Coast.

Several attempts have been made to inaugurate a semi-stock wheel between San Diego and Vancouver but failed. Two weeks ago, Edward Weinstock, son of Joe Weinstock, Minsky partner, announced that he would produce grind burlesque in Hollywood, using the Minsky name on a royalty basis and bringing his principals from New York. Plan is still in the making.

Despite the lack of interest in burley on the Coast, Dalton Bros. have been operating their Los Angeles house without a dark week, except for theatre alterations, for the past 11 years.

Though burley salaries have never been high, Coast pay is the lowest, with few, if any, of the principals getting more than $50 weekly.

Bellefontine, O., Jan. 21.

Sandy Beach Park, on Indian Lake, has been sold to the Associated Ballrooms, Inc., of Toledo, by the S. L. Wilgus Co. Will rebuild dance pavilion which was destroyed by fire in Sept.

Other concessions and rides will be rebuilt.

BAA, N. Y. Mgrs. Reach Agr'm't; Detroit Signs

igning of the new Burlesque Artist Association contract by the New York managers is due this week, with agreement finally reached on details that have been in dispute since the actors' strike last fall.

Tom Phillips, BAA president, is back from a trip to Detroit, where he obtained agreement with the three burlesque theatres there—National, Gaiety and Avenue. Among reforms subscribed to by the Detroit houses are a 1:30 p.m. curtain daily, instead of the former 12 o'clock start; a day's layoff out of every 14 for chorus girls, and pro rata pay for extra shows.

With Detroit signed up, the BAA has come to terms with 20 of the 35 regular burlesque theatres in the country. Other towns 100% signed are New York, Philadelphia, Union City, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh and Miami.

N. C. Fair Dates

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 21.

Dr. J. S. Dorton, of Shelby, re-elected president of the North Carolina Association of Agricultural Fairs.

At the meeting opening dates for 16 major fairs of the state were announced for this fall: North Carolina State Fair, Oct. 12; Rocky Mount, Sept. 28; Shelby, Louisburg, Greenville, Mebane, Reidsville and Winston-Salem, all on Oct. 5; Wilmington, Carthage and Monroe on Oct. 12; Greensboro and Henderson, Oct. 19; Tarboro, Oct. 24; Williamston, Oct. 28; and Clinton, Nov. 2.

Another Fair Back

Des Moines, Jan. 21.

Winneshiek county fair, discontinued two years ago because of withdrawal of county tax aid, to be revived this year.

This decision announced at the annual meeting of stockholders, at which time O. B. Goodno, O. J. Ness and Jas. Hepburn were re-elected directors, and Emil Rosenthal was elected to succeed P. T. Ramlo, resigned.

Three German Circuses Seek Dates in Holland

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Scheveningen, Holland's Atlantic City, boasts a permanent circus building that during the season caters to the mob by housing mostly a foreign circus, since the home industry is plenty small-time.

For next summer no less than three German circuses have submitted offers for the building, Carl Hagenbeck, Jacob Busch, and Strassburger. (Paula Busch). In view of the fact that this year of grace is the Olympic year for Germany, it's strange that Teutonic enterprises should want to go abroad at such a 'harvest.'

Carl Hagenbeck, who is now in England with his circus, was the winner. Contest closed under the concession to Hagenbeck, that no rival circuses will be able to obtain permits. Hagenbeck says he will open July 15 with a big show.

Jacob Busch and Strassburger are seeking permits from the Belgian government. The latter advises opening at Charleroi next month.

Hamid Gets 5 Years

Spartanburg, S. C., Jan. 21.

George Hamid of New York and Norman Chambliss of Rocky Mount, N. C., granted 5-year lease of privileges to operate N. C. state fair.

RADIO'S MAIN ST. COME-ON

In Two Years NBC Has Outgrown Radio City; Rehearsal Space Scarce

Even though the network has been in its Radio City quarters for only two years, the lack of adequate studio facilities has become a serious problem with NBC. When the web moved in it was certain that the studio allocations would be able to take care of all needs for at least the ensuing 10 years. How short the planners were in their estimates was revealed last week when NBC's time salesmen were informed in a memo that before closing with an account they would have to check as to the studio facilities available for rehearsal purposes.

What has aggravated the rehearsal angle is the fact that the layer-outers of the studios had not figured on so many programs with large casts and that these shows would require the advance going over that most of the agencies now make. There are lots of small studios but only three with ample space to accommodate the more extensive music and comedy setups. Network execs, in looking around for a solution to the situation, at one time entertained the idea of setting a time limit on rehearsal facilities and charging a fee for overtime use, but this was abandoned on the ground that it might prove inequitable to some of the clients and harmful to the giving of a finished performance.

CAMPUS CHAIN FOR 16 MM. PIX

Colleges of the nation will provide a new miniature circuit for release of early and up-to-date motion pictures in 16 millimeter form if plans of Museum of Modern Art Film Library materialize. The subjects, dating back to first legible films in the 19th century, will be offered universities for use as part of their dramatic art and study of the drama courses.

Jock Whitney is president of Museum of Modern Art, John Abbott active manager. The films, because of their wide scope covering acting and varied influence on the school of American drama, will trace the development of thespian art as revealed in the motion picture.

The 16 mm. film to be shown as part of the school's regular curriculum will be sent out on a rental basis.

STRUCK OIL, TURNS ANGEL

Chic York (York and King) has bought himself a piece of 'Postman Always Rings Twice,' which Jack Curtis is producing for Broadway.

The vet vaudevillian recently struck oil on his Texas property, and that's why.

$40-a-Week Import

San Francisco, Jan.

Siu Ling Sen, Chinese femme star, arrived this week to appear for a season of Oriental dramas at the Mandarin Theatre in San Francisco's Chinatown, coming direct from her native Canton.

Her contract calls for $2,000 for one year's stay.

B. O.-WISE LEGIT AUTHORS IN ON THE 'ICE'

Authors of Broadway legit shows, smartened up in a business way and no longer content with merely billing and royalties, have lately commenced to declare themselves in for a piece of all extra coin that may come in through the box office or otherwise.

The authors of at least two current shows are sharing in the ticket 'buys' in addition to customary royalties on the b.o. gross proper. Both are understood to have demanded this privilege in writing when signing production contracts.

In the past the extra coin from the 'buy' has been the exclusive property of the treasurer, house manager or producer, with authors excluded unless doubling as producers of their own shows.

Fireman, Save My Band

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 28.

Stating that their intention is solely to prevent booking agencies from sending substitute bands here to represent name bands contracted for, the Burlington Fire Fighters' Association has retained attorney in an effort to recover damages from Angelo Ferdinando, who failed to appear at the association's annual ball New Year's Eve.

Similar action against the same orchestra is being taken by the American Legion Post of Port Henry, N. Y., a neighboring community across the lake.

Gov. Landon's Show Biz P.A.

Ray LeStrange, night club press agent and former newspaper man, has been appointed eastern publicity representative for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas who will be a leading candidate for presidential nomination on the Republican ticket.

TOWNS CRAZY FOR ETHER PUBLICITY

Radio Advertisers Find Open Sesame to Many Publicity Opportunities—Chambers of Commerce Purr with Delight at Air Mention

THAT CIVIC PRIDE

Chicago,

Civic pride, that luxuriant American shrub, is being carefully watered and nursed by radio sponsors. Dedicating programs to cities costs the advertiser nothing and pays handsomely in good will.

Chambers of Commerce are push-overs for almost any kind of a press agent suggestion if the inducement of free publicity on the radio is held forth. Coffee can be roasted and sold on the court house steps if a radio announcer will only say: 'We are dedicating this program to

London, Jan. 28.

All theatres were closed today (Tuesday) for the funeral of King George, but picture houses reopened at six o'clock in the evening.

Crowds lined up in front of all cinemas an hour before the reopenings, indicating healthy trade. Picture houses are not considered formal or social here, but rather as light divertissement, so probably will do okay while legitimate productions will suffer big losses.

'Boomed by Censors'

Kansas City, Jan. 28.

The Kansas City Star waited until 'Tobacco Road' had finished its week's run at the Orpheum before expressing editorial judgment on the play. Then the paper's theatre critic said he had spent a couple of uncomfortable hours watching the performance.

Nothing happened in the way of attempts to stop its showing, and business was good.

After the show closed, the Star ran an editorial headed 'Boomed by the Censors,' which read, in part, that 'the action of authorities in Detroit and Chicago, as usual, has contributed largely to the commercial success of this victim.'

Burlesque Comics Rebel; Want to Be More Than Strippers' Stage Waits

Tired of their strictly secondary position as 'stage waits' between strip numbers, and anxious to regain their one-time professional status, comedians of burlesque will shortly get together in an effort to determine what can be done about it. Probability is they'll call a general meeting in New York under sponsorship of the Burlesque Artists Association and with the union's head, Tom Phillips, a former straight man, presiding.

Burlesque comics don't intend attempting to force elimination of the strippers, since they concede that stripping is the basis of present day burlesque, but they hope, through concerted action, to gain some prestige by increasing the value of comedy. Their first concern will be the problem of how to obtain new and better material to replace the stuff which the customers now know by heart.

Nobody realizes more than the

Radio on the Dog

'Theatre of Ideas' is being started this week by WNEW, New York. Calls for broadcasting of new radio ideas. Radio scouts to listen. Idea is for series to serve as an experimental lab or clearing house for program novelties.

Paul Rafael, head of station's continuity department, will supervise stunt.

BURNS & ALLEN GAGS FOR FRANCE

Plan whereby Burns and Allen's radio material would be adapted for French use and aired by a native comic team (unspecified) over there has been suggested by Charles Farchy, French film and radio producer to Burns and Allen. Matter is in debate.

If anything comes of the dickering, it would represent the first known instance of popular American ether fare being adapted for European airing with local substitutes filling the roles.

20TH-FOX B.R.'S GAIGE'S PLAY, BUT YENS A NAME

Difficulty in finding a suitable name player for the male lead is holding up production on a Crosby Gaige legit show, which 20th-Fox is bankrolling. Last week the producers decided they might have to settle on a non-name and called in an established character man for a reading.

The actor read the part for Gaige and the 20th-Fox people in New York and was enthusiastically received. But the picture boys wouldn't take a chance, so they're having the actor make a screen test, which will be shipped to the 20th-Fox studio on the Coast. The film studio productions heads will use the screen test to pass on the actor's stage ability.

CIRCULATING SHEETS

Salt Lake City, Jan. 28.

Now comes the circulating music library. Salt Lake City recreation department and Salt Lake Music council has launched a drive for the benefit of local music lovers desiring to borrow or rent sheet music for brief periods.

URGES FILMS FOR CHURCHES

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.

A tip for churches to adopt sound pictures as a pew-filling feature was given to the 61st annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Ohio, held here last week, by the Right Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, bishop of the diocese.

Deploring what he described as 'the emptiness of churches and the fullness of motion picture theatres,' the Bishop told 400 clergymen and laymen that 'through the sound motion picture, the Episcopal Church will make great advance in visual church education by presenting the life and history of the Church in the way that facts are presented in crowded picture houses of the country.'

His proposed attendance-building program for services is not one of light entertainment, aimed to meet the challenge of cinema chambers, but one in which 'the leading men of the Church will be brought with their personality and inspiring messages to all members.'

Inventor of Animated Cartoons Now on Dole

Paris, Jan. 28.

Emile Cohl, 80-year-old Frenchman credited with the invention of animated cartoons, is living here on $7 a month given to him by public charity, plus whatever the son of an old friend can dig up to help him.

Walt Disney is locally reported to have mentioned Cohl as his precursor in a speech recently on being decorated with the Legion of Honor cross and ribbon.

NEW DIRECTORS GUILD VOTES AGAINST ANY TIES WITH OTHER SCREEN BODIES

Seeks Political Name to Head Group—Beilenson Bows Out—Directors Aver Great Need for Organization to Combat Studios

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Following first general meeting of directors for formation of their own screen Guild, group went conservative in a big way. They voted no affiliation, working agreement or connection with any other talent craft organization, figuring the directors Guild, with representative membership included, would be strong enough to handle whatever problems that might arise without entangling alliances with other roups.

After getting negative expression from prospective members over the set of by-laws drawn so the organization could obtain incorporation papers, board of directors declared new constitution would be set up as soon as full complement of members was secured. Several directors took exception to article in by-laws which gave arbitrary powers of strike call or declaring certain studios unfair to the board without members having a voice in the action. Leaders in formation of Guild declared organization would delegate anything but matters to the board, and important situations would be presented to membership for action.

75 Members

Decision of Screen Directors Guild to steer clear of any alliances resulted in resignation of Laurence Beilenson, who had acted as attorney for the group during organization. He bowed out with explanation that he already was attorney for the Actors' and Writers' guilds, and did not wish to confuse prospective members of the directors organization by continuing.

Directors Guild announced total membership of 75 following last Wednesday's (22) mass meeting, at which total of 125 attended. Additions are expected to bring total up to 125 by the end of this week.

Proponents of the Guild declare organization is necessary as a protective measure against growing tendency of studios to attempt reduction of directors' importance and earning power. They state that, regardless of further increase in membership, group will continue in a determined manner. There is talk of going out for a big political name head the Guild, with several members willing to underwrite such an employment contract until organization is a self-sustaining basis.

Screen Directors Guild is talking to Major Joseph O. Donovan, former Variety Managers Protective Association arbitrator in New York and code authority rep here, to become its executive secretary. Committee interviewed, and matter to be decided at a meeting tomorrow (Wednesday).

Studios' Watchful Wait

Studio heads became upset over sudden formation of the director group, although no outward move was made to stop its organization. One company official sent for an ace director who was listed as a leader of the Guild and offered him a producer contract if he resigned from the Guild and gave up his activities in it.

Constitution provides for an assistant directors' branch of the Guild, which would have its own board of directors and officers operating under the wing of the senior body.

MARX GETS DECISION IN LYONS' 250G SUIT

Los Angeles, Jan.

Suit filed by Arthur S. Lyons against Zeppo Marx, Inc., for $250,000 because he allegedly enticed Fred MacMurray away from the Lyons agency has been dismissed in Federal court.

Action brought in 1934 charged that after Lyons had taken MacMurray from a $60 weekly orchestra job and secured for him a contract at Paramount for $250 weekly with options over seven years which would bring actor $1,500 a week, Marx, Inc., allegedly induced MacMurray to sign an agency contract with the rival agency.

H. T. SHARP'S $519,648 PLANE CRASH SUIT

Los Angeles, Jan.

Suit seeking $519,648 damages has been filed against Transcontinental Western Air by Henry T. Sharp, Paramount cameraman, injured in a plane crash last May.

Five persons were killed, including Mrs. William Kaplan, wife of William Kaplan, assistant producer, in smashup at Atlanta, Mo., outside of Kansas City.

Several members of Paramount's 'Annapolis Farewell' unit were flying to eastern location. Those seriously injured included Sharp, Richard Wallace, director of the pic; Paul Wing, unit manager; Kaplan and C. D. Drew, electrician.

Par Dropping Carlisle

Hollywood, . 28.

Paramount will not option Kitty Carlisle when her contract expires in February. Her last picture was in Metro's 'Night at the Opera,' on loanout.

Deal at Paramount provided for four pix, each having a five-week guarantee. On two of them she received $2,500 each weekly and $3,000 each on the remaining duo.

Acad's Directors Awards; No Talk Of New Film Guild

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Five members of the executive committee of the directors branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences met last night (Monday) to discuss the matter of the awards banquet and membership drive, and the means of turning out representative members of their craft for the banquet. Matter of the formation of the Screen Directors Guild was not discussed as only two members of the Committee had attended the Guild meeting and feeling was, as Guild had stated no direct grievances, that there was no reason for the Academy group to bring the matter to the attention of the producers.

Those who attended were Frank Capra, president of the Academy; Norman Taurog, C. B. DeMille, W. S. Van Dyke and Clarence Brown. DeMille was at the Guild meeting as was Brown, who, with Van Dyke, joined the new Guild. Absentees from the meeting were Frank Borzage, Irving Cummings, Frank Lloyd and Alfred E. Green. Borzage is reported as joining the Directors Guild.

HOWARD'S 'HAMLET,' THEN AS KORDA FILM

When Leslie Howard completes his run in 'Hamlet' in New York, he will go to London to make a film of it for London Films (Alexander Korda). Play is skedded to open in New York late next month and will have a limited run under Howard's own management.

Warners was talking about making the film with Howard, but Korda has Howard under contract and figures it's a story he'd rather make himself than permit others.

Potter Prowls Legit

Henry Potter, of Samuel Goldwyn's west coast staff, is in New York to make tests of Broadway stage talent for producer's forthcoming films.

Potter expects to pick up several legit names while here on four-week trip. Freddie Kohlmar, Goldwyn's casting director is also east.

Old Folks at Home

20th-Fox to Make Great American Family Opus in 4 Stanzas

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Quartet of films titled 'Our American Family; along the line of 'One Man's Family,' radio serial, which Paramount has optioned, will be produced by 20th-Fox. First will be 'Every Saturday Night,' which has been produced by Sol Wurtzel.

Same cast of Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, June Lang, Thomas Beck, June Carlson and Ken Powell will appear in the four. James Tinling directed 'Saturday Night,' orig by Katharine Kavanagh. Pair probably will handle others in series.

Twentieth-Fox's success with the Charlie Chan series caused Darryl Zanuck to decide on the quartet.

Dismiss $1,000,000 Suit Vs. Dionnes-Pathe in Chi

Federal yesterday (Monday) dismissed the suit of the Century of Progress Tour Bureau against Pathe News for $1,000,000 damages over the filming of the Dionne quints. Tour Bureau claimed it not only held contract for the personal appearances of the quints but also controlled all film rights.

Court, however, held that contract was technically defective on several counts, on the plea of the Pathe attorney, Dave Kahane.

NAPOLEONIC REWARD

Rains Will Be WB Little Corporal,' If, He Clicks in Bit

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Claude Rains will bicycle between Warners 'Anthony Adverse' and Marion Davies' 'Hearts Divided' when latter production resumes work. He will do Napoleon in the latter.

If he clicks in 'Hearts' he'll probable go into Warners 'Napoleon' which was originally intended for Edward G. Robinson.

OAKIE AND PAR PART AFTER 8 YRS.; TO 20TH

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Jack Oakie ends eight-year contract with Paramount Aug. 27 and is reported as already signed by Darryl Zanuck for 20th Century-Fox starting Sept. Salary at the new spot will be $3,000, against the $2,000 Oakie is now getting. Eddie Small (Reliance) also wants Oakie under the Rel-RKO distrib deal.

Contract is understood to have been signed by Zanuck, with the Small-Landau agency acting for Oakie. Zanuck is set to star him after his performance in 'King of Burlesque,' for which he had been loaned.

In the past six years Oakie has had various entanglements with Paramount over parts, coin, etc., and in one instance walked out and held up 'Paramount On Parade' until salary adjustments were made.

RKO Wants Spen Tracy In 'Plough and Stars'

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Sydney's American Colony

Twelvetrees, Langdon, Seward, Zane Grey There; Farrell Due

Sydney, Jan.

American pic colony here continues to grow. Charles Farrell is due for the lead in 'The Flying Doctor' for National Productions. Miles Mander, from London, will direct, with Fox G-B handling distribution.

Americans already here are Helen Twelvetrees, Edmond Seward and Zane Grey. Miss Twelvetrees is on location with 'Thoroughbred' for Cinesound, and Seward is scenarist for the same unit. Zane Grey arrived this week to do some fishing, but will also work on a pic in conjunction with Cinesound.

Stuart F. Doyle, m.d., of Cinesound, says that many more American players will be engaged for the 1936 schedule.

Harry Langdon has also arrived under engagement to Williamson-Tait for a legit run in 'Anything Goes.' Probable that Langdon will make a pic during his stay, also.

Idea behind the importations is to insure pix produced in Australia landing bookings in England and America.

FAIRBANKS JR. DUE WITH 1ST BRIT. PIC

Esquire's Show-Cause Order in Astaire's $25,000 Damage Suit

'Esquire' magazine has been given until Thursday (30) to answer a show cause order in N. Y. Supreme Court why it should not be restrained from using the photo of Fred Astaire in a jewelry advertisement in the January issue. Astaire has instituted a suit for $25,000 against the magazine, Baer & Wilde Co., Inc., jewelry manufacturers, and Malcolm & Engel, advertising agency, alleging his photo was used without consent. The magazine also must show cause why copies of the current issue should not be withdrawn from the newsstands.

In his affidavit, executed in Los Angeles, Astaire said his photograph showed him in full dress attire and wearing "gawdy" jewelry. The caption of the advertisement proclaimed 'Top Hat Evening Jewelry as Inspired by Fred Astaire in 'Top Hat'.' Dancer's complaint avers 'I am being exposed to public ridicule and contempt.'

He further complained that the ad is also being widely displayed in various haberdashery windows and stores. The defendants, except 'Esquire,' have already filed an answer to the suit, entering a general denial.

278,486 JOBS PAID $2,571,000

$586,596 Increase Over '34 Gives Mobsters Top Year in Central History—27,689 More Spots—Men Planted in 60% of Assignments

HEAVY RACIAL CALL

with and without the Code, showed an increase of around 11% in the number of placements by the Central Casting Corporation, which during the 12 months landed 278,486 jobs for extras, who drew a total of $2,571,293.64 from the coffers of the producers of Hollywood, with the average pay check being hopped to $9.23 a person.

The increase in total expenditure over 1934 is $586,596.10, making it the biggest year in earnings for the extra mob since the founding of the Central casting offices, with the exception of 1927, while 27,689 more jobs were allotted with this expenditure.

Of the total amount expended, men drew almost 60%, as they received $1,521,017.40 for their chores, with the money being cut up among 182,650 placements. The $7.50 and $10 jobs were most numerous, as in the former class $416,977.50 was divided among 55,597 calls and $530,470 went to 53,047 in the $10 group. This was close to 60% of the placements for men, with the $15 dress-up boys getting 12% of the jobs, to the tune of $328,860, which was split among 21,924.

The amount of placements for the men was 55,199 above the year 1934, with the jobs in every class increasing considerably over that year. The boys who got $3.20 checks increased from 1,839 to 13,443, which in coin meant a difference of $37,132.80 in earnings over the previous year, when only $5,884.80 was expended.

There was an expenditure of $187,530 for 37,506 in the $5 division, being an increase of 38,605 over 1934. The $12.50 checks were the smallest in number, as only 1,133 placements were made in that division for a total of $14,162.50, against 827 the year before, the increase being $3,825.

Year of Gigantics

In the class ranging from $3.20 to $7.50 a day there were 24,024 racial group placements, due to costume, spectacle and big production being made. Of the racial selections, 5,705 jobs went to Negroes, 2,804 to Chinese, 2,499 to English, 2,232 to French, 1,873 to Hawaiians, 1,595 to Mexicans, 1,450 to Russians, 1,389 to Italians, 1,029 to Spanish, 711 to Arabians, 518 to Scotch, 545 to Poly-

Encino Bids for Fame

Filmdom's Landed Gentry Putting Sun-Baked Town on Map

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

You've probably never heard of Enci Cal., but you will. It's a sun-baked community some 18 miles in the San Fernando valley from Hollywood. Edward Everett Horton bought five acres there several years ago and the exodus started. Now it's the happy valley of landed gentry from Hollywood who like to putter around their acreage as gentlemen farmers.

Encino has several problems so a Chamber of Commerce has been organized consisting of Al Jolson, Bert Kalmer, W. C. Fields, Robert Hopkins, Paul Muni, Spencer Tracey, Nacio Herb Brown, Arthur Freed and Horton. They're a determined band of civic-minded individuals, as are all C. of C's.

Despite their esthetic leanings, there's a few things that have to be done to Encino along the line of modern conveniences which are dear to the hearts of all burghers. For instance, Encino could use a few street lights, a sidewalk or two and some sewers.

Having been a bit lax in this respect, the C. of C. was organized to see them through. Hereafter on a Friday night, instead of ducking to the fights, the brave band of Lairds of the Valley will foregather at the Encino Town Hall, spend their evening looking over the plans and specifications of the various accessories that make present day living a bit more pleasant.

Acad Survey Shows 974 Players Earned Screen Credits Last Year

Hollywood, Jan.

Out of around 2,500 established featured screen actors dependent more or less upon motion pictures for a livelihood, only 974 participated in one or more screen credited jobs during 1935, according to survey disclosed by Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Canvass showed that out of 430 feature length pictures shown in Los Angeles during 1935 only 974 actors were cast in 2,189 principal roles. This means an average of two and half roles per actor, including those under contract and freelance players.

Further analysis shows that out of the group of 974 working featured players, 59 performed 400 roles, 237 had 903 parts and 678 appeared in 886 pictures.

Par Board's Meet to Take Up Theatre Partnerships; Await Otterson's Report on Production

Paramount's board of directors at its coming session may likely devote considerable deliberation to the problems arising from certain of the company's existing theatre partnerships.

The Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell partnership, in Texas, is one of these matters. Another may be the A. H. lank deal. There is no official indications about both.

Apparently the Par studio situation will await John E. Otterson's personal report when the Par prexy gets back from the Coast where he is now inquiring into production matters. Otterson is expected to remain west for another 10 days or longer.

Certain Paramount minority security holders have protested to members of the board against extension of the Hoblitzell-O'Donnell partnership. Certain members of the board also have taken positions against extension of the deal on the present basis. Minority security holders are understood to feel that a management deal would best serve Par's interests in Texas. Thus, if the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell partnership does not continue as is, it may be modified, providing the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell interests concur. Under the repurchase clause in this partnership as in others, Par has the right to buy back the theatres on certain terms as per agreement.

Hoblitzelle Setup

Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell chain numbers approximately 80 theatres covering the state of Texas and includes the Interstate Circuit. These theatres gave more than a $400,000 dividend for 1935 on the company's 50% interest, indicating that the houses have earned around $1,000,000 for the past year.

Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell are understood to feel that rather than take a management deal from Par on the Texas circuits they would prefer to establish their own business in that territory.

Just how much it would take for Par to regain 100% control is not at hand, but unofficially it is estimated at least $2,500,000 would be the figure.

A quorum was unobtainable for the Paramount board meeting of Thursday (23) and while several of the company directors met, their session was unofficial. The regular board meeting was, therefore, postponed until yesterday (Tues.).

Wall Street estimates of Paramount's earnings for 1935 are approximately $5,300,000. The estimated earnings included a dividend of over $400,000 from the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell operations in Texas.

John E. Otterson, company president, is still on the Coast. His absence probably means that full discussion of Par's financial and production situations may be put over for a time.

Paramount is continuing to operate its northwestern Finkelstein & Ruben circuit under direct home office supervision, with John J. Friedl and L. J. Ludwig in charge at Minneapolis. There are no negotiations open at the present time to turn this division into a partnership. Reported for some time that Friedl and Ludwig were favored for a management and percentage contract, based on the showing made by this operating duo in the last few months.

Friedl is due in New York this week, but not on any deal to take over F. & R. on a management-percentage basis, according to Y. Frank Freeman. It's principally to discuss bookings and product deals. Friedl was desirous of getting a partnership deal in Texas, the territory from which he was shifted to Minneapolis a couple of years ago, but nothing has been worked out for him there.

Beery's Personals

Loew's is in negotiation with Wallace Beery for a series of personal appearances in the east in the circuit's theatres. P.a.'s will probably be at the star's Metro salary.

No deal had been set up to yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon.

Reliance Picts Via RKO Release For 3 Yrs.; Small Producing on Lot

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Reliance Pictures and its principals, Harry M. Goetz, president, and Eddie Small, v.p. and producer, have signed a three-year deal with RKO Radio to make their own pictures and distribute through that organization. Small will also function as an RKO associate producer. Though Reliance still has 'Last of the Mohicans' to deliver to United Artists, Small started yesterday (Monday) at RKO and it's likely that one of the three Reliance pics, and possibly one RKO film, will be made by him prior to the completion of "Mohicans."

Reliance will finance its own pictures, with RKO distributing on the basis of giving the initial cost back to Reliance after which it splits 50-50 on the distribution take. Small, on basis of two pix or more a year for RKO, will get a salary besides a percentage of the profits of pictures made.

First will be with Robert Donat, whom he brings over under personal contract for three pictures, first story being based on the life of Jim Fisk by Matthew Josephson titled 'The Robber Barons.' Small also figures on making a series with Jack Oakie when the latter is free of other contractual obligations.

He will also bring over to RKO Gordon Jones, character actor, and two cameramen under Reliance contract.

SPINGOLD EAST

Pickford-Lasky—Cold—Columbia Status Still Indef

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Nate Spingold, his deal not having jelled with Lasky-Pickford to provide finances, ieft yesterday (Monday) for New York to return to his Columbia post, where he still has a month to go on his contract.

Though both Harry Jack Cohn declare he is through at Col, there's still a likelihood of Spingold getting a new deal in N. Y. He has been living with Harry Cohn here, and it's understood they have come to an understanding on a possible new arrangement.

Jack Cohn states that any new contract with Spingold would be made on the Coast.

Miljan Draws Lead in 'Milk and Honey' at U

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Universal has spotted John Miljan as lead in 'Milk and Honey,' on completing 'I Loved a Soldier' at Paramount. Carl Laemmle, Jr., will produce the orig yarn by Melville Baker.

RKO Reorg. Plan May Be Ready Next Month; Hope for Final Shedding of the 77B by June 1

RKO's reorganization work is progressing, although a definitive plan has not been formulated as yet. There appears to be a good chance for a plan being offered, however, some time in February. The trade and the financial interests are hopeful that RKO will emerge from its 77B situation by June 1.

All of the RKO interests are cooperating with this in view.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum, operating as an entity, may show an estimated net profit of approximately $350,000 for 1935. However, the consolidated RKO net theatre income, inclusive of the KAO profit, may be under this figure considerably. Unofficial estimates put the amount at approximately $200,000.

Some of the RKO theatres may require underlying adjustments.

The earnings of RKO's picture end for 1935 are unofficially estimated at more than $1,000,000.

There is some talk that the Rockefeller Center claim of $9,000,000, now pending before the courts, may be adjusted satisfactorily on the outside. Such adjustment would hasten RKO's reorganization. Inclusive of the R. C. claim, the aggregate RKO claims would total presently around $30,000,000.

The total RKO claims include approximately $13,800,000 of secured claims such as the $11,600,000 6% debentures; $1,118,000 6% Pathe notes; and the $1,100,000 6% notes held by Consolidated (Yates) Lab, remaining from the old Chemical Bank-C.I.T. transaction.

Of the estimated aggregate amount of claims, around $3,500,000 are now under negotiation for compromise and adjustment.

$2,000,000 Bankroll All Set For Pickford-Lasky's Productions

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

New combination producing unit, lckford-Lasky Corp., reported for several weeks likely to dissolve with completion of first picture for United Artists release, Francis Lederer in 'One Rainy After is - tinue definitely under a new and adequate financing program. Second production, starring Nino Martini, Metropolitan opera star in 'Goodnight, Lover, Goodnight,' will start May 1.

Reported that finances of $2,000,000 will be subscribed by a New York group to Mary Pickford and Jesse L. Lasky. Guy Cary, attorney, is here now working out the details. Franchise for United Artists distribution for a period of years is regarded as a valuable company asset. Four pictures are listed for this season, with number to be made increasing yearly.

James Seymour has been signed to a term contract to produce and write for Pickford-Lasky. His first production will be 'Godnight, Lover, Goodnight' (temporary title, after the theme song), starring Nino Martini. He is working with writers on the script. At the same time the deal was signed by Lasky, Universal had a similar arrangement with Seymour, but Willliam Koenig, U studio exec, waived Seymour to Lasky. Deal for Seymour was handled by the Sam Jaffe office.

S. E. C. REVEALS B&K 'SECRET' REPORT

Washington, Jan. 28.

Securities & Exchange Commission last week revealed first confidential information for a film company by publishing secret salary and operating data filed by Balaban & Katz, Chicago.

Removing seals from the B&K report, Commish disclosed that in 1934 Barney Balaban, president, and John Balaban, secretary-treasurer, drew a salary of $78,000 each; Walter Immerman v.p., collected $15,080.

Confidential info also showed Balaban circuit comprises 49 houses, of which only 15 are owned outright, remaining 34 being leased.

Cohn, Loew, Laemmle

Changes in stock holdings of officers of three film corporations during the latter part of December were revealed Friday (24) by Federal Securities & Exchange Commission.

Benefiting from stock dividends, Jack Cohn boosted his holdings of Columbia Pictures Corp. through an increase of 160 shares of common held directly and 12,544 held through voting trust agreement. Brings his total direct interest to 481 shares of common and 55 shares of convertible preferred, plus 37,633 owned through the trust agreement.

Disclaiming any direct interest, Arthur M. Loew reported sale of 353 shares of Loew's, Inc. common by his personal holding company, wiping out his interest in this class of securities.

Carl Laemmle reported a gain of 48 shares in Universal common through two voting trust agreements in which he participated and a gain of 4 shares of U second preferred. At the end of the month his holdings aggregated 53,708 common through one trust agreement and 120,159 through a second, as well as 15,707 second preferred owned directly.

Belated report on stock holdings showed William A. Parker, of Boston, director, owning 100 shares of Loew's common.

TAX HIATUS

Stall roduction as Calif. State Tax Bite Comes Up

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Annual state tax on completed negative in California, as of March 4 is slowing production at every studio same as every year. Although the rate is not established until June, likely that it'll be 4.72% of assessed valuation, same as last year.

Currently there are 40 indie and major pictures in work, with around half that number laying off around tax time to avoid the state bite. Heavy pickup is foreseen after the appraisers make their rounds.

WANT JOHNSTON BACK AS PREZ OF REPUBLIC

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

W. Ray Johnston, recuperating from pneumonia in Florida, is mulling a contract submitted him by Herbert Yates of Consolidated Film Laboratories to again become president of Republic, it is understood. Yates is reported having decided as acting too hastily in buying out interests of Trem Carr and Johnston in Republic setup.

Former Monogram franchise holders have expressed their attitude that they went into the Republic fold because Carr and Johnston were at the helm. Franchise holders also are reported kicking over delay of Republic forces in getting films into the exchanges.

Yates is now en route to the Coast from New York in an effort to speed up production. Herman Rivkin is accompanying him.

After a confining illness of three weeks W. Ray Johnston, president of Republic, left last week for St. Petersburg, Fla.

Johnston has been suffering from bronchial pneumonia. Plans to be back in New York Feb. 7.

CARR MAY SET UP INDIE DISTRIB BIZ

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Blocked by an agreement with Republic which prevents him from reentering independent production for another year, Trem Carr is planning to go into the indie distribution field.

Carr, with W. Ray Johnston, established the Monogram franchise system which was in effect when he left Republic. He may establish similar system in the indie field, and possibly will franchise a number of producers to supply the product.

Zukor Stays East

Adolph Zukor is remaining east for an indefinite period, calling off original plans to visit the studio around the first of the year or shortly after.

John E. Otterson, president now in Hollywood, has made several trips west. He's to stay west another fortnight or so.

LLOYD SHIFTS TO PAR

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Frank Lloyd, upon completion of 'Under Two Flags' for 20th-Fox about May 1, will be finished with that company on a term deal and moves over to Paramount as a producer-director with his own unit and no front-office supervision.

FILMS DISCOUNT ITS B. O. THREAT

Watching Tele Experimentation but Boxoffice, Whether Films or Stage, Held Unlikely to Suffer—Home-Use Chiefly

NOVELTY ANGLE

Television is being given consideration by the film biz. No policy has been formulated thus far, although Haysian officials are mulling the situation determine whether to encourage it, ignore it or to combat it.

Hays organization is cognizant of the test programs which Radio Corp. of America will carry on this and next year. During 1936, this television testing will be done between N. Y. and Philadelphia and through its labs at Camden, N. J., with the American Telephone & Telegraph co-axial cable called into play to further the test set-up. Haysites also are aware of growing talk that television may be actually closer than thought possible six months ago.

Attitude of members of Motion Picture Producers & Distributors association is that currently television holds little threat until it can be projected in a theatre with the same perfection as present talking pictures. This would mean that television pictures would have to be of equal clarity and sound and create the same illusion of reality on the screen before they will be

Selznick-Int'l to Move Its Executive Offices to Coast

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

John Wharton, treasurer of Selznick-International, on arrival on the Coast from New York yesterday (Monday), announced that all the executive offices of the company are being moved to the Coast. Also likely, he said, that the financial heads will be quartered here.

Loss of time and expense in spanning the country is the reason for Coast concentration. Accompanying Wharton here were Katherine Brown, eastern story editor, and Dorothy Modisett, her aide.

30-Day Extension on Universal Buy Given to Rogers-Cowdin; British B. R. of $2,000,000 Fades

Hollywood, Jan.

Carl Laemmle granted a 30-day extension on Saturday (25) to the Charles R. Rogers-J. Cheever Cowdin group to pick up their option on Universal. This gives them until March 1 to get set for the takeover, and it's understood this is time enough for them to corral all the coin needed for the entire deal and guarantee to Laemmle on future payments.

Understood that, with a $2,000,000 loan from British capital out, because the latter wanted to be partners in the company instead of accepting debentures for the loan, Cowdin is rustling a new loan of the same amount in N. Y. currently. Universal is reported currently as having enough coin to finish the present crop of pictures and to put three in work in February. Cowdin is head of Standard Capital Corp.

Rogers is making his headquarters at Universal pending the close of the proposition one way or the other. When deal is set to close, Laemmle will go to N. Y. for that purpose.

J. R. Grainger, Universal sales head, left Sunday (26) for N. Y. after setting the production schedule until July with assurances that all product up to that time will be delivered per sked.

Nathanson-Blumey Out of Loew's Poli?

There are rumblings that N. L. Nathanson and A. C. Blumenthal, partners with Loew in the Poli-New England group of theatres, are willing to consider disposing of their interest. Same kind of reports link Paramount as a likely purchaser of said interest through Pinanski & Mullen. P. & M. operates Par's N. E. theatres.

Loew's, with Nathanson and Blumenthal acquired control of the Poli chain, upon that circuit's reorganization around a year ago. This is the chain of approximately 15 theatres formerly known as Fox-New England and for which William Fox once paid $18,000,000 for control.

SCHACH TO UA AS 2D BRIT PROD.

London, Jan. 19.

Entry of Max Schach, Vinnese ex-newspaperman and head of Capitol Films, into producer-membership of United Artists, thus making him the second English organizer to join the American company, will be announced publicly by Sam Goldwyn when he arrives in England.

Schach has a releasing contract through C. M. Woolf's new concern, General Film Distributors, also.

Since making 'Abdul the Damned,' with which he opened in this field, Schach has completed four pictures, with plans for a dozen this year. Understanding now is his entry into U. A. will considerably alter his schedule. On joining them he will move to Denham, where Alex Korda has built a new studio, and make six U. A. pix during 1936.

He will meantime conclude his contract with Woolf, making all the pictures already scheduled under it.

Bergerman Agenting

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Stanley Bergerman, son-in-law of Carl Laemmle and former Universal producer and g.m. of U has turned agent with offices on the Sunset boulevard strip.

Metro Execs on Coast; Thalberg Pact, New Films

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

With the arrival today from New York of a number of top Loew-Metro executives is seen the renewal of the offer made Irving Thalberg last December for a new 10-year contract with the company. Schenck made the offer last time, with Lep Friedman and Bob Rubin set to come out and close the deal at the time. Thalberg goes to Europe in May for a possible six-month stay.

Likely also that the New York execs will also take up the matter of placing more important names in so-called B+ product for better selling values.

Group, with studio execs, tomorrow (Wednesday) will look at 'Great Ziegfeld' to determine on what editorial measures will be taken on the picture. Currently it's around 15,000 feet with 'A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody' production number now being shot and running around 1,000 feet to be added. Studio men figure picture has plenty of entertainment values for it to run in full length, or 150 minutes, and want to prove that by roadshowing in key cities, guaranteeing six-month clearance before general release. This way the picture will be a single-biller even in the subsequent run houses. Toward the end of the week the picture will be previewed in full-length, after which the New York and local chiefs will decide on the footage.

E. M. Saunders, western Metro sales head, arrives here today (Tuesday) with Felix Feist and Al Lichtman on studio production conferences, coming from Frisco.

Metro executives will converge at the Coast studio for conferences on production and distribution some time this week, with Nicholas M. Schenck, J. Robert Rubin, Leopold Friedman and Howard Dietz shoving off from New York last Friday (24) for the west.

Felix F. Feist, Metro's sales head, is now on the Coast, along with Al Lichtman.

Skouras Orders All Fox Theatre Mgrs. to Plug Par Product to Hilt

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Spyros Skouras has sent a personal letter to every house manager, district and zone manager in the theatres under his control, taking in Wesco, Fox Wesco and the Fox houses in New York, a total of about 500, telling the men to get behind Paramount product and pictures in every possible way and to give Paramount pictures every break in cooperation to put these flickers over ith the public and at the box office.

Not only does the Skouras letter to the men in the field order this cooperation but tells every man to phone or contact the manager of the local Paramount exchange and inform him of the campaign to back up Paramount pictures. And as a final push the Skouras memo instructs theatre managers to write letters direct to Nell Agnew, sales chief of Paramount, informing Ag new of the individual man's readiness to cooperate with Paramount pictures.

GOETZ BACK, MG INDEF POSTPONES ENG. PROD.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

English production of Metro pictures for quota purposes has been indefinitely postponed, with Ben Goetz returning to New York today (Tuesday) from abroad and flying to the Coast for a conference with Nicholas M. Schenck and other company heads.

Plan was for Goetz to rent studio space in London for a series of pictures starting next month, with a skeleton crew and players from here.

Spitz West Feb. 20

Leo Spitz, president of RKO, will go to Hollywood Feb. 20 for confabs with Samuel Briskin and B. B. Kahane.

He'll remain west two weeks.

U. S. PROSECUTING ATT'Y IN SURPRISE MOTION ASKS ST. L. CASE DISMISSAL

Without Prejudice to a New Government Action, Hardy Wants to Institute a New Proceeding to Join Certain Other Individuals as Co-defendants —Government, in Fourth Week of Civil Suit, Has Been Suffering Many Legal Setbacks Before Judge Molyneaux — Will Probably Grant It

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

Russell Hardy, special assistant U. S. Attorney General, prosecuting the Equity case in which the Department of Justice is seeking to restrain Warner Bros., Paramount, RKO and affiliated officers from continuing to refuse films to Fanchon & Marco theatres here, exploded a bomb in court today when he filed a motion asking Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux to dismiss without prejudice the case in order that the government may file a new suit joining several individual officers of the above-mentioned companies as co-defendants. Supplementing his motion Hardy said to the court, 'After serious and mature consideration of rulings of the court yesterday, I wish to state with the greatest deference and respect to the court and your honor, we feel an adequate and complete exposition of the facts in this matter requires that many individual actors in the conspiracy must be made defendants in the case.'

Hardy's motion was a complete surprise to defense counsel, even in face of adverse rulings to the government's case, given by Judge Molyneaux on Monday (27). Judge Molyneaux granted defense counsel an opportunity to cite any court decisions in opposition.

Judge Molyneaux is expected to grant the Government's motion for dismissal without prejudice tomorrow (Wednesday), as before adjourning he said, 'I am of the opinion they (Government) have an absolute right to dismiss, but, of course, I will hear you.' He told both sides to be as brief as possible tomorrow morning because, if he granted the request, he wanted to catch the 2 p.m. train for Minneapolis.

Will Decide Wed. (29)

Judge Molyneaux did not make a final decision today, as Frederick H. Wood of WB said he hadn't had time to confer with the rest of defense attorneys, but believes there is no absolute right of dismissal, with or without prejudice. He asked for recess until 10 a.m. Wednesday to prepare affidavits to establish hardships and injustices which may be imposed on defendants, if case is dismissed without prejudice, enabling Government to refile case. Hardy indicated if his motion is sustained Government's amended petition will be filed here as it affects property in St. Louis.

The government suffered severe reverses Monday (27) as the trial entered its fourth week in sub-zero weather. First came during the morning session when Judge Molyneux ruled that testimony concerning profit and loss accounts was irrelevant to the issues of the case. Defense argued to admit such evidence on the ground it would open a gateway for causes of profit and loss and would bring into case such facts as bank nite, automobile giveaways, etc., which have no bearing on case.

Second setback occurred after Harry Arthur, v.p. of Fanchon & Marco interests here, and considered a star witness for the government concluded his testimony. On direct examination he repeated the testimony given by him in the criminal case relating to conversations with Gradwell Sears, Abel Cary Thomas and Herman Starr of Warner Bros, Ned E. Depinct of RKO and George J. Schaefer of Par.

Frederick H. Wood for WB. asked Arthur three questions: If, at the meeting on March 6, 1934, he had gone there for purpose of buying pictures, buying the Shubert-Rialto theatre or selling out to WB. When Arthur answered each question in negative, Wood, joined by Louis Philips for Par, and George C. Leisure for RKO asked that Arthur's testimony be stricken out on the ground it was mere conversation and did not relate to any particular business transaction. Judge Molyneux's action in sustaining the objection was a heavy blow to the government.

A bad tooth laid Judge Molyneaux low Saturday (25) and hearings were continued until Monday.

Attempt of the government to establish point that Adolph Zukor had the power in 1934 to offer Par films to F&M for exhibition at latter's five theatres here falled Friday (24) when Judge Molyneaux, sticking to earlier decision that whatever Zukor said to F&M several years ago was not binding, as his company was in receivership and bankruptcy at time.

Chas. D. Hilles on Stand

Charles D. Hilles, co-trustee in bankruptcy for Par, called by Russell Hardy, U. S. attorney, testified that when Par Publix went into receivership in January, 1933, and bankruptcy three months later, Zukor, then president of Par Pictures Corp., was given supervision of production of films on the west coast while George J. Schaefer was given control over distribution and exhibition. Hardy's efforts to prove that Zukor's powers, when trustees went in, were equal to or greater than that of Schaefer in commitment of Par films failed when Judge Molyneaux sustained objections made by Louis Philips, Par attorney.

Philips argued that Hilles would be merely 'concluding' if he attempted to define Zukor's definite powers as he previously had testified that Zukor had no authority to speak for his company about films in 1934.

Hardy's attempts to introduce records of Orpheum and Shubert-Rialto theatres here to show they had lost money, as part of evidence that WB, which obtained houses in 1933, was carrying out a threat to throw their resources against F&M was ruled out by Judge Molyneaux when defense counsel asserted such testimony was irrelevant.

RKO, lead by Jacob M. Lashly, won a point when Lashly obtained the Court's consent to strike from the records evidence of Milton Arthur relative to conversation with Jules Levy, general sales manager for RKO in November, 1934, on grounds that Levy was not engaged in company business but merely conversing casually with Arthur, although conversation took place in RKO's Los Angeles office.

Government succeeded in getting before the Court income tax data showing assets of defendant companies and their affiliation, but Judge Molyneaux, after former Senator Reed had argued against its admissability, made it clear that the

'Rose-Marie,' 'Anything Goes,' 'Strike Me Pink' Songs All Restricted

Release of Metro's 'Rose-Marie' the coming week will provide the film industry with another major test of the exploitation restrictions existing over NBC and CBS as a result of the breakaway of the Warner Bros. publishing firms from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. 'Rose-Marie' score is controlled by Harms, Inc., and WB refuses to budge from its refusal of several weeks ago to permit any station without a Warner license to broadcast the 'Marie' music.

Picture version of 'Rose-Marie' contains two new tunes, 'Serenade Just for You' and 'Pardon Me, Madame,' the first also controlled by Harms and the latter by the Robbins Music Corp. This situation leaves but one song out of the film that may receive clearance over outlets licensed by ASCAP.

Another release in which a Warner Bros. music firm, also Harms, controls the performing (small) rights is Paramount's 'Anything Goes.' Broadcasting of this score is also restricted to those individual stations which have licenses with WB.

Eddie 'Strike Me Ink' (UA) score experienced the same non-radio exploitation restrictions.

BOYLAN LEAVING U FOR NEW SCRIB DEAL

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Universal will not exercise its option on Malcolm Stuart Boylan when he winds up as scenario editor and associate producer in mid-February, at his own request.

Boylan wants to go back to writing and has two deals on with other majors.

'Texas Ranger' to Be Par's Outdoor Special

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Walter Prescott Webb's novel, 'The Texas Ranger,' has been bought by Paramount to supplant 'Buffalo Bill' as studio's outdoor special next year.

Yarn written around Sam Houston and the Rangers.

Metro's 'Rose-Marie' Push

Loew's has pulled 'Rose-Marie' from first run key engagements set for Friday (31) everywhere except at the Capitol, New York, to enable the circuit to get behind the picture on a national campaign.

Loew home office has budgeted 2,500 line ads in a national campaign, as against the average 1,200 ads, and instructed all large keys to go to town on the picture for Feb. 7 playdates.

Franklin to Direct 'Earth,' Fleming Ill

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Victor Fleming, who had to relinquish assignment to direct 'The Good Earth' at Metro on account of ill health, has been supplanted by Sidney Franklin. Irving Thalberg produces.

W. S. Van Dyke, also approached to handle 'Earth,' will direct Jeanette MacDonald and Clarke Gable in 'San Francisco.'

HEYBURN TO METRO

Weldon Heyburn, the lead in 'I Want a Policeman,' current Broadway legit, has been signatured by Metro for pictures on completion of his role in the stage production.

etro Renews Igor Gorin

Igor Gorin, operatic singer, has had his contract renewed for another six months by Metro.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Universal newsreel has a flock of letters protesting against speech made by General Mitchell in recent issue. Bulk of these come from film department of the National Council for Prevention of War, at the rate of about 50 notes per day. Most of them charge that Mitchell's talk, on the inadequacy of U. S. air force, contained dangerous news. Charles Ford, editor of U reel, disclaims any attempt to editorialize, contending that it was an impartial handling of news item. Idea for Mitchell's camera talk was gleaned from feature item carried by daily newspapers.

It isn't often that a screen treatment jibes with the author's idea of how it should be handled, and much more rare when both the author and producer of stage play agree that the job's well done. That's the unusual circumstance surrounding Warners' adaptation of 'Petrified Forest.' Both Gilbert Miller, the stager, and Robert E. Sherwood, who created the piece, have signified their satisfaction of the handling in such positive fashion that they will use the screen technique in London production of the play this summer, they've announced.

Publicity department at one of the Coast studios has been bottled so tightly that by the time a question is answered it's old news. Contact man receives interrogation, passes it to the head of the department. He turns it over to department it affects. Latter sees studio top for permission to answer. If things are okay for answer, questionnaire is returned to publicity director who in quick order wires h.o. to okay the okay. By that time it's almanac copy.

An open fight between William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and unions of the A. F. L., which have or are threatening to go 'vertical,' will not deter the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees from proceeding with an industrialization policy, it is declared by insiders. The attitude of the I. A. T. S. E., it is said, is to take whatever course it wants regardless of what the A. F. L. thinks.

Educational and religious names are being lined up here by Edwin Carewe to read scripts for his non-theatrical films before they hit the cameras. Board of 15 members, to serve without pay, representing all church denominations, schools, colleges and other organizations, is planned.

Buddy De Sylva's remembering Ralph Cooper's specialty dance in a Plantation revue (N. Y. nitery) 12 years ago got the colored dancer the job on the next Shirley Temple picture at 20th-Fox. When problem arose on dance routines, producer sent scouts to find Cooper in New York.

Metro sound engineers, headed by Douglas Shearer, have developed a small sized horn system for small theatres, projection rooms and private theatres, which comprises series of horns for sound reproduction with various units taking the frequencies for clarity.

Metro's 'Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody' (Irving Berlin) number for 'The Great Ziegfeld,' will have 182 dancers, tops for one routine on the Coast. Seymour Felix, staging, expects to take a month for rehearsing and cameraing.

Margaret Sullavan's starrer, 'Next Time We Love,' was brought in at Universal by Edward H. Griffith for $350,000, around $9,000 below figure set. This also is the lowest amount spent on any Sullavan pic. First cut was in 9,500 feet, with no retakes necessary.

First anniversary of 'March of Time' is Feb. 1. Started with 400 theatres, and is now being shown in more than 4,500 houses, with world distribution through RKO. Originally hit theatres via First Division and also through indie exchange set-ups.

Hollywood employs an average of 36,000 people yearly in the making of films, according to U. S. government figures. Exhibition end has 244,000 on the payrolls.

Radio's new contract with Wheeler and Woolsey provides for three pix and a guarantee against percentage. If they go over a certain gross, percentage jumps 5%. Comics also permitted to make one outside flicker.

Latest wrinkle in film production is financing of eastern shorts production by a distrib of screeno, door prize materials and other get-'em-in gadgets. Office is split between two activities.

Sunnie O'Dea's mirror dance in 'Strike Me Pink' was erroneously credited to Rita Rio in VARIETY's review. Both dancers have specialties in the Eddie Cantor pic.

Amus. Issues Rise, but Late Selling Keeps Them Below Expectations

By MIKE WEAR

While specific groups and stocks were singled out for upward whirls in yesterday's (Tues.) stock market, amusements as a group swept forward vigorously. Warner Bros. common, RKO and two Columbia Broadcasting issues registered new highs and Warner bonds also hit new 1935-6 top.

Paramount common and two preferreds were unusually active as they shot up. Par first preferred went up nearly 3 points at one time, making new peak for current move at 86¼. Common stock tipped 11⅜, only five-eighths from best price. Second preferred hit 12¾. Twentieth Century-Fox stocks both neared highest level, common showing point gain and preferred being up 1¼. Universal pfd. recovered smartly to 72, advance of 5. Loew common was firm around 52½, while Radio B came back more than 1 point. Paramount Pix liens went to highest point in current climb.

Inflationary sentiment swayed the stock market much of the time in last week's trading, bringing healthy recoveries in numerous groups, including amusements. But the early promise of considerably higher quotations for picture and radio issues was not fulfilled because of selling towards close.

Despite this late reaction, the amusement group hit 44 for the second successive week as measured by the averages of 12 stocks. Pressure Friday (24) forced group down to fractionally above 42. Group

VISUAL EDUCATION FUTURE

FORM AMERICAN FILM INSTITUTE

May Become the Vital Factor in Development of Audible Visual Film Education in America — Appears Well Sponsored lm Institute, patterned after a similar organization in land, which has been tentatively formed in Washington, D. C., may become a vital factor in the development of audible visual education in the United States in the next 12 months. The Institute which is rated as a new activity of the American Council of Education would serve as a clearing house for all facts pertaining to motion picture equipment, films and other data connected with establishing of visual education in the schools. Proposes to supply unbiased information on any set-up or situation.

George F. Zook, former U. S. Commissioner of Education and now president of the American Council of Education, Washington, is moving spirit in new proposition. The ACE organization is an old institution.

Film Institute has been endorsed by C. M. Koon, top man in radio and visual education division of the U. S. Department of Interior (Office of Education). Likely that it will seek the endorsement of the National Educational Association at its St. Louis convention next month.

Whether or not the Hays organization will okay the AFI probably will be officially determined at a confab in the next few weeks. The Film Institute is said to have obtained some funds already from the Rockefeller Institute but a further check probably will be made by Hayslan officials to learn if the organization has the financial backing necessary to carry on and become a fixed institution.

Reason for rather skeptical attitude on part of Hays office is that others in the past have sought to form similar organizations and associations without success. Records show that most of them enjoyed only temporary existence.

AFI's Initial Move

One of initial moves of AFI will be to catalog films of principal producing companies. Hays office probably will work with Institute in compiling such if reasonably sure that the new organization is to be a permanent affair.

If the Film Institute is firmly established it is expected to go far in heightening interest in audible visual education. Instead of educators running around in circles and going into new type of educational work in haphazard fashion, AFI would be able to answer when, where and how on all questions submitted by various education officials. It would eliminate present objections that school authorities have in listening to various sales talks of film and equipment manufacturers. That this latter factor is an important one can be judged by fact that there are now approximately 100 different firms interested in some degree in the sale of picture films, projection and camera supplies.

A total of 15,378 theatres playing pictures are in operation in the United States, according to the latest annual survey of the Film Boards of Trade. Only 3,130 theatres are closed, of which nearly half, or 1,492, were never wired. This leaves the comparatively small total of 1,638 sound-equipped houses now bolted.

Survey reveals there are 18,508 theatres in existence in the U. S., representing a total seating capacity of 11,308,041. Of this number, 12,852 are independently-owned. The affiliated circuits control 2,192 theatres, the unaffiliated circuit theatres numbering 3,464.

Par Sets Back 2 Pictures, Casting, Story Hurdles

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

'Light That Failed' and 'Old Maid' have been set back on Paramount production schedule, due to casting and story difficulties.

Claudette Colbert is set as a co-starrer in 'Maid,' but the studio is still trying to placate Ann Harding, who turned it down.

MANNIX'S LEGAL MOVE IN MARY NOLAN'S SUIT

Nathan Burkan, attorney for Edgar J. Mannix, v.p. and general manager of Metro's studios on the Coast, obtained a court order yesterday (Tuesday) to compel attorneys for Mary Nolan to show cause why she should not accept an 'unverified' answer to her $500,000 suit against Mannix for a series of alleged beatings and also for allegedly ruining her screen career. Motion will be argued today (Wednesday) before N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLaughlin.

In the event that the motion is denied, Burkan will have to go to the Coast and get a sworn-to answer. In his 'unverified' answer, Mannix claims he paid Miss Nolan $3,000 in settlement of all possible litigation.

This is denied by Herbert Tenzer and Henry Zeltner, attorneys for Miss Nolan, the former Imogene Wilson. They claim her signature to a receipt for $3,000 from Mannix was gotten from her under duress by Mannix's representatives while she was recuperating at the Medical Arts hospital, New York. Miss Nolan claims she thought the $3,000 was for hospital expenses.

Roy Del Ruth has a straight one year's contract at 20th-Fox.

Director goes east next week to look over plays and make recommendations to the studio.

WB-RADIO FEUD HURTS PLUGS FOR CINEMAS

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 28.

Radio's scrap with Warner Bros. has been carried into the zone of the 100-watters with all the force given it in the big time. Exception is that small stations feel their boycott, laid down solidly through the eastern territory, in which WB operates a long string of houses, will have a more immediate and stinging effect.

All stations' cooperation has been withdrawn in practically every instance, and theatre organs which have boomed and bellowed for radio audiences exclusively, since the advent of talkers, are completely silent again.

Organs, with no other commercial value, have been a powerful medium for theatre managers with scant advertising budgets to get air plugs gratis, and station operators say they have always been much more generous with free time than the newspapers ever were. In one community alone, a radio station operator reported, he traded a plug for each of three WB houses daily for one 15-minute organ program, and then furnished his own organist.

Script has also been a sock to station drama groups which depended on free picture scripts for program material and to film column scripters who find their stuff jerked off the air, due to occasional WB plugs. At least a half dozen eastern Pennsylvania stations which had one of the better known film chatter programs on a commercial basis decided to drop the revenue rather than plug the new sparring partner.

Metro's 2d 'Juliet' Yen

U. S. Dept. of Commerce World Survey—Europe's 60,050 Picture Houses, but Only 27,956 Wired —Germany's 4,780 Wired

The United States has more wired picture theatres than any other country in the world, according the latest annual survey of cinemas completed by N. D. Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the U. Department of Commerce. Russia has the most houses, if unwired houses are included and Europe, as an entity has almost twice as many theatres as the U. S.

There are in the United States, according to this survey, 15,378 theatres wired for sound. Europe is listed as having 60,050 picture houses, but only 27,956 of these are wired.

Latin America has 5,044 cinemas, 3,338 of them wired, the Far East has 3,712 wired houses out of a 5,185 total; Canada, 833 out of 905, and Africa (including the Near East) 480 out of 667.

In Europe the difference of rating of the various countries as wired and unwired is considerable. Germany leads with 4,780 wired houses as against 4,712 in England, 3,300 in France and 3,000 in Russia. But Russia is way ahead in the total figures, having 29,691 motion picture houses. Germany is all wired. England has a total of 5,070 houses; Italy is fourth with a total of 4,221 and France fifth with a total of 4,000. Sweden, with 1,581 houses, all wired, is sixth in that reckoning, but seventh to Czechoslovakia in a total count, that country having 1,343 wired houses out of 1,833.

100% Wired

Only countries round the world completely wired are the U. S., Germany, Sweden, Latvia, Puerto Rico, Panama, Costa Rica, Hondur. , Dominican Rep., Trinidad, Jamaica, Bermuda, British Malaya, New Zealand, Australia, Egypt, Palestine and Syria.

In Latin America, Argentina is tops with 1,000 wired houses out of 1,493 playing films, and Brazil next with 906 out of 1,351.

In the Far East, Japan has the most theatres, 1,634, but its wired house total of 827 is second to Australia's 1,334. India has 500 wired houses out of a 675 total, while New Zealand has 435.

Smallest country in the world, cinematically, is British Honduras with two picture houses, one of them wired. Only country in the world having no sound equipment is French West Indies, with 15 houses, 11 silent.

6 MORE 'CASSIDY' PIX BY SHERMAN FOR PAR

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Harry Sherman has made a deal for next season with Paramount on continuation of the 'Hop Along Cassidy' series, doing six the same as the current season. Four this year are all finished and other two will be ready May 1.

William Boyd and James Ellson continue in top spots in the series, with the budget cost being boosted from $65,000 to $75,000 per picture. Pictures being financed by Nicholas Ludington and William Fiske, 3d, who did the same for the current series.

Scribs in Comish Suit

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

William Morris agency has filed suit against Nat Perrin and Arthur Sheekman, writers, for commissions.

Perrin owes $903, plus 10% on $400 earned just prior to joining 20th-Fox on an agency deal, according to the complaint. Sheekman was placed at same studio and is alleged to owe $903 on salary he has received since that time.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Paramount is mulling a script of 'And Sudden Death' as a remake of 'Manslaughter,' done twice before.

Charles Barton will direct; Randolph Scott and Frances Drake in the leads.

Center Stays Pix

Rockefeller interests have turned down a proposal to turn the Center into a cabaret theatre.

Center remains a straight pix house.

Legiter's 'Dracula'

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Gloria Holden, who played the lead in 'The Lone Frontier,' Max Gordon production last summer (tryout) has been put under term contract by Universal, going into 'Dracula's Daughter.' She plays the title role.

It's Tune Time in L. A., Cantor Heavy Ballyed, $25,000; 'Goes' Good $18,000; 'Mercy' 13½G Dualer

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: RKO-Pantages)

Long on musicals this week with Cantor's 'Strike Me Pink' at the Pantages and RKO Hillstreet getting most attention as well as being steadied for two weeks in both houses. 'Anything Goes' at the Paramount, and Warners has 'Broadway Hostess' topping double program at the Downtown and Hollywood, although this musical is just another roll of film so far as buyers are concerned. Fourth musical is 'First a Girl,' in its third and final stanza, and has been strictly depending on show biz mob for its patronage on strength of interest in Jessie Matthews.

Chinese and State have no forceful combo in 'Show Them No Mercy' and 'Melody Lingers On' which go only six days.

Hillstreet and Pan went heavy on 'Strike Me Pink' exploitation and advertising. Double truck in the Examiner; spot radio announcements on major stations, besides advance plug over air from the East by Cantor the Sunday preceding opening. Used 50 of the 24-sheet lithos on illuminated stands; had a 48-sheet board on illuminated truck perambulating all over town; banners in front and inside of chain drug stores featuring 'Pink' sundaes; posters in United Cigar stores on calabash pipe tieup, etc. Paramount also went a bit strong on 'Anything Goes,' but campaign not as thorough as the one devised by Jack Gross for Cantor pic.

timates for This Week

Chinese (Grauman) (2,028; 30-40-55)—'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Melody Lingers On' (UA) split. Kind of tough going for combo and, with couple previews to help out, only $5,500 on six days. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'My Marriage' (20th) did not get what was figured, but oke at $10,100.

Downtown (WB) (1,800; 30-35-40)—'Broadway Hostess' (WB) and 'Dr. Harrigan' (FN) split. Will be lucky to hit $4,000, a headache. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (WB), third and final stanza. Though under calculations, no kick coming at $5,500 takeout.

Four Star (Fox) (900; 30-35)—'First a Girl' (GB) (3d-final week). Has just its course and will tag off with around $2,200. Last week, close to $2,700.

Hollywood (WB) (2,756; 30-35-40-55)—'Broadway Hostess' (WB) and 'Harrigan' (FN) split. Even couple of previews helping none, as top for week will be around $4,500, blah. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (WB), third and final, shy on calculations, but $5,400 okay.

Orpheum (Bdwy) (2,270; 25-30-35-40)—'Baldpate' (RKO) and 'Another Face' (RKO) split and vaudeville. Tough situation for house, which will take sock at $3,800. Last week 'Dan Matthews' (Col) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG), so so $4,700, just over the break point.

Pantages (Pan) (2,700; 25-35-40-55)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). Start good and with buildup may hit corking $12,500 for initial stanza. Last week 'Magnificent Obsession' (U), second and final, as expected, an even $7,500, good profit.

Paramount (Partmar) (3,595; 30-40-55)—'Anything Goes' (Par) and stage show. Crosby pic will go around $13,000 good. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) without stage help hit big $22,000.

RKO (2,950; 25-35-40-55)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). Off to smash start and keeping at smart pace will mean big $12,500 for first week. Last week 'Obsession' (U), just a bit over the top calculations at $7,600 for second and bow-out week, which plenty to brag about.

State (Loew-Fox) (2,024; 30-40-55)—'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Melody Lingers On' (UA) split. No world beater against strong opposition, so $7,800 on six days will be the answer here. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'My Marriage' (20th), profit at $10,100.

United Artists (Fox-UA) (2,100; 30-40-55)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'My Marriage' (20th) split. House depending more on bank nights than on screen attraction, with current week headed for around $4,800, okay. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG), not a complaint about the $5,400 this one pulled on moveover from the State, with aid of bank nights.

'Dream' Hit by Breeze, Stays 4 Days in B'ham

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Ritz)

Cold weather is still hurting business. This winter has been exceptionally hard and the public stays at home when the thermometer drops. 'Midsummer Night's Dream' at $1 top lasted only four days, although scheduled for one week. Cold weather affected attendance and price also had something to do with it.

Ritz had a campaign for 'Ah, Wilderness,' using small teasers with only word 'ah' in it. Empire had nice plan of radio and newspapers. Former played discs on parts of picture.

Estimates for This Week

Alabama (Wilby-Kincey) (2,800; 30-35-40)—'Anything Goes' (Par). At $6,000, fair. Last week 'Bride' (Par), $5,400.

Ritz (Wilby-Kincey) (1,600; 30-25)—'Wilderness' (MG). Getting $3,600, moderate. Last week 'Scarlett' (RKO). Light, $2,400.

Strand (Wilby-Kincey) (800; 25)—'Chan's Secret' (20th). Weak, $1,800. Last week 'Oakley' (RKO) and 'Great Impersonation' (U) on split, $1,500.

Empire (Acme) (1,100; 25)—'Dream' (WB). Below expectations and held for four days at a scale of 30c. and $1. Got $3,700. Monday thrugh Wednesday 'Little Big Shot' (WB), $1,200, maybe. Last week 'First a Girl' (GB), $3,000, moderate.

Cleve.'s 3 Standouts; 'Pink' $24,000, 'Zero' $20,000, 'Book' $21,500

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: State)

Half of the box offices were frozen by sub-zero storms, which blew film rubberneckers back to the family fire-place. Figures dipped with thermometer, with only a couple of exceptions, first is 'Strike Me Pink,' striking a homerun for Loew's State which can score $24,000 if a bit of warmer weather sets in.

Vaude version of Earl Carroll's 'Sketch Book' good enough with aid of 'Chan's Secret' to warm up the Palace for another sweet gross, $21-500, calling Zero' almost reaching the Hipp's ceiling by $20,000. Others so-so.

Milt Harris, Charlie Wagner and Ed Huegle, working on Cantor's pix, earn the exploitation medal for State.. Three worked out an exceptional number of co-operative tieups, sweeping the avenue with 150,000 stickers, heralds in mags distributed by transfer companies, and toothpaste posters. Best tie-up with newspaper's auto-safety campaign, plugging traffic rules through 'Strike Me Pink' gags.

Estimates for This Week

State (Loew's) (3,750; 30-35-40)—'Pink' (UA). Lots on the ball here, sold right and soaring close to $24,000. 'Riff Raff' (MG) last week brought in nice $18,500.

Palace (RK) (3,200; 30-40-60)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Sketch Book' on stage. The leg show is being sold on the socko $21,500. Last week's 'Two in Dark' and 'Mayfair Casino Revue' came to $15,000, not so bad considering stage show was produced in Cleveland.

Hipp (WB) (3,000; 25-40)—'Zero' (WB). Plenty of b. o. punch for localites, who will contribute a swell $20,000. Last week 'Obsession' (U) rooted by critics up to $14,500.

Allen (RKO) (1,872; 25-40)—'Obsession' (U). Transferred from Hipp, still going strong, for good—$4,000. Though drawing rave notices last week, 'Crime and Punishment' (Col) disappointed at $2,500.

Stillman (Loew's) (1,872; 25-35)—'Splendor' (UA). Unusually smart film for this house, which may hold it to $4,500, yet above average. Last week, 'Melody Lingers On' (UA), $3,000.

KY. REJOINS UNION

11 elow Weather Costs It Confederate Franchise—'Dream' Oke

Loulsville, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: State)

Despite temperatures as low as 11 below here, biz will be above normal in some instances and, of course, below par where the product is not of outstanding strength. 'Midsummer Night's Dream' had a gala opening performance Thursday night (23), with society turning out in force. Management had pulled in heavy advance sale, with direct mail approach and extensive list of patrons, which included most of the town's high hats. Pic is set for eight days only.

Best grosser in town is 'Strike Me Pink,' which looks to garner $8,000, and first picture in some weeks which really gave the house something to sell. Next in line appears to be the Rialto with 'Anything Goes,' which should get a good $5,400 on the strength of the Bing Crosby-Ethel Merman combo.

All houses going in heavily for newspaper space, but State rates the nod with additional help of ads in national mags, plugs on Cantor r lo program, etc.

Estimates For This Week

Loew's State (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). Eddie Cantor pic should put house in profit column again. Gross $8,000, and likely prospect for holdover. Last week 'Exclusive Story' (MG) and 'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col), dual, did fairly well, $4,800, with help of exploitation.

Rialto (4th Ave) (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Anything Goes' (Par). Looks good, and, if weather moderates a bit, headed for $6,400. Last week 'Coronado' (Par) and 'Master's Voice' (Par), dual, wound up with $4,500, okay.

Brown (Ind) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep), with Lum and Abner, radio turn, in for two days. Pair are fairly strong draw, and $3,600 indicated. Last week, 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'First a Girl' (GB), dual, didn't show much strength, winding up with fair $2,300.

Strand (4th Ave.) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Professional Soldier' (20th) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th), dual. Looks to get around $2,900, somewhat better than average. Last week 'Obsession' (U) on second week pulled gratifying $5,400.

Mary Anderson (Libson) (1,000; 55-$1.65)—'Dream' (WB). Fine support from schools, parent-teacher organizations, etc., and pulling class trade of town, including most of the city's legit patrons. First roadshowed pic here in some years. Nice advance sale and biz good. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) $3,300, on holdover, good.

National (Ind) (2,400; 15-25-40)—'Condemned to Live' (Ches) and Ed Lowry unit. Still plenty of patrons in this town to support vaude and they're doing it consistently at this house. Indications for $4,500 gross, assuming the thermometer will soon rise from its sub-zero readings. Last week 'Rip Roaring Riley' and 'Stratosphere Revue' displayed no strength at no better than $2,800.

Alama (Ind) (900; 15-25)—'Smilin' Through' (MG) and 'Clairvoyant' (GB), dual. Revival of Norma Shearer opus didn't create any noticeable flutter here, and looks like average. $1,200. Last week 'Kids and Queen' (U) and 'Nevada' (Par), dual, took $1,100.

CANTOR'S $20,000 DESPITE 10 BELOW ST. L.

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Loew's)

Blizzard hit town Thursday (23), sent mercury tumbling down to 10 below zero for new low since 1930 and crimped b.o. grosses along with natives. All houses suffered as temperature hovered around zero, public absorbing its entertainment via radio in homes.

Good celluloid features are offered in most of houses this week with Loew's highly publicized 'Strike Me Pink' set for a banner week if weather moderates sufficiently to encourage natives to leave their hearth. While Manager Chick Evens at Loew's has house set for a $20,000 week he won't make it if another week of severe weather is on tap here. 'Pink' will probably run for two weeks. 'King of Burlesque' and 'Lone Wolf,' dualer at huge Fox did enough business first week to warrant holding a second, which is second consecutive program Fox has run two weeks.

Three Stooges in person, in addition to five vaudeville acts and a screen feature makes a combo program that should enable Missouri to enjoy another good b.o. week.

Both WB houses, Shubert-Rialto and Orpheum, show dualers, leaving Loew's as town's only first runner offering a single feature. Warm friendship between Arthur Baer, exec of one of city's largest department stores, and Eddie Cantor enabled Jimmy Harris, p.a., to cash in on one of the best co-op ad tieups in years in exploiting 'Pink.'

Estimates for This Week

Fox (F&M) (5,038; 25-35-55)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and 'Lone Wolf Returns' (Col) (3d wk). First week closed with $15,000, better than anticipated and second should not miss $8,500.

Ambassador (F&M) (3,018; 25-35-55)—'Invisible Ray' (U) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep). Dualer is set for $8,500 pace. Last week 'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'First Girl' (GB) after a good start dropped to $7,400.

Shubert-Rialto (WB) (1,725; 25-35-55)—'Ceiling Zero' (WB) and 'Her Master's Voice' (Par). Cagney, fave here, helping house to count $8,200 for good week. Last week 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'Freshman Love' (WB), dual, did not have appeal to better than $6,500, so-so.

Orpheum (WB) (1,950; 25-35-55)—'Baldpate' (RKO) and 'Widow of Monte Carlo' (WB). Despite weather, destined for good $9,500. Last week 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and 'Two in Dark' (RKO), nothing to complain about with $8,700 take on this small house. More seats would have meant more business.

Loew's (3,162; 25-35-55)—'Strike Me Pink' (MG). Swell exploitation campaign should make $20,000 an attainable goal. Holds over. Last week 'Riffraff' (MG), bad weather clipped take to $12,000.

Missouri (F&M) (3,514; 25-40)—'East of Java' (U) and Three Stooges on stage with vaudeville. Stooges expected to bolster business to tune of $11,600 for okay week. Last week 'No Mercy' (20th) and vaudeville, $9,200, very satisfactory business.

'Dream' Roadshows to Big $6,500 in P'tland; 'Pink' Okay at $6,000

Portland, Ore., Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: United Artists)

After a couple of dull weeks Parker's UA headed into a b.o. blossomtime with 'Strike Me Pink.' Pic was heavily exploited with extra copy, but that house does not run to special stunts. 'Pink' is getting them in a big way and looks good for another two weeks.

Big winner, getting the raves and also ducat response, is 'Obsesh' going magnif at the Broadway. Looks as though it would wind up with coloss pickings for that house on an exploitation budget not greatly increased.

'Midsummer Night's Dream' closed a successful road show week at the Mayfair, collecting $1.65 top out of the burg without a murmur. It needed the fancy build-up to get attention and results. Mayfair follows this week with 'Stars Over Broadway' at regular 40c admish.

Evergreen's twin-engined policy produced a couple of queer combos at the Paramount and Orpheum this week. 'Mister Hobo,' none too strong on its own, was bolstered with Jimmie Oakley at the Par, helping some. Orpheum had 'Coronado' teamed with 'Sylvia Scarlett.'

Admiral Byrd's lecture with South Pole pics at the City Auditorium grossed a good $5,000 for two performances.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (2,000; 25-40)—'Obsession' (U). Launched into second big week and going strong for $6,000, may hold longer. First week big $8,600.

United Artists (Parker) (1,000; 25-40)—'Pink' (UA). Answering to a big bally splurge with first week getting okay $6,000. Last week 'Red Salute' (UA) never got going, closed five days for weak $3,300.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,000; 25-40)—'Hobo' (GB) teamed with 'Oakley' (RKO). Fairish combo, good enough at $7,000. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Lone Wolf' (Col). Poor at $4,700.

Orpheum (Hamrick-Evergreen) (2,000; 25-40)—'Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Coronado' (Par). Pulled after five days with week $3,500. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Two in Dark' (RKO). Not overly hot at $4,300.

Mayfair (Parker-Evergreen) (1,400; 25-40)—'Stars Over Broadway' (WB). Getting fair $2,500. Last week 'Dream' (WB) roadshowed two-a-day with admish upped to $1.65, registered well and closed a big week to $6,500.

CHILLY LINCOLN

'Bri at $3,200 Only Fair—Other B. O.'s a Freeze-out

Lincoln, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Stuart)

Snows still hanging on and an average of five inches a day has fallen for nearly a week. At times down to 15 below, b. o. pace accordingly away down, but expected to improve if the cold abates later in the week as forecast.

'Bride Comes Home' was given a bread tieup, the only exploiting this week.

Estimates for This Week

Colonial (LTC) (550; 10-15)—'New Frontier' (Rep) and 'Timber War' (Amb), split. Full week worth a probable $900, all right. Last week 'Rainbow's End' (FD) and 'Live Ghosts' (MG), split, got $800, in the face of box office slumping all over town due to the terrific snows.

Lincoln (LTC) (1,600; 10-20-25)—'Dangerous' (WB). Nothing very forte about this one and isn't stepping much better than $2,000, less than average. Last week 'Frisco Kid' (WB), fair $2,100.

Orpheum (LTC) (1,350; 10-15-20-25-40)—'Kind Lady (MG) and 'Passing Parade' unit on the stage, first half; Bowes' Ams, Unit No. 5, two days, with 'Hitchhike' (Rep). Five day pull has earmarks of probable $3,200, plenty good. Figure is based on the draw of the ams which have never played this town previously. Last week 'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep) and the stage show headlining Rudy Bundy's band, which gave way for 'Way Down East' (Fox) for the last half; week around $2,200, not up to former strength by quite a bit.

Stuart (LTC) (1,900; 10-25-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Considerable plugging via screenings and n 24-sheets adding local bread products, but weather against it and not likely to let it get more than $3,200, little better than fair. Last week 'Dark Angel' (UA) $3,000, not so good.

Varsity (Westland) (1,100; 10-20-25)—'Lady of Secrets' (Col). Will be kept secretive, judging from the pace here, brutal $900. Last week 'Lone Wolf' (Col) and the weather kept 'em out, around $850, n. s. h.

'Goes' Fairish in Boston, $20,000; 'Pink' $32,000 Uptown-Downtown

Boston, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Loew's)

Top money goes to 'Strike Me Pink,' running day and date at the Orpheum and State, single. Will strike a $32,000 vein, which would have been more lucrative if zero weather had not frozen opening days' biz. All spots suffered on early days of the week, but 'King of Burlesque' shapes up favorably at the Memorial with a $16,000 complexion. Maybe hefty enough for b.o. Keith-Boston in the $20,000 class, with a Fats Waller and Harlem show on stage and 'Melody Lingers' on the screen.

'Anything Goes' is mild at the Met with promise of $20,000 or bit over. By-play news being made currently by the Met, via a battle with the Boston Post. RKO advertising jam on placement of national advertising had hardly been settled when Met began to 'experiment' with ad budget, giving Herald-Traveler a litle edge on the Post space. Post retaliated as in RKO case, and now the M&P deluxer gets scant reviews, noticeably casual extra mentions, no art on Elliot Norton's Sunday page, and only a five line reader on Sabbath.

Loew exploiteers had a natural in Harry Einstein (Parkyakakus), local boy who has not been in Hub since he landed in pix. Luring Einstein in town day before opening of 'Pink,' Joe DiPesa of Loew's and Jack Goldstein of the New York UA office paved the way for some juicy press breaks. Luncheon for crix started ball rolling and this snowballed into a flock of interviews, human interest stories and plenty of pictorial.

Estimates For This Week

Keith's (RKO) (2,300; 35-50-65)—'Melody Lingers On' (UA) and 'Connie's Inn Revue,' featuring Fats Waller, on stage. Goin' to town in $20,000 tempo. Last week 'Sketch Book' unit attracted dandy $22,000, with 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Col), screen. One of the few houses in the country where stage strength is aimed to offset film weakness—and doing it week after week.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 25-35-40-50)—'Pink' (UA), single. Very good at $17,000, but not hefty enough for holdover. 'Riffraff' (MG) finished nine-day run last week, day and date with State, with fair $16,000. Opened encouragingly, then skidded.

Keith Memorial (RKO) (2,900; 25-35-50) — 'King of Burlesque' (20th). Kicking in attractive $16,000, and second week likely. 'Obsession' (U) did not disappoint in its second week, with $11,200 count.

State (Loew) (25-35-40-50)—'Pink' (UA). Flirting with very oke $15,000 here, although pic is figured hotter for downtown sector. Last week 'Riffraff' (MG) clinched pale $14,500 for nine days.

Met (M&P) (2,200; 35-50-65)—'Anything Goes' (Par) and stage show. Going along sluggishly but may top $20,000. Last week outstanding, despite tough breaks in weather (Sunday bliz and Thursday zero) for 'Ceiling Zero' (WB) and Burns and Allen on stage, $34,500, big. Weather freeze-out a big stand at least $5,000, and this was bad news with a nut that required that difference.

Paramount (M&P) (1,800; 25-35-50)—'Dr. Harrigan' (WB) and 'Paddy O'Day' (20th), dual. Swerving to $5,000 with two freezing days as opening handicap. Last week $7,600 on 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and 'Bride Comes Home' (Par). 2d run.

Fenway (M&P) (1,600; 25-30-40-50)—'Dr. Harrigan' (WB) and 'Paddy O'Day' (20th), double. Disappointing at $3,000. Got $4,800 last week with 'Miss Pacific Fleet' (WB) and 'Bride' (Par), 2d run.

Scollay (M&P) (3,700; 25-35-40-50)—'Bride' (Par), 3d run and 'Nevada' (Par), first run, double. Unexciting $4,500 for this combo. Last week $5,500 for 'Collegiate' (Par) and 'Dangerous' (WB), both second run.

17° Below in Loop, but 'Pink' Steps Up U.A. to $20,000; King Orch.-'Dark' Light $18,000, Palace

Chicago, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: United Artists)

In the midst of a sub-zero wave that had the thermometer down to 17 degrees below the line, some houses in the loop are still managing to struggle through into good grosses with good attractions. At three spots business is fine. Elsewhere the business is down with the mercury.

Topping the street on public interest are Eddie Cantor in 'Strike Me Pink' and the Chicago with 'Dangerous,' Libby Holman and the Ina Ray Hutton band on the stage. Opening on the worst weather day of the current sub-zero squall, 'Pink' exhibited strength from the start. Rest of the town fell off to nothingness on this Arctic day (22).

Palace, where Wayne King orchestra is billed far above everything, got away badly. Two repeat pictures and holdover are in the money: 'Magnificent Obsession,' which is holding over at the Garrick for further looping after a smashing fortnight at the Palace, and 'Night at the Opera,' which is getting repeat play in its second week at the Roosevelt.

Eddie Levin turned in a bang-up job on the Cantor picture, getting top tie-ups with the dailies and crashing through with ad spreads and stories.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 25-35-75)—'Riff Raff' (MG). Jean Harlow picture misses the ace spots in town for the first time. Should hold this house to fine $7,000. Last week weather was a reason and not an alibi, letting 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) down with a fairish $5,600 after strong start.

Chicago (B&K) (4,000; 35-55-75) —'Dangerous' (WB) and stage show. Double strength on the rostrum with Libby Holman and the Ina Ray Hutton band. Started away from the barrier at a fine clip. Getting all-around matinee and evening play, which will add to good $35,000 on the week. Last week, second for 'Bride' (Par) and Veloz and Yolanda dance team, plus Red Hodgson on stage, cold wave reduced gross on week to $32,000, of which $10,000 was collected Thursday night (23) on special house sellout to American Can company convention.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 35-55)—'Obsession' (U). Comes into this house after two big sessions at the Palace. Indications also strong here for follow-up. Around $7,500. Last week 'If You Could Cook' (Col) excellent at $4,800.

Oriental (B&K) (3,200; 25-35-40) —'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) and vaude. Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon on stage. Couple on the rostrum accounting for bulk trade. Approximately $17,000, good. Last week 'In the Air' (MG) same.

Palace (RKO) (2,500; 35-55-65)—'Two in Dark' (RKO) and vaude. Wayne King orchestra headlining. House nosediving to woeful $18,000 on opening indications. Last week, second of 'Obsession' (U), powerful for holdover at $22,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 35-45-65) —'Nite at Opera' (MG) (2d week). Marx picture showing surprising holdover strength for $13,000 on second gallop after zooming through to bang-up $17,900 on initial round.

State-Lake (Jones) (2,700; 20-25-35-40)—'In Person' (RKO) and vaude. House continues its even pace despite weather; $11,000. Last week 'Devils Island' (Col) tucked way neat $10,700.

United Artists (B&K-UA) (1,700; 35-45-65)—'Pink' (UA). Cantor had 'em coming despite weather. On opening pace heading for mighty $20,000 on first week and looks set for several weeks to come. Last week 'Blood' (WB) finished fortnight to oke $10,300 for finale.

Crosby 9G, Cantor $7,800, N. H. Favors Filmusicals

New Haven, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Poli)

Fans' reluctance to buck frigidity will hold down grosses a bit this week. 'Anything Goes' looks like a holdover, however, at Paramount.

Some extra bally around town for current bills, with Poli doing the heaviest shouting. Went to town on the music angle, plugging song hits on air, at music counters and rated two swell windows in five-and-dime. Two ushers with 'Blind' signs, glasses and tin cups paraded with sandwiches reading 'Don't you feel sorry for us—we can't see Eddie Cantor in 'Strike Me Pink' at Poli'.

Other stunts included special Cantor mask in lobby; 24-sheet pasted to lobby floor; Pebeco toothpaste tiein; cigar store tiens; reduced price 'Pink' sundaes; co-op page; Sunday feature story with art on Goldwyn Girls; free fan mags with corner envelope; half-hour air show.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (M & P) (2,348; 35-50)—'Anything Goes' (Par) and 'Confidential' (Mas). Packing 'em for town's best, around $9,000. Last week weather killed 'Master's Voice' (Par) and 'Impersonation' (U), light $4,500.

Poli (Loew) (3,040; 35-50)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). As a single against tough competish, $7,800, okay. Last week 'Riff Raff' (MG) and 'Dan Matthews' (Col) went down with the mercury, weak $6,500.

Roger Sherman (WB) (2,200; 35-50)—'Ceiling Zero' (WB) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep). Should get nifty $7,800 on eight days. Last week 'Invisible Ray' (U) and 'First a Girl' (GB); fans couldn't see 'Ray,' red $4,000.

College (Loew) (1,565; 25-35)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Three Ghosts' (MG). Coasting along to moderate $3,500. Last week 'Wolf Returns' (Col) and 'Smith Speaks' (20th), plus local featurette 'It Happened in New Haven,' a slight disappointment at $4,300.

Coogan-Grable With 'Rancho,' Big 21G, Detroit

Detroit, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: ichigan)

Top honors center around the Michigan and Fox, with RKO Downtown nearby. Mich, behind superior exploitation on both 'Rose of Rancho' and 'Hollywood Secrets' (Coogan-Gable) unit figures for around $21,000 this week, fine considering the storms.

Holding over Clyde Beatty's wild animal act, first vaude act so honored in several years, the Fox should come down the stretch current stanza with a good $17,000, unless entire town freezes up. 'King of Burlesque' also held over with Beatty, plus two new acts to fill up. Gross first session for combination was nearly $24,000, nifty, but could have been more had weather stayed normal.

With Carroll's tabloid 'Vanities' on stage, RKO steps into the higher bracket present week with about $18,000, bang-up, due. Pic is 'Another Face,' just another flicker. Matinees big at RKO, nights fair. 'Ah, Wilderness' lagging for mild $7,000 this week at United Artists, while biz is just so-so at two other downtown first-run houses.

Michigan sold 'Rancho' and Coogan-Gable in a wide area to gain exploitation laurels this week. Put on party in downtown hotel for young socialites to meet 'Hollywood's most prominent engaged couple'; worked up plenty of fashion and window tieups with downtown stores for both vaude and pic; used Postal window displays, numerous stills and lined up plenty of plugs for songs, etc., over radio.

Estimates for This Week

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 30-40-65)—'Rancho' (Par) plus 'Hollywood Secrets' on stage. Extensive exploitation and combination should bring in a neat $21,000 this week despite cold and snow. House got almost $20,500, fine, last week on 'Riff Raff' (MG) with 'One Hour of Joy' revue ('One Hour with You').

Fox (Indie) (5,000; 30-40-65)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) plus Clyde Beatty's lion-tiger act on stage (2d week). First vaude act to be held over here for several years. Beatty continues to pull 'em in. About $17,000, good, due this week in spite of cold weather, after nifty $24,000 last week.

Downtown (RKO) (2,500; 30-40-65)—'Another Face' (RKO) with Carroll 'Vanities' on stage. Vaude unit doing all the attracting, around $18,000 bang-up, due current stanza. Wayne King, plus 'Hitch-Hike Lady' (Rep) not what should have been last week, but near $13,000, fine.

United Artists (United Detroit) (2,000; 25-35-55)—'Wilderness' (MG). Only large downtowner sticking to old prices, figures for only $7,600 this week. Got similar coin last week on 'Capt. Blood' (WB) (2d week) after a nifty $13,500 first session.

State (United Detroit) (3,000; 25-40)—'Pacific Fleet' (WB) plus 'Great Life' (Par). Just so-so here, under $5,000. Nifty $6,000 last week on 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Millions in Air' (Par) dual.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 25-40)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th). Mild gross in offing this week, $3,500. 'Obsession' (U), after a big session at Fox two weeks previous, nifty $7,000 last week and might have beaten house record if weather hadn't gone haywire.

'PINK' AT $20,000 BALTO'S LEADER

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Century)

The cold blast that blew over the burg late last week continues, and so does the b.o. slump. Vaudfilmer Century tops the town with 'Strike Me Pink' scrambling toward a nifty $20,000 despite the chill. Keith's has 'Magnificent Obsession' holding strongly for third and final week with $4,500 assured; pic the biggest item house has had all season.

New is keeping 'Professional Soldier' on tap till Thursday (30), which will make it a 10-day trip for the film which caught on right from start and overcame lukewarm press notices. Both McLaglen and Bartholomew boosted the b.o.

Exploitation for 'Pink' at Century was best in burg. Kazanova, femme leader on stage, got some nice publicity in that two rags sent sobbies for interviews which landed with art.

Estimates For This Week

Century (Loew-UA) (3,000; 15-25-35-40-55-66)—'Pink' (UA) and vaude. Weather hurting this spot and all others, but the Cantor tug is evident; $20,000, corking. Last week 'Exclusive Story' (MG) and vaude, $17,000, nice. Last couple of days eased sharply due to blizzard.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,300; 15-25-35-40-55-66) — 'Lone Wolf' (Col) and Marcus show on stage. Pic lightweight, and the big billing is given the stage unit, from which is expected the pull. Take will be okay, but nothing to incite whoops at $13,000. Last week 'Another Face' (RKO) and Bowes' unit No. 4, just under $17,000.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,500; 15-25-30-35-40)—'Obsession' (U) (3d week). Snapping up a succulent $4,500 on third and last lap. Second stanza swell $6,000.

New Theatre (Indie) (1,800; 15-25-30-35-40-55) — 'Pro. Soldier' (20th). Marching 10 days to a bully $7,000.

Stanley (WB) (3,450; 15-25-35-40-55)—'Rancho' (Par). Disappointing, with prospects no brighter than weak $5,500. Last week 'Bride' (Par) came home with plenty bacon at $10,400.

Al Smith on Raddio Is B. O. Poison in City Of Homes and Churches

Brooklyn, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Zero weather in this region did serious harm to some b.o.'s leaving plenty empty but Albee and Met pull through good. Bad,. slippery roads and sidewalks gave population little desire to travel downtown for any picture. Also another cerebellum ache for theatre operators was the speech on radio Saturday by former Governor Al Smith which kept citizens indoors.

At the Paramount, 'Rose of the Rancho' will produce a meager $10,000.

Harry Cowen at the Fox brought out local contingent of Sea Scouts for the premiere of 'Conquer the Sea.' Staged parade opening night; display in lobby of nautical apparatus plus material from Admiral Byrd's South Pole ship with lectures by sea scouts in uniform; plugs on municipal station, WNYC, by seascouts and parade in downtown vicinity; seascouts also appeared in Monday night amateur hour on stage.

Estimates For This Week

Paramount (4,000; 25-35-50)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par). Mild at $10,000, due in large measure to bad weather, etc. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) got $9,500. 'Ceiling Zero' (WB) due Friday.

Fox (4,000; 25-35-50)—'Conquer the Sea' (AC) and 'First a Girl' (GB). So-so $11,000 in view. Last week 'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep), $11,000.

Loew's et (3,400; 25-35-50)—'Riff Raff' (MG) and 'Live Ghosts' (MG). Figures to do good $15,000. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Last of Pagans' (MG), $14,000; nice.

Albee (3,500; 25-35-50)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2d week) and 'Feast of Java' (FD). Doing pretty well, maybe $13,500. Last week $11,000, good.

Strand (2,000; 25-35-50)—'Freshman Love' (WB) and 'Eagle's Brood' (Par). Will snare only $4,500, weak. Last week 'Leavenworth Case' (Rep) and 'Coronado' (Par), satisfactory $6,000.

Burns-Allen Send 'Wilderness' To Easy 41G, May Hit New Record, 'Collegiate'-Kemp 37G; B'way Zero

(Best Exploitati tate)

Bitter cold has had New York town in its clutches for a fortnight, but on the whole box office results are satisfactory. Signs of a letup in the weather arrived yesterday (Tuesday) and may add to the pace of all attractions for the balance of the week.

Leader this week is the second-run combination State, where the box office windows weren't allowed to frost up with Burns and Allen unit on stage providing succulent lure. House has 'Ah, Wilderness' on its screen after four profitable weeks at the Center, and with the town beginning to thaw out, a new record may be set. A munificent $41,000 looks assured, with chances even the take may mount the $41,500, which stands as house's high. This was scored New Year', week with 'Night at Opera' and Ed Sullivan on stage, aided greatly by $1.50 prices New Year's eve. State did six shows Saturday, five Sunday and six Monday, going back to five for yesterday (Tues.). Record attendance of 20,000 admissions was struck Saturday (25).

Next to the State, mount is best on a chance to top $37,000 with 'Collegiate' and, on the stage, Hal Kemp's orchestra with the Yacht Club Boys. Show holds over except for the Yacht Clubbers, who have a Versailles club (N. Y. nitery) current engagement.

Other first runs of the week are 'Whipsaw' at the Capitol, 'Calling of Dan Matthew,' at Roxy and 'Dangerous Water. at the Rialto. Former two are showing no speed at all. 'Whipsaw' will be lucky to top $20,000, while 'Matthews' won't do over $22,000. 'Waters' at the fall-in Rialto, which people have been patronizing, despite mediocre pictures will get $7,300 first week and holds three more days to Friday (31) when 'Muss 'Em Up' opens. Rialto's subway entrance b.o. is a perfect invite to the crowds below the street.

'King of Burlesque' ended its second week at the Center last night (Tues.) at $16,000, after a first seven days draught of $25,000. 'Professional Soldier' opens here this morning (Wed.). 'Widow from Monte Carlo,' a weak sister for the Astor, and out last night (Tues.) after seven days at under $7,000. 'Man Hunt' the successor at this house.

'Ceiling Zero' holds up strongly at the Strand on its second week, probably over $30,000, while Cantor's 'Strike Me Pink' may not ease past $65,000, disappointing on its holdover. 'Pink' was hurt by the weather on first week also, ending at $80,000.

State extended itself with Burns and Allen unit on the boards and in addition to a generally good exploitation and publicity campaign, dug deep into the safe on advertising the show.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (1,012; 25-35-55)—'Widow From Monte Carlo' (WB). Lacked the necessary strength here and on week, ending last night, under $7,000. 'Man Hunt' (WB) came in on preview last evening (Tues.).

Capitol (4,620; 25-35-55-85-$1.25) —'Whipsaw' (MG). Never got started, $20,000. Last week's hocking, 'Exclusive Story' (MG) didn't get up to this figure. 'Rose Marie' (MG), backed by a heavy campaign, comes in Friday (31).

Center (3,525; 25-35-55-85-$1.10) —'King of Burlesque' (20th) (2nd week). Holed out first week for fancy $25,000 and on second round of seven days ending last night (Tues.), $16,000, snug profit. 'Professional Soldier' (20th) opens this a.m. (Wed.).

Palace (1,700; 25-35-55)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (2nd run) and 'Freshman Love' (WB) (1st run), dual. Doing pretty good, maybe $9,500. Last week's duet, 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'We're Only Human' (RKO), failed to attract, under $8,000.

Paramount (3,664; 25-35-55-85)—'Collegiate' (Par) and Hal Kemp orchestra with Yacht Club Boys in pit. May top a good $37,000 with show held over except for Yacht Club Boys who fall out. Second week of 'Rancho' (Par) and Onyx Club Boys, plus Casa Loma band on fourth consecutive week, $21,500.

Radio City Music Hall (5,989; 40-60-85-99-$1.10-$1.65) — 'Strike Me Pink' (UA) and stage show (2nd week). Hard hit by inclement weather and on holdover may not get past $65,000, disappointing. First week $80,000, oke, but disappointing; a bilz casualty.

Rialto (750; 25-40-65)—'Dangerous Waters' (WB). Gaited for $7,300 and holds three more days to Friday (31). Final four days on second week of 'Dr. Crespi' (Rep), $2,800.

Rivoli (2,092; 35-55-75-85-99)—'Ghost Goes West' (UA) (3rd week). Falling off a bit but not in danger at pace third week (currently) of $21,000. Second week was $30,200. Chaplin comedy, 'Modern Times,' due in Wednesday night (5).

Roxy (5,336; 25-35-55) — 'Dan Matthews' (Col) and stage show. Ed Sullivan on stage after New Year's week at State down the street and credited with most of what little draw house has this week; only around $22,000; picture weak. Last week 'Chan's Secret' (20th), $22,500, little better.

Strand (2,767; 35-55-65-85)—'Ceiling Zero' (WB) (2nd week). Doing very well, over $30,000 likely on second week. Sticks part or whole of a third week. First seven days $32,100.

State (3,45 ; 35-55-75) — 'Ah, Wilderness!' (MG)' and Burns and Allen unit on stage. B. & A. show behind the feets bringing heavy crowds and with six shows on Saturday (25) and Monday (27), house will do $41,000 and possibly far enough over to beat previous high of $41,500. Last week 'Two Cities' George Giyot, just under $25,000, (MG) and vaude bill headed by good.

Cold Costs 'Blood' And Cantor $3,000 Each in 'Napolis

Indianapolis, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Loew's)

Sub-zero weather conditions hovering over the entire middle west seem to be centered here, with the mercury remaining on the negative side of the line for many days in succession. Attendant blight on the downtown box offices is severe, and such attractions as 'Strike Me Pink' at Loew's and 'Captain Blood' at the Indiana are being cut down around $3,000 apiece below figures they ordinarily should get here. The Cantor opus looks good enough to finish with an okay $7,000 at Loew's, in spite of the cold, and the Warner adventure film may be able to reach a fair $6,000 on the week at the Indiana, against the weather man. The usually consistent Lyric is off considerably with an indicated $5,800 on 'Charlie Chan's Secret' and vaude, while the Apollo is hurt at $2,500 on 'Widow from Monte Carlo.' It looks like a record low at the Circle at a scant $1,900 on a dual of 'Tang and Claw' and 'Another Face' unless it yanks the program.

Loew's garnered exploitation honors on the Cantor film, mainly as a result of its industriousness in effecting unusually good window displays in key locations. The Cantor optics were prominently enlarged in a number of optical shop windows, and department store windows were obtained on everything from hosiery to jewelry and pipes.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (Fourth Ave.) (1,100; 25-40)—'Monte Carlo' (WB). Title played up strongly over the cast, but nothing is happening. Gross weak at $2,500. Last week 'Pro. Soldier' (20th) also a headache at $2,750.

Circle (Katz-Feld) (2,600; 25-40) —'Fang and Claw' (RKO) dualled with 'Another Face' (RKO). Very bad at $1,900 if it lasts out the week. Repeat of 'Obsession' (U) last week directly following its successful run at the Indiana was productive of good $4,100.

Indiana (Katz-Feld) (2,100; 25-40) —'Blood' (WB). Money-getting picture that is being cramped unfortunately by arctic weather. Gross $6,000, fairly good anyway. Last week 'Master's Voice' (Par) and 'Vanities' on stage at 55c. didn't do much after a good week-end and the total gross was not profitable at $11,500.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,800; 25-40)—'Pink' (UA). Cantor has always been aces here, but the natives won't risk the cold in numbers enough to boost the take above a $7,000 level, which is okay at that. Last week dual of 'April Blossoms' (Reliance), which was world-premiered here, and 'Lone Wolf' (Col) brutal at $2,500.

Lyric (Olson) (2,000; 25-30-40)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and vaude, featuring Sims and Bailey. Considerably under house's usual mark at very mild $5,800. Last week 'Freshman Love' (WB) and B wes amateur unit big at $11,000.

20-35 Below in Mpls., but Waring Ups 'Colleg' to Wow 30G; 'Zero,' 'King' OK

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: innesota)

Coldest spell in local weather bureau history is just about ruining biz in some spots and hurting all around. Only one current attraction, Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians at the Minnesota seems immune to the weather handicap. Even 30 below zero temperatures can't keep 'em away there. Otherwise, however, sub-zero blasts are doing plenty of box office damage.

There has been more than a week of frigidity and, apparently, no relief is in sight. Most of time mercury has been hovering between minus 20 and 35 mark. It hasn't gone above zero in nine days; Minneapolis has been one of nation's three coldest cities.

When the Waring show is able to overcome the freezing breezes and travel along at a $30,000 clip, it demonstrates beyond the shadow of a doubt that the aggregation has what it takes. On a 28 below zero day they started strongly and there's no sign of any let-up. Picture with Waring is 'Collegiate.'

Two other highly regarded films are 'Ceiling Zero' and 'King of Burlesque' at the Orpheum and State, respec, but the weather and tough competition are making their going difficult. 'Magnificent Obsession' holds over for a second week at the World, third loop stanza for this heavy grosser. Surprisingly big business also is being done by 'The Informer' on its return loop engagement at the Time. 'Chan's Secret,' at the Lyric, completes an unusually strong first-run line-up.

Minnesota staged one of the biggest exploitation campaigns yet for Waring. Probably had more radio plugs than any attraction that ever has hit town. Star columnist and news commentator devoted a column to it in his newspaper and also plugged it over the ether. Waring on Tuesday night from the theatre announced the winner of the Star's 'Jane Arden' contest in which there were 3,000 young women entries. Ford company sent out three series of letters to dealers urging attendance at the theatre and dealers mailed 15,000 inserts to their accounts calling attention to the engagement. Five hundred one-sheets were displayed in their business establishments by 321 dealers. Eighteen towns within a radius of 35 miles were 24-sheeted and trailers were run in theatres in 21 towns. A white duck was presented to Fred Waring, a gift from Joe Penner, star of 'Collegiate.'

Estimates for This Week

Minnesota (Publix) (4,200; 35-40-60)—'Collegiate' (Par) and Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians on stage. Stage attraction a tremendous magnet and has public braving sub-zero blasts to attend theatre. Frozen autos and ozone discomforts can't keep 'em at home. Even without any break in the cold wave, house will go above $30,000, phenomenal, considering weather. If temperature moderates may top $32,000 mark set recently by Burns-Allen show with help of extra midnight New Year's Eve show at 85c—biggest biz house has had since 1929. Last week, Dangerous' (WB) and Ina Ray Hutton band, $10,800, hurt badly by severe cold.

Orpheum (Singer) (2,890; 25-35-40)—'Ceiling Zero' (FN). No slouch as an attraction and faring well enough, considering weather and opposition. Cagney and O'Brien magnets, favorable notices and word-of-mouth; under more normal conditions probably a cinch for impressive figures, but satisfactory $6,000. Last week, 'Captain Blood' (FN), $7,000, very good under circumstances.

State (Publix) (2,400; 25-35-40)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Highly praised, may rise to pretty good $5,000. Last week, 'Riff Raff' (MG), $3,500, light.

World (Steffes) (350; 25-35-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (3d week). Hot box office stuff for cold weather, en route to big $3,000. Last week, $2,700, good after $15,000 first week at Orpheum.

Time (Berger) (290; 15-25)—'Informer' (RKO). A box office flop when first shown in loop at Orpheum, and hadn't done much on subsequent engagements at other house, now brought back with prestige of one of 1935's 'best,' giving this house its biggest biz in months, despite cold; big $1,800 indicated. Last week, 'Narcotic' (2d week), $900, oke for second run.

Lyric (Publix) (1,300; 20-25)—'Chan's Secret' (20th). Well liked and doing pretty well in face of discouraging conditions, pretty good $1,800 in prospect. Last week, 'Melody Lingers' (UA), $1,600, fair.

Uptown (Publix) (1,200; 25-35)—'Thanks Million' (20th). Weather likely to hold this one down to fair $2,500. Last week, 'Night at Opera' (MG), $3,500, big.

Century (Publix) (1,600; 15-25)—'Old Kentucky' (Fox), second loop run. Good $2,800 indicated. Last week, 'Rendezvous' (MG), second loop run, $2,300, pretty good.

Aster (Publix) (900; 15-25)—'Mary Burns' (Par) and 'Last Outpost' (Par), loop second runs, and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG), first run, split. Fair $700 in prospect. Last week, 'Barbary Coast' (UA) and 'No Mercy' (20th), loop second runs, split, $900, pretty good.

Good Pics Do Good Biz Despite Cold; 'Cook' 18½G, Wash.

Washington, Jan.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Bitterest cold of season is holding box offices down, but not enough to worry anybody. Only pics taking on chin are those that haven't any pull anyway.

Biggest profit of week will accrue to Earle for third Maj. Bowes' amateur troupe to play local stage. 'Rose of Rancho' was given big send-off by Fox on Gladys Swartout angle, but gross won't be above average.

Belasco, local foreign flicker spot, is experimenting with first German film, 'Comradeship,' and suffering. Despite clever selling, it is getting neither pro nor anti-Hitler crowd, and local critics can't see why it won international award, even on art angle.

Best bally honors go to Fox for 'Rancho.' Conservative campaign, but it hit through every available channel.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (Loew) (2,363; 25-35-60)—'Bride' (Par). Average in ace house with probably $15,000. Last week second of 'Two Cities' (MG) got nice $15,000.

Earle (WB). (2,424; 25-35-40-60)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and Bowes' amateurs. Headed for nice $13,500. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) took oke $17,000.

Fox (Loew) (3,424; 25-35-60)—'Rancho' (Par) and vaude. Swarthout plus slight draw by Toby Wing personal will have to be satisfied with oke $20,000. Last week 'Pro. Soldier' (20th took oke $21,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,830; 25-35-60)—'Obsession' (U). Bally on anniversary issue of 'Time' tossed in this week may push third stanza up to nice $7,000. Last week same feature drew big $10,000.

Met (WB (1,853; 25-40)—'Lone Wolf' (Col). Mystery stuff sure-fire in this house and should win good $4,000. Last week third on mainstem for 'Capt. Blood' (WB) took nice $4,000.

Belasco (Radin) (1,100; 25-35-50-75)—'Comradeship' (Asso.). First German flicker in local foreign-film spot dying. Maybe weak $1,800. Last week 'Kids and Queen' (U) in arty spot flopped with $2,000.

Columbia (Loew) (1,263; 2-40)—'Great Life' (Par). Lucky too better weak $2,000. Last week second downtown stanza of 'Wilderness' (MG) got nice $7,500 for nine days.

In Tacoma It's the Waterfront; 'Ah' $4,500

Tacom , Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Roxy)

Rumors of trouble along the waterfront, with leading trans-Pacific steamship company 'reorganizing' under new federal act, is not making the town any too happy, but lumber is still up. Boxoffices are running at fair enough clip.

Best exploitation at Roxy for 'Ah, Wilderness' with local 'family' angles played up in press, and ad space upped.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse)Hamrick) (750; 16-27)—'Scarlet' (RKO) and 'Missing Man' (Col), dual. Nice combo, hitting for $1,600. Last week, 'Ticket' (U) and 'Last Night' (U), dual, $1,400, almost fair.

Music ox (Hamrick) (1,400; 16-27-37)—'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'It's in Air' (MG), dual. Playing up Loy, Taxter and Benny for so-so $3,000. Last week 'Obsession' (U) and 'Paddy O'Day' (Col), dual, $5,000, great.

Roxy (Hamrick) (1,300; 16-27-37)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Navy Wife' (Fox) dual. Big $4,500. Last week, 'Burlesque' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RK), dual, $3,800, good.

'Collegiate' $17,000, Very Rah-Rah in New'k; 'Wilderness'-'Gent' 14G

Newark, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: State)

Newark hasn't yet recovered from the snowstorm and cold wave. Worst of it has passed but people are still staying home when they might be out. Despite this Proctor's will be okay with $17,000 for 'Collegiate' and 'We're Only Human' and Loew's will take about $14,000 for 'Ah Wilderness' and 'Perfect Gentleman.' The Branford will be very much okay if, as expected, it takes $12,000 for the second week of 'Magnificent Obsession' and 'Freshman Love.'

The New Mosque closed Tuesday, apparently for good. Evidently the b.r. wasn't big enough to stand the drains of the storm. No full payoff reported, with El Brendel mentioned as waiting.

'Name Your Poison' at the Shubert with Leonore Ulric closed here at the end of the engagement. Shows like this kill the road.

Loew's is using a radio transcription over WHOM and an old auto with people wearing 1906 costumes for 'Wilderness.' Factor makeup shows a display in drug stores. Ledger carrier boys attended theatre with resultant story and art in paper; 5,000 heralds distributed house to house and in stores with packages.

Estimates for This Week

Branford (WB) (2,966; 15-65)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (second week). Will take a fine $12,000 on holdover; first, though killed by weather, great at $16,000.

Capitol (WB) (1,200; 15-30-40)—'Night at the Opera' (MG) and Public Menace' (Col). Fair enough with $3,500. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Splendor' (UA) same figure.

Little (Franklin) (299; 35-50)—'Pioneers of Palestine' (Musa) (second week). Cold killed this and it hasn't come back, maybe $600 on second frame. First week started great and finished okay with $1,200.

Loew's State (2,780; 20-30-35-55-75)—'Ah Wilderness' (MG) and 'Perfect Gentlemen' (MG). No whirlwind but good enough at $14,000. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'One Way Ticket' (Col) better than hoped at $9,000.

Paramount (Adams-Par) (2,248; 15-25-30-40-55-75) — 'Conquer the Sea' (Acad.) and vaude. Dying this week with about $6,500. Last week 'Soak the Rich' (Par) also bad at $5,000.

Proctor's (RKO) (2,300; 15-55)—and Lyceum (roof) (770) same scale. 'Collegiate (Par) and 'Only Human' (RKO). Doing very well, Penner pretty popular here; should take a great $17,000. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) came away with $9,000.

Terminal (Skouras) (1,600; 15-25-40)—'Informer' (RKO) and 'Swifty' (U). Sunday opening, not used in this town lately. Looks like a nice $4,500. Last week 'Dancing Lady' (MG) and 'Big House' (MG) proved to be just what they wanted and revivals cleaned up with $5,000.

Zero Biffs Buff Again; Nothing To Beat $9,000

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: Buffalo)

Sub-zero wave is devastating local box offices this week, continuing the havoc by a similar frigid spell during the stanza just past. Takings are down plenty with nothing standing out over the general run. Turnstiles have been slowing up since the holidays and undergoing a seasonal slump.

No house looks set for anything over $9,000 currently, although the Buffalo may hit that figure. Between $6,000 and $8,000 seems to be the order of the day at all the rest.

'Anything Goes' exploitation was above average, chiefly by reason of the grouping of the tie-ups. Kraft cheese outfit plugged Crosby, employing all trucks and sales staff to spread the works. Dodge automobile people used newspaper space, also featuring Crosby, with theatre and date sniped. Magazine distribution trucks were utilized and men's wear, song shops and specialty stores fell in line with Crosby tie-ups.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Shea) (3,600; 30-40-50)—'Anything Goes' (Par). Started okay but drew mixed notices, the bad ones being very bad. Cold spell whittling down attendance for around $9,000. Last week 'Blood' (WB) held up to estimates, but fig-

Mostly Seconds and H.O.'s in Philly; 'Zero' Leads New Entries at $15,000

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.
(Best Exploitation: Stanley)

Indications point to better weather breaks this week but nothing sensational in the way of biz is promised in Philly's downtown houses. A number of holdovers and second runs cut the list of important new offerings down to three.

Of this trio, 'Ceiling Zero' at the Stanley is being most closely watched. This one got a set of rave notices and is generally figured as b. o. Saturday's start was okay but not extraordinary, but yesterday (Monday) the management reported a steadily growing interest which is figured for some real trade before the week is out. Should approach $15,000. Doubtful if pic holds over as 'Anything Goes' is all set to succeed.

Special exploitation of 'Zero' by the S-W people involving a showing for heads of local air interests, noted flyers and other celebs got plenty of attention in the dailies.

Fox and Earle figure for only fairly good weeks. Former has 'Paddy O'Day' with Jane Withers on the screen and a not especially notable stage show. 'March of Time' may help, with $14,000 hoped for. Earle has 'Widow from Monte Carlo' on screen and Frank Parker heading a vaude array. This, too, figures around $13,000 or $14,000.

Stanton has apparently decided on a Wednesday-change policy in preference to its former Saturday date which, of late anyway, Stanley has been using. 'Invisible Ray' is ending its stay today (Tuesday) with a dreary $5,500. 'Exclusive Story' succeeds.

Of the holdovers 'Strike Me Pink' is easily the outstander. Hit, like all the others, by the weather its first week, it still featured the field and, with better weather breaks, ought to hit $12,000 this week. Three weeks figured sure. 'Ghost Goes West' is underlined.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (1,200; 40-55-65)—'Pink' (UA) (2d week). Zooming along in great style with three weeks sure and maybe four. Close to $12,000. Last week $14,500 with storm and zero weather.

Arcadia (600; 25-40-50)—'Riff Raff' (MG). Completes five-day stay today. 'Tale of Two Cities' (MG) tomorrow. Both second runs. Another house which may switch to Wednesday change policy, 'Riff' getting $2,000. 'Bride' (Par), preceding pic, got rousing $4,600 in nine days.

Boyd (2,400; 40-55)—'Obsession' (U) (2d week). About $10,000. Last week $16,000, despite weather.

Earle (2,000; 25-40-50)—'Monte Carlo' (WB) and vaude. Frank Parker stage headliner. Fair $13,500 likely. Last week 'Freshman Love' (WB) and vaude. Sad $12,500.

Fox (3,000; 40-55-65)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and stage show. Juve draw helping days, but combo won't get much over $14,000, average. Last week 'Pro. Soldiers' (20th) and stage show. Swell $22,000 in nine-day stay despite bliz. Could have stayed.

Karlton (1,000; 25-35-40)—'Dangerous' (WB) (2d run). Maybe $8,-800. Last week 'Dan Harrigan' (FN), first run. Bloole, $2,200.

Keith's (2,000; 30-40-50)—'Collegiate' (Par) (2d run). Fair $3,100. Last week 'Blood' (WB) (2d week), second run, $2,500.

Stanley (3,700; 40-55)—'Zero' (WB). Rave notices and should get $15,000 or better, but appears not set for holdover. Last week 'Rancho' (Par) $10,500, sad, considering plugging.

Stanton (1,700; 30-40-50)—'Invisible Ray' (U). Ending weak $5,500 week, with 'Exclusive Story' to follow. Last week 'Last of Pagans' (MG) only $5,700.

'BLOOD' WITH HOPPE P.A. $11,000 IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 28.
(Best Exploitation: Princess)

Main stems will be affected by death of the King and all will close down today (Tuesday) until 6 p.m. Willie Hoppe in person Sunday night (26) on 'P's and Cues' short at Palace with special sport pages publicity helped week-end gross.

Palace has 'Captain Blood,' which filled house Friday and Saturday and looks for a good $11,000. Capitol under the new management of Harold Bishop has good double feature bill in 'Rose of Rancho' and 'Her Master's Voice' and should gross $8,000.

Mike Wilkes, 'A exploitation man from Toronto, in town building up publicity for 'Strike Me Pink' at Princess. Tie-up is with Mount Royal Dairies, controlling around 1,200 stores all over city, cards in English and French exhibited in windows; also with drug stores for Pebeco tooth paste and with tobacco stores on 'Calabash' song and cigar ditty. Gloves, sports clothes and bathing girl tie-up with department stores, one of the most thorough coverings in history of publicity here.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Blood' (WB). This town by no means fed up on costume pix and this one should be not less than $11,000. Last week 'Night at Opera' (MG), $9,500.

Capitol (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and 'Her Master's Voice' (Par). Good average bill, which should gross $8,000. Last week 'Stella Parish' (WB) and 'Miss Paoific Fleet' (WB), $6,500.

Loew's (M, T, Co.) (3,200; 50)—'Navy Wife' (WB) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th) with 'Happy Days Revue.' Looks like $14,000, mainly on vaude. Last week, 'Oakley' (RKO) and 'No Ransom' (Emp) with 'Round and Round' Revue, $12,000.

Princess (CT) (2,300; 50)—'Pink' (UA) and 'Atlantic Adventure' (Col). Cantor opus should pull in on turnaway biz, not less than $12,000. Last week 'Crime and Punishment' (Col) and 'Sweet Surrender' (U) did very well at $8,000.

Cinema Imperial (Ind) (1,600; 34)—'Mimi' (Rep) and 'Rose' (French). At $2,000, fair. Last week 'Invitation to Waltz' (Emp) and 'La Nuit Seulement,' $2,500.

Cinema de Paris (France-Film) 600; 50)—'Marius' and 'Fanny.' May gross $1,200; $1,000 last week for 'Mariee du Regiment' and 'Stradivarius.'

St. Denis (France-Film)—'Maternite' and 'Jim la Houlette.' First will get good houses, gross jumping to $6,500. Last week 'Les Bons Jours' and 'Bourrachon,' 15,500.

Zero in KC but 'Pink' Big 17½G; 'Face'-Duke, 11G, 'Anything' Ditto

Kansas City, Jan. 28.
(Best Exploitation: Midland)

With the mercury hitting the zero mark, theatre business has been sad, and the present week holds but little encouragement for the managers.

All of the downtown first run houses are back on their regular Friday opening schedules, with the exception of the Newman, which got away Thursday with 'Anything Goes,' in for eight days.

The Uptown, Fox first-runner, which has been giving dual bills for a number of weeks at 25 and 40c, has changed to single features for 25c any time.

While suffering with weather breaks, the same as the other houses, the poor showing by the Bowes Amateurs unit at the Main-street last week was a surprise. Show had been given the sweetest kind of advance buildup and publicity, but the result was disappointing.

For 'Strike Me Pink' the Midland's management started early with advance stuff. Had 1,000-line art display in the Sunday gravure of the Star; gobs of extra space in the regular editions; tied up with large stores for cooperative ads, displays in windows, prizes for Cantor slogans, thousands of large heralds through chain drug company, etc.

Estimates for This Week

Minstreet (RKO) (3,200; 25-35-50)—'Another Face' (RKO) and Duke Ellington's band. In spite of stiff opposition looks set for close to $11,-000, pretty good. Last week 'Personal Maid' (WB) and Bowes unit $10,500, not so hot.

idland (Loew) (4,000; 25-40)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). Strong advance publicity and the popularity of the star counting, headed for around $17,500, fine. Last week 'Professional Soldier' (20th) closed $7,500, only fair.

Newman (Par) (1,900; 25-40)—'Anything Goes' (Par). Best bet the house has had for some time. On eight-day run expects close to $11,-000, good. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) $7,000, good considering weather.

Tower (2,200; 25-35)—'Crime and Punishment' (Col) and stage show. Good pace, likely close to $7,000, normal. Last week 'Magnificent Obsession' (U), second week, almost $10,000, okay plenty.

Uptown (Fox) (2,040; 25)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th). First week of the new two-bits-for-any-seat policy seems to be attractive; indications for around $4,000, good. Last week 'Mister Hobo' (GB) and '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep), dual, at 25 and 40c, $3,400, fair.

Anzac Biz Oke

Sydney, Jan. 8.

Iz build here is expected to hold well into the New Year, Best is being gotten with 'China Seas' (MG), 'Curly Top' (20th-Fox), 3rd week, and 'Love Me Forever' (Col). 'The Good Fairy' (U) opened rather suddenly, and without ballyhoo, but may develop into a hit.

Other pix includes 'Page Miss Glory' (WB), 'The Guv'nor' (GB), 'Big Broadcast' (Par), 'Murder in the Fleet' (MG), 'Scrooge' (BD), and 'The Rainmakers' (RKO).

Melbourne, Jan. 8.

Managers here are satisfied with biz and hopeful of a further build. Current attractions include 'Call of the Wild' (UA), 'Love Me Forever' (Col), 'Scrooge' (BD), 'Big Broadcast' (Par), 'China Seas' (MG), 'Heart's Desire' (BIP), and 'Bright Lights' (WB).

'OBSESH' SMASH 13G, 'GOES' BIG $9,500, DENVER

Denver, Jan. 28.
(Best Exploitation: Denham)

'Magnificent Obsession' is packing them in at the Denver and goes to the Aladdin for a second week, after which it may move to Broadway. Broke a house record for the past three years for midweek opening, and keeping up hot pace. Standouts every day and to sidewalk by 7 p.m. opening day. Picture has what it takes to drag in women and where women go the men will too. 'Anything goes' is sailing to a grand week at the Denham and on Sunday tied the house record, set by last Mae West flicker. Flim may be held more than week, although even with huge gross this is not certain. Manager Cockrill may pull because of big ones coming up from Paramount, which are only films Denham runs.

Other films average or under.

Beer exploitation to the Denham with song contest; over 300 entries, three winners to be submitted to Paramount studios for possible use stunt good for several extra stories in Post, usually tough paper to crack on exploitations.

Al Smith's speech Saturday night hurt grosses. While talking, but folks rushed to theatres as soon as over. Stock show past week and a half boosted grosses with thousands in from the sticks.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Huffman) (1,500; 25-40-50)—'Dan Matthews' (Col). Blah at $1,500. Last week 'First a Girl' (GB) above average with $3,000.

Broadway (Huffman) (1,500; 25-40)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Following a week at the Denver, okay biz at $1,900. Last week 'Splendor' (UA), after a week at the Aladdin, just average with $1,000

Denham (Cooper) (1,500; 25-35-40)—'Anything Goes' (Par). Crosby the candy here; big biz at $9,500 should be a holdover, but for piling up of product. Last week 'Millions in Air' (Par), very good $3,500 for five days.

Denver (Huffman) (2,500; 25-35-50)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and stage band. A smashing $13,000 and a cinch holdover for two or three weeks. Last week 'King of Burlesque' (20th) pulled down a good $8,000, more than 50% above average.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,660; 25-35-40)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Not so good, $3,500. Last week 'Last of Pagans' (MG) low with $4,000.

Paramount (Huffman) (2,000; 25-40)—'Crime and Punishment' (Col). Mild at $2,500. Last week 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) showed to balcony holdouts every night, and a few main floor holdouts also; $4,000.

'ZERO' WARM $5,500 IN ICE COLD OMAHA

Omaha, Jan. 28.
(Best Exploitation: Omaha)

Old man winter is showing the natives he's not kidding with 10 straight days of subzero temperatures and snow measured in feet. Thermometer skidded to lowest mark in score of years, and signs of relief vague.

Opening in a regulation snowstorm, Omaha theatre with 'Magnificent Obsession' put on a 'Hollywood premiere,' the biggest stunt the town has seen this winter, but Jack Frost still holds the upper hand. It will, nevertheless, lead the town to excellent money. Right behind will be the Orpheum and the Brandeis with 'King of Burlesque' and 'Ceiling Zero.' Last named gets the backing of the Hearst Bee-News and gets the splurge of ad notice, but opposition films more than keep it company.

Exploitation merit to Ted Emerson on the Omaha opening stunt, made the more effective by as strong an accompanying and following campaign as a film ever had here.

Estimates for This Week

Omaha (Blank-Tri-States) (2,100; 26-40)—'Obsession' (U). In the town spotlight with a grand campaign behind it and an extra evening of showing as it opened Wednesday night (22). To stay at least seven and a half days and should reach top money at near $10,000, remarkable in this weather. 'Here's to Romance' makes it a double bill. Last week 'Bank at Monte Carlo,' coupled with 'Chan's Secret' (20th), fair at $5,400, pulled midway in its seventh day.

Orpheum (Blank-Tri-State) (2,-976; 25-40)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Will make a kingly impression on the ticket till, despite the weather. Due to build and finish strong, especially if a letup in the cold occurs within the week. 'Socrates' (WB) as the double half of the bill helps. $8,500 more than satisfactory. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) opened in the height of last week's series of blizzards with 'Mary Burns' (Par) as second half of bill. Two topped expectations to $6,800, good work under the snow.

Brandeis (Singer-RKO) (1,250; 25-35-40)—'Ceiling Zero' (FN). Continues the single feature pace started here last week, and will in all probability do as well by itself. Strong bill of shorts to assist with 'March of Time' getting ad space, but it's the film and stars and newspaper ads that make the biz. Headed for $5,500 and can easily do more with better weather. Last week 'Blood' (FN) began the single feature policy and came through in nice shape, though again snow cut down the figures; $4,600, under expectations, but reasonably so.

'Dream' $11,500, Seattle Okay All Around; What, No Zero-Weather Cry?

Seattle, Jan. 28.
(Best Exploitation: Liberty)

Usual moveovers from Orpheum to Blue Mouse and from Fifth Ave. to Music Box giving the late-goers additional chance to see 'Ah, Wilderness' and 'Obsession,' respectively, with returns okay. 'Captain Blood' is going to town at Fifth, but was given only added newspaper advertising and is going it alone, due to feature running two hours. This is no change from the dual policy recently put into the town by Hamrick-Evergreen, but is deviation, in that where pix runs extra length, singleton will prevail.

Liberty had best exploitation for 'Strike Me Pink.' Included advance with usherettes having silk banner across chest, with words, 'We Want Cantor' for week prior opening; street stunts, extra newspaper and radio advertising; billboards, also reaching nearby towns, and circulars stuffed into key boxes of all leading hotels.

Marvelous co-op given last week for first roadshowed pix in this burg in over a year. School supt. dismissed different public and high school each day for mats, which meant capacity mats all week, for 'Midsummer Night's Dream.' On Saturday a. m. spec. mat had 2,000 teachers in the seats.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Ah, Wilderness' (MG) and 'Navy Wife' (Fox). Dual direct from Orph, getting good $4,500 here. Last week 'Burlesque' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RKO), dual (2d week), $3,800, fair.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,800; 21-32)—'Night at Opera' (MG) and 'This Is Life' (Fox), dual. Big $4,-000. Last week 'Metropolitan' (20th) and 'Bad Boy' (20th), dual, three days, $1,500, fair; 'Thanks a Million' (20th) and 'Great Life' (Par), dual, seven days, $3,000, okay.

Fifth Ave. (Evergreen) (2,400; 27-37-42)—'Blood' (FN). Going it alone with 'March of Time' and balanced shorts; $8,500, good. Last week 'Obsession' (U) and 'Paddy O'Day' (Fox), dual, $10,100, great.

Liberty (JvH) (1,900; 10-27-37)—'Pink' (UA) and shorts. Big campaign drawing hefty $11,000; new house record set opening day. Last week 'Whispering Smith' (20th) and 'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col), dual, $4,100, big.

Music Box (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Obsession' (U) and 'Paddy O'Day' (Fox), dual, from Fifth Ave., okay at $4,200. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG), singleton, landed $4,100, big.

Music Hall (Hamrick) (2,300; 57-$1.73). This week dark. Last week 'Dream' (WB) with local school and college angle and organizations played to limit, reached big $11,500.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (2,700; 27-37-42) — 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'First a Girl' (GB), dual. Good at $6,500. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Navy Wife' (Fox) dual, $8,000.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,106; 21-27-32)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'Freshman Love' (WB), dual. Bad at $3,000. Last week 'East of Java' (U) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG), dual, $4,100, oke.

Weather Hurts Everybody, but 'Pink' $13,000, 'Pro Soldier' $4,000 in Ptsgh.

Pittsburgh, Jan.
(Best Exploitation Penn)

Cold continues to nip grosses, second consecutive week that weather has played havoc with business around here. There was a bit of relief over week-end, but sub-zero returned yesterday (27), dropping take to almost nothing again and no relief in sight for present.

Mild Sunday (26) was a break for most part, with big attendance all over town and a help. Fulton, with 'Professional Soldier,' had its best seventh day since they were legalized and looks as though McLaglen-Bartholomew combo will do fairly well at $4,000 but won't hold. 'East of Java' and 'Dance Band' to go in Thursday (30).

At Penn 'Strike Me Pink' got off fairly well but weather's hurting plenty and will be lucky to get $13,-000, one of poorest grosses here in some time for a Cantor picture. Management had hoped for nine days on this one in order to get back to Friday opening, but it goes out tomorrow (29) for 'Ceiling Zero.' Stanley doing only so-so with 'Riff Raff' and Lucky Millinder's band, with not much chance of more than ordinary $16,500.

Warner taking it on the chin, too, with 'Three Live Ghosts' and 'Coronado,' maybe $3,600, while Alvin holding over 'Magnificent Obsession' again will have to hurry to get $3,000 in five days beyond end of second week. That's to get house back to Friday inaugural, 'If You Could Only Cook' and Earl Hines' band opening this week (31).

Special exploitation splurge in general at Penn for 'Strike Me Pink,' tied in on radio plugs, product contacts, extra snipe and 24-sheet locations in addition to big institutional advertising splurge.

Estimates for This Week

Alvin (Harris) (2,000; 25-35-40)—'Obsession' (U) (3d week). House had 'First a Girl' and 'Lone Wolf Returns' penciled in to open Sunday (26), but decided to hold 'Obsesh' for five more days to get back on Friday schedule this week. For the extra time, looks like around $3,000, not so bad considering weather. Second full week brought about $5,-000, weather keeping it far down, with more than $20,000 seen in 19 days. Considering all the breaks against it, excellent.

Fulton (Shea-Hyde) (1,700; 15-25-40)—'Pro Soldier' (20th)—McLaglen's recent 'informer' accolades has made him a b.o. name, and, with Freddie Bartholomew, should get okay $4,000. Last week 'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and 'Whispering Smith' (20th) took it on chin with rest of them, just hovering around $3,000 mark.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 25-35-40)—'Pink' (UA). Feeling the mercury pinch, too, and will be fortunate to wind up with $13,000. House would have sworn this one would get nine days in order to put spot back on Friday opening but no go and 'Zero' (WB) opens tomorrow. Last week 'Bride' (Par) $6,500, brutal.

Stanley (WB) (3,600; 25-40-55)—'Riff Raff' (MG) and Lucky Millinder's band unit. Also hitting the skids and doubtful of collecting more than $16,500, n.h. Last week Lyon-Daniels-Wing-Perkins stage combo credited with holding 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO) to $18,000 despite coldest weather here since 1899.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 25-40)—'Coronado' (Par) and 'Three Live Ghosts' (MG). Behind the eight ball, maybe $3,600. Last week 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Fang' (RKO) got away nicely but fell to pieces day of storm and never got back on its feet again. Around $3,500.

338 New British Film Companies In 1935 Capitalized at $17,000,000

London, Jan. 19.

Checkup of the official figures at Somerset House, London, reveals that 338 new cinema companies have been registered in this country during the past 12 months. Capitalized value of this group is $17,000,000.

Figure, of course, is purely nominal, as most important British film companies have a nominal capital of a few hundred pounds, backing being private.

Of the 338 companies formed, 12 were public, which means that share dealings can be made in them on the Stock Exchange. Their authorized capital aggregates $3,300,000.

In the same 12 months 162 theatrical companies were registered, capitalized at $2,500,000.

Largest public issue made during the period was by National Provincial Cinemas, which increased its issue from $500,000 to $3,750,000.

Technicolor, registered during the period, has a $500,000 capital.

Gaumont Super Cinemas, largely registered by the Gaumont British interests to cover their deals for circuit supervision of indies, was capitalized at $2,000,000.

Amount of capital sunk into British films and film theatres during the period can't be estimated, as the extent of the private backing to companies registered with only a few dollars may run into millions—and in one or two cases definitely does.

Snider-Dean Start In Sydney on Aid To M-G, Paramount

Sydney, Jan. 8.

Snider-Dean combo is all set to spring into competition against the big units. Takeover of the Fuller houses in the capital cities has been consummated, with the Snider-Dean name up over the houses previously controlled by the Fuller outfit.

Not content with the theatres already set, S-D will come into the Civic here with M-G and Par product. M-G pix will also run at the Mayfair, formerly all- , M-G thus getting release in every important spot in both up and downtown outside the General Theatres' houses.

Metro, as a matter of fact, is in a strong position all over Australia today, both on solo exhibition and in conjunction with the bigger indies. Dave Martin of the indie Liberty has booked 'Escapade' for a long run commencing Feb. 10, thus adding another spot, although the tieup is only for the one pic so far.

Paramount is not too far behind M-G in city spots, using the Prince Edward for aces, and Cameo for programmers' also working with M-G in the nabes, especially in Melbourne. Both M-G and Par have denied any biz combination to combat the General Theatres chain, simply stating they are spotting pix wherever possible. Also deny any financial holdings in indie theatres.

The S-D break into the indie field has proved a great help for M-G and Associated Distributors, the C. M. Woolf unit here. S-D will set aside certain theatres to run all-British pix.

New combo will not stick with pix solely and will take a fling at vaude in certain spots. Sam Snider is reported as keen on the vaude idea in conjunction with pix.

LOEW IN SOUTH AFRICA FOR SCHLESINGER SUIT

Capetown, Jan. 28.

Arthur Loew arrived here yesterday (27) to personally testify in Metro's suit against the Schlesinger interests (South African Theatres). M-G suit would void a five-year film franchise contract.

Metro claims the contract was obtained by Schlesinger's unfairly. Company figures it would rather handle its pictures here on its own.

Moskowitz Back

After supervising the start of construction on two new theatres in South America and acquisition of sites for two others for the Loew circuit, Harry Moskowitz is due to arrive in New York tomorrow (Thursday). He has spent six months in South America, supervising new houses at Lima, Peru, and Santiago, Chile. Sites were acquired for two others at Montevideo, Uruguay and Buenos Aires.

Brisbane, Jan. 8.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is just about set to erect a new theatre in city proper. Grant has been secured from the city to build, and M-G holds an option on a suitable site.

At present M-G operates a theatre just outside the real city limits.

100% U. S. PIX IN SYDNEY; NO BRITISH

8.

When 'Metropolitan' (20th-Fox) comes into the Embassy, and M-G pix go into the Mayfair, next week, there will not be a British house operating in this city.

Both the Embassy and Mayfair have been all-British for some time, excepting for a fling now and then with a Yank.

This state of affairs is not expected to last very long and the Embassy will probably swing back to British following the 'Met' run.

ven when three British theatres here were in operation the distribs were left with plenty on ice. Now looks as though the London bosses will be asking their local reps for an answer. It is the smaller Britishers who have had to fight tremendously hard to get spots for their product. Angle is that although this is a British community, the public just will not respond very strongly to the average British pic. Should a British pic be exceptionally strong on entertainment, b. o. results are okay, otherwise nothing doing.

HAGUE TAX SQUAWKS

Exhi laim Toughest Load—Press Helps in Protests

The Hague, Jan. 8.

Trade papers, exhibs, theatre owners and the Bioscoopbond (film theatre combine), are uniting in a common defense against the exorbitant maximum tax now imposed on amusements in general and film theatres in particular. Cinemas are in desperate straits, they claim.

Heaviest tax load falls on shoulders of the pic folk. Others, vaude and legit, fare a trifle better. Owners are threatening to shut down their houses and force employees on the government dole unless measures are taken to reduce the incumbent levies. Authorities have decreed that all maintain the maximum tax of 20% on the gross.

Journals are clamoring in type, but Bioscoopbond has taken action and appealed to Rotterdam and Amsterdam for an amendment more favorable to the entertainment biz. Press is pointing to the revisions instituted in England, where taxes were abolished on all cheap seats.

Bader Expected

London, Jan. 19.

Dave Bader is expected here some time in February. He has been looking over the situation in New York and Hollywood and reports several hook-ups with the film industry.

When he returns, he intends to establish an agency catering for stars and film scenarios for English and continental companies.

Royer Plans Spanish Pic Series in H'wood

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Fanchon Royer has returned from Mexico City where she has been producing Spanish pix for two years. She is planning similar series here.

Jack Gallagher, her husband, remained in Mexico as exec in the Department of Motion Pictures.

ANZAC QUOTA LAW PUZZLE

Looks as though Victoria will experience the same difficulty as New South Wales in figuring out just how its Quota Act will operate. Government has passed the Bill, but at present there is not one camera grinding in the tate. Cinesound (Victoria, Ltd.), the only unit likely to start work in the near future.

Money from the pic production is just a laugh here, and flotation via stocks is regarded as an impossibility. As in N. S. Wales, only recognized units stand a chance to swing into production. Unknowns no not mean a thing to the investors.

So this State has a quota, but distributors can't buy pix to sell to exhibs if there are no pix to be had. And they say they will not produce. Maybe the government will figure a way out of that.

Korda Orders Heavy Exploitation Layout For His Pix in Paris

Paris,

Dissatisfied with the lukewarmness of the continent towards his films, and desirous of seeing personally that they go over better, Alexander Korda has arranged for expensive pushing in Paris showcases of his two next releases here, 'Ghost Goes West' and 'Things to Come.'

Launching of the duo will be on a roadshow principle, with London Films paying all promotion expenses. Theatres will get a fixed cut, for overhead, out of first receipts, and after that the gate will be split on a sliding scale, with Korda getting the big end.

Deal was made with the Umanski circuit, which operates three Champs Elysees houses, the Lord Byron, Avenue and Le Paris. Korda saw the Umanskis personally while passing through Paris a couple of weeks ago and started the negotiations. Lacy Kastner, United Artists continental chief, was out of town at the time, UA sat in on further negotiations, however, and final deal was made in London, in the UA offices, with the approval of Murray Silverstone. Local U.A. offices will handle all actual details of launching.

'Ghost' will go into the Lord Byron early next month, with about $5,000 worth of ads dished out to the local press to smooth its passage. Exploitation is being handled by Curtis Melnitz.

H. G. Wells picture will go into the newer and bigger Umanski house, Le Paris, at a date not yet determined. Publicity nut is $13,500. Facade of house will be redecorated futuristically by Paris architect, plus with banquets and whatnot.

Hague's '35 Shears

The Hague, Jan. 8.

Although general opinion of exhibs here was that the total amount of censored film was considerably less than last year, the amount of nixed footage totalled 150,000 feet.

This was culled from 20 features, ten shorts and a few minor clippings from newsreels. Of the features Mae West's 'Belle of New York' (Par) and 'Le Grelucon Delicat' (French) suffered most. Motive for deletions blamed on criminal and immoral taints.

Newsreels spent a comparatively unmolested year. No reel was completely axed. Several were subjected to minor ommissions.

Britons in Hollywood

Maxwell's Chain Nabs Jack Hylton's Pic

London, . 19.

'She Shall Have Music,' Julius Hagen-Jack Hylton film, opens at the Regal, Marble Arch, around end of March, to coincide with Hylton's return from America. English maestro is likely to make a personal on opening night.

Film was intended play in Gaumont-British houses, but nearest releasing dates available were in May, which is considered the off season here. Now it will play the Associated British Cinemas as soon as it terminates the Regal date, which is also a John Maxwell house.

Understanding is that it plays all Maxwell houses on general release, with exception of the spots where A. B. C. has no supers, such as Manchester and Newcastle. There it will play the Paramount Astorias.

'Reelers Worried By French Court Libel Judgment

Serious blow to local newsreel activity is seen in decision of Court of Appeals sustaining libel judgment granted to Dr. Pfeiffer of Dijon against Germaine Dulac, manager of France Actualities. Newsreeler is ordered to pay $500 fine and $1,640 damages for having shown uncommented picture of Pfeiffer's private clinic in the same subject with shots relating to the Judge Prince slaying and the Stavisky scandal. Lower court set fine at only $10 and damages at $260.

This is the first judgment in France to be granted for libel by motion picture. Feared it may open way to suits by all persons filmed while charged with crime, if later they're freed, and even by railroads or airlines for accident pictures. Mme. Dulac is expected to carry appeal to the supreme court.

France Actualites was the only reel to make a shot of the Pfeiffer Clinic. Firm contends the picture was made by a cameraman after the news had been covered, merely to get some additional shots of the city of Dijon while he was there on the story, and it would never have been shown in a theatre if a local exhib had not asked for everything taken in connection with the story, including cuts. Only this one exhib showed the clinic shot.

SEE HOPE FOR END OF MEXICAN STRIKE

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

Efforts to settle the strike against the eight major American distributors here, which has lasted since Sept. 27, are very much in again out again.

Reps of the distributors called off conversations with leaders of the strikers, which were held at the offices of the federal board of conciliation and arbitration, because of reported obstinacy of the help in insisting upon a pay raise of 10% to 25%. Operators flatly nixed this, saying their biz cannot afford of such increased assessment.

Reported that things looked favorable for a settlement when the talks broke off. A little later the strikers induced the distributors to resume conversations, which are now in progress and with indications that some sort of an agreement may be reached before long.

Meanwhile, the organized exhibitors have reminded the ministry of finance that if it doesn't grant them an extension of 60 to 90 days on the privilege of importing pics at a flat rate of $0.72 per kilogram, allowed in December as an emergency measure, they must shutter, because the normal duty of $19.85 per kilo would sink them.

Talks between government and mixed comish representing the film industry are designed to settle tax and duties controversy, are expected to resume this month.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

These are gray, dull days in the British colony in Hollywood. The King is being mourned with brief informal services conducted in various Episcopal churches pending the formal service to be held next Sunday (2) in St. Paul's Cathedral, at which Hugh Walpole will read a portion of the ritual.

The few who cannot avoid being absent participated in preliminary prayers last Sunday. Chief of these was the service conducted at St. John's, at which Guy Standing assisted.

To add further to the inactivity of the British colony, several are ill and others are leaving. Marian Marsh is recuping from an emergency appendectomy, as is Errol Flynn, who has been assigned the romantic lead in 'Ceasar's Wife,' with Olivia de Havilland.

Ida Lupino, who was ill with flu last week, has returned to her studio but is working short hours. Reggie Owen, who is skeded for 'Petticoat Fever,' has returned from Palm Springs where he was recuperating from a recent illness, but is not fully recovered yet.

Among those leaving the Coast for England is Ray Milland, making a fast trip home. He expects to fly across to Paris to visit his mother, who is ill. Reginald Denny is planning to visit India with Jack Barrymore. And Mark Sandrich leaves next week for a two months' stay in England previous to starting work on his new five-year contract with RKO.

May Robson is taking an auto trip up the coast with illian Harmer.

David Torrance and Jean Hersholt reminiscing about the silent days when they first met.

Molly Lamont is having considerable trouble these days getting her nails in shape on account of her gardening activities.

Henry Stephenson hates dining out so much that he brings his lunch to the set. . . . Ronald Colman entertained the John Masefields on the Fox lot and took them to the set, where he is making 'Under Two Flags.'

Alan Mowbray's English billiard table, which is the only one of its kind in town, is getting quite a play from the filmites.

Warner's have cast several Britons in new films. Claude Rains is on the set of 'Anthony Adverse'; Pat O'Brien starts work in 'I Married a Doctor,' and Eric Blore is working in 'Sons of Guns.'

Elsa Buchanan seen week-ending at Laguna Beach with her mother and sister, wearing slacks of sailor blue silk with stitched brim hat and scarf from the HMS 'Furious.' She just finished work in 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.'

Halliwell Hobbes, who is quite a racing fan, seen often at Santa Anita, always glued to the same spot.

New Reich Regulations Announced For Importing or Exporting Money

Berlin,

Further regulations concerning foreign exchange were issued last week governing German traffic to and from foreign countries.

All foreigners coming into Germany are entitled to obtain a Grenzbescheinigung (border certificate) from customs officials on the border stating the amount of foreign currency taken into the country, but it must not contain any registered marks or mark notes. Mark notes only to a maximum of 30 per head can be brought in, and under no circumstances may they be exported. A note is now necessary in the passport to the effect that a border certificate has been issued.

Decree further states that any monies sent to foreigners during their stay in this country may be taken out without permission of the Devisenstelle provided the German bank which paid the monies out certifies the payment, also to be noted in the passport. No registered marks or mark notes can be taken out ever.

Further provision, also entirely new, covers cases where foreigners not conversant with the German regulations have overlooked the Grenzbescheinigung. In such cases it will now be sufficient if the foreigner proves by means of a bank invoice that he has changed foreign money inside Germany into Reichsmarks. Any amount changed can again be converted into foreign currency and taken over the border. Any Reichsmark amounts still in the possession of a foreigner when he arrives at the border station must otherwise be deposited with the customs house and will be treated as blocked marks, i.e., they can be disposed of only via special permission.

Cochran Pic Prod.?

London, Jan. 17.

Charles B. Cochran, who has flirted with films off and on for years without ever getting near to production, is now clinching a deal to film his new revue, which was to open in London this week, but has been postponed.

Cochran probably will do the production himself.

HARLEY PROMOTED

Paris, Jan. 28.

Walter Hutchinson, new head of the 20th-Fox foreign department, has appointed F. L. Harley, company's local rep, as managing director of Great Britain. Hutchinson held the G. B. post himself until appointed to replace Clayton Sheehan.

Ernest Koenig, local sales chief under Harley, is temporarily taking over here.

More Mex Taxes

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

Still another new drain has been laid upon theatres, cinemas and all other paid public amusement enterprises here. President Cardenas has decreed that these enterprises must from now on pay a federal as well as the municipal tax on their gross. This means a 100% impost boost.

Operators have protested to the civic consultive board.

CENSORS BAN 1ST MAGYAR DUB PIC

Budapest, Jan. 17.

Government decree that 15% of all picturcs shown in this country should be Hungarian-speaking, either local originals or synchronized, was intended as a boon to the local industry but has proved to be just the opposite.

First Hungarian-dubbed English language picture, heralded by great clashing of cymbals, 'Men of Tomorrow,' a London Film production, did not even reach the public. Hungarian dialog was so hopelessly bad that the censors refused to let it pass, on the grounds that it was not fit for public exhibition.

Tibor Hegedus, playwright, who did the translation, says that the Hungarian language is so utterly different from the English that it is impossible to fit Hungarian words to the text spoken on the screen by English actors.

An official communique, however, maintains that the bad result of this first pic is due to the translator's limitations and to the fact that the synchronization was not done with the officially tested Pulvary apparatus.

Sound City Buildup

London, Jan.

Work on the building of the new Sound City studios, near London, started Jan. 16.

Unit, which has been in existence for about four years and was previously a two-stage lot used by indie producers, was at one time considered by Hal Roach, when flirting with the idea of switching production work to England. Later it was taken over on lease by Universal, which still makes its British quota footage there.

Idea now is to get more ambitious.

26.9% NATIVE PRODUCT IN '35

Twice as Much Film Produced as Called For by Quota — Practically No French or German Pix

U. S. IMPORTS TOP

London, Jan. 19.

Detailed statistical analysis of the British film situation to Dec. 31 last year is now possible, following the dribbling into circulation of Board of Trade returns, etc.

All films shown in Britain must now be registered, and labeled according to their country of origin. British studios supplied 1,443,023 feet of film in 1935, against 4,090,538 feet of foreign, nearly twice as much as the official quota requirements demand.

While British footage supplied an easy all-time record for the home industry, foreign figures were below those of 1928, when 4,929,082 foreign feet were registered against 788,954 British. Foreign figure for 1935, too, is lower than all years since 1928, with the exception of 1932, 1933, and 1934.

Americans First

Greatest source of footage, naturally, is American. Hollywood supplies rather more than nine-tenths of it. The German influx, once important here, is substantially dead, and others don't count at all.

Most surprising feature of the figures is the sudden zoom in the production of shorts here last year, it generally being reckoned by the producers that shorts were a sheer waste of production time.

Deduction to be made from the foreign footage table is that distributors, especially American, are gradually adjusting themselves to the situation which arose in 1932, when British films first won a place on the local map, and lots of Hollywood indie product, which would normally command some sort of release here, was dropped out as being useless.

Percentages

Percentage of British footage to the whole registered footage in 1935 was 26.9, whereas in 1930 it was only 18.9 and in 1928 still less.

Statement that Hollywood accounts for more than nine-tenths of the foreign footage registered here can be substantiated by an analysis of the films trade shown—not merely registered—in 1935. Total was 706—a few of which, naturally, would have been registered the year previously.

Of that figure Hollywood was responsible for 478, Britain 189, France 10, Germany seven, Australia five and Austria five.

German slump to only seven is result of the present political situation there. Germany was a safe bet for 40-50 pictures per year in this market until the Nazi problem arose.

French Slump

French slump to 10 is due to the fact that the home market here is now so swamped with British and American features that it has no room for foreign language pictures with subtitles.

Further analysis of the 189 British films tradeshown reveals some interesting tendencies.

Highest classification is comedy, which accounts for 32 of the 189, followed by melodrama at 30, farce at 18 and drama at 16, and mystery melodrama of the light thriller type weighing in with 14.

Sex pictures, as such, are practically non-existent in the list of 1935 British screenings, but costume accounts for 14—compared with 23 period plays from Hollywood.

CHAMP FRENCH ANTI-FOREIGN MEASURE

Paris, Jan.

Theatre strike threat against Paris and other municipal poor taxes has brought out the champion anti-foreign measure in local municipal council.

Georges Ory, councillor, proposes to settle the problem by granting tax relief to all shows except those which contain any foreign element whatsoever, or are written in whole or in part by foreign authors.

Press is pointing out to Ory that if foreign films stopped coming in, at least 50 French film theatres would have to close for lack of product; that his project would hit the Opera for playing Wagner or Verdi; that no French dancer could use American or Viennese dance music; that symphony orchs would have to drop Beethoven and that English boxers would have to stop fighting Frenchmen in Paris.

TWO NEW FILM COS. IN ENGLAND

London, Jan. 19.

Two new units came into being here this week.

Korda group formed a subsidiary company, Denham Laboratories, to cover its lab work on the new London Film Studios. Capitalization is at $350,000 and the unit intends to take work from outsiders. Alex Korda and Sir Connop Guthrie are the chief directors.

Understanding is the real movement behind the registration is to afford an outlet for Technicolor in indie companies. Korda group has the local license for the color plant, and is believed to be arranging to farm it out to other producers who may want it.

Other unit is Worton Hall studios, Ltd., directed by Cunningham Reid, a parliamentarian financier who has dabbled with film financing for some time; Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Paul Czinner, Elizabeth Bergner's husband.

Latter proposition is privately financed, its registered capital being nominal.

Most serious theatre strike threat since 1932, when the first post-w tax relief step was won by a nationwide shutdown, is now stirring French show business.

Refusal of the Paris municipal council to reduce poor tax, as it had been authorized to do by the national government, was the signal for the new strike movement. Lots of other city governments throughout the country have also refused, so all France threatens to join in closing down.

Cinema theatres in Nice, claiming that high local taxes (which had been temporarily lifted during the summer) were driving them to bankruptcy, jumped the gun a week ago and closed down. Strike, coming in the midst of the Riviera season, bothered the city fathers no end, and after hurried negotiations an armistice was signed whereby the tax will be suspended until Feb. 20, when an arbitration committee will consider a definite settlement.

Feb. 20 was also set, at first, for unloosening of the general nationwide strike, because on that day the Paris municipal council is to meet again to consider the poor tax, and strike leaders thought they ought to impress the city fathers on the first day. But now Max Maurey, head of the theatre owners', says this date is no longer valid, and won't say exactly when the strike is to start. Trouble will probably break loose toward the end of February, unless the lawmakers come through in the meantime.

Unanimous

Entire show biz is showing greater signs of unanimity than in previous 'strike' moves during the past few years. Leaders are the legit managers in Paris, who are having a bad season. Film exhibs, however, seem quite ready to follow along. Pointed out that the two big chains, Pathe and Gaumont-Franco Film-Aubert, are in the hands of government-appointed liquidators and therefore won't be able to join a strike movement, but the solution to this is seen in the refusal of distributors to supply them with pictures during the strike period. Whether this can be put into effect is another matter.

Tax reduction which is asked is not particularly big. Ten per cent of the gross now goes to the Paris Department of Charities, which supports hospitals. Decree-laws of July authorized the city to cut this, if the revenue was supplied from another source. If the percentage had been dropped from 10% to 8%, theatre owners would have kept quiet, but the aldermen wouldn't even do that.

Show people suggest that a part of the radio tax be turned over to the charity department, on the theory that the new competing amusement, whose competition is taking customers away from theatres, should share a part of the public burden.

All forms of amusement, including dance halls, carneys and professional sports, are expected to join the strike move.

Sir Ben's Retirement From Show Biz Denied

Sydney, Jan. 8.

Now that Sir Ben Fuller has gotten out of the Australian show biz (for the time being) rumors are afloat that the showman will also quit the New Zealand field. Strong denial has been given this rumor, although known that dickers have been on for a buy.

It was in N. Z. that the Fuller firm first came into being, with a waxworks show, finally developing into the biggest vaude unit in the country and then swinging into the pic field.

COLLEGIATE

(MUSICAL)

Paramount release of Louis D. Lighton production. Features Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks, Frances Langford. Directed by Ralph Murphy. From Alice Duer Miller's 'The Charm School'; adaptation, Walter DeLeon, Francis Martin. Songs, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel; camera, William Mellor. At Paramount, N. Y., beginning Jan. 22, '36. Running time, 80 mins.

Joe	Joe Penner
Jerry Craig	Jack Oakie
'Scoop' Oakland	Ned Sparks
Miss Hay	Frances Langford
Dorothy	Betty Grable
Sour Puss	Lynne Overman
Dance Instructress	Betty Jane Cooper
Mack Gordon	Mack Gordon
Harry Revel	Harry Revel
Mr. MacGregor	Henry Kolker
Thos. J. Bloodgood	Donald Gallaher
Headwaiter	Albert Conti
Detective Browning	Julius Tannen

'Collegiate' is fair entertainment. Light, diverting, but no bore. It'll probably be an in-and-outer, big where they're strong for Joe Penner and Jack Oakie, and indifferent in other spots.

'Collegiate' is the musical version Alice Duer Miller's 'The Charm School' and under the Gordon and Revel musical setting, embellished by some moderate song-and-dance staging, it's an engaging enough filmusical.

The shortcomings will come from the captious customers who may look askance at Oakie's Paul Whitemanesque avoirdupois and refuse to reconcile that with his juvenile assignment. The inclination to girth, manifested by Oakie in 'King of Burlesque,' was more consistent in that picture, with his al fresco, secondary role, but here he's the main male romance interest. On the subject of 'Burlesque,' the same effective clowning and ad lib travesty on the Jolson school of song delivery is slipped in here.

Frances Langford as the femme lead is wistful, sings well, but also leaves something lacking. Penner's role is amnesiastic—i' e.' he's a victim of who-am- until for the tag, Julius Tannen (as a dick, no less) helps the duck-comedian back to self-recognition, and he discovers he's Joe Penner.

Oakie, having been willed a girls' seminary, at first dodges the heritage, but later, with the aid of a never-ending bankroll supplied by the light-headed Penner and abetted by Ned Sparks and Lynne Overman—two excellent foils—puts it over. Overman did the musical version of 'Charm School' as a shyo.

Among the faculty are Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, who play themselves, as heads of the music dept., introducing 'You Hit the Spot,' a peach of a foxtrot ballad. 'Feather in the Breeze' is the No. 2 runner-upper in song routines.

Betty Jane Cooper, now just Jane Cooper, of 'White's 'Scandals,' likewise is herself as head of the tap dancing course. She gives out two corking tap specialties, scoring personally, notably in 'Rhythmatic' (with Oakie). The rest are bits, save Betty Grable, attractive vis-a-vis to Penner. Penner's vocal opportunity is 'Who Am I?', and he milks it.

Production high grade in every department. Abel.

WHIPSAW

Metro release of Harry Rapf production. Stars Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy. Directed by Sam Wood. Liberty Mag story by James Edward Grant; adapted by Howard Emmett Rogers; cameraman, James Wong Howe. At Capitol, N. Y., week Jan 24, '36. Running time, 80 mins.

Vivian Palmer	Myrna Loy
Ross McBride	Spencer Tracy
Ed Dexter	Harvey Stephens
'Doc' Evans	William Ingersoll
Harry Ames	Clay Clement
Steve Arnold	Robert Gleckler
Wainsworth	Robert Warwick
Monetta	Georgia Caine
Chief Hughes	Paul Stanton
Humphries	Wade Boteler
Curley	Don Rowan
Dabson	John Qualen
Mme. Marie	Ireno Franklin
Aunt Jane	Lillian Leighton
Bailey	Anthony Hughes
Dr. Willis	William Ingersoll
Larry King	Charles Irwin

'Whipsaw' is good entertainment. It should account for better than average takings. And it should stregthen the popularity of its two leads, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy. Both have been nicely treated by the story and the production and both repay the compliment by turning in strong performances.

James Wong Howe's camera work is especially agreeable from a female star's viewpoint. Miss Loy runs a rather rangy gamut of emotional versatility while remaining pert and fetching throughout. Harry Rapf, the developer of Joan Crawford, is bringing her along with beaucoup canniness. She has matured as an actress and is using her eyes and voice with a flexibility and trickiness absent from the Myrna Loy of some seasons back.

With Director Sam Wood putting in the light and shade Spencer Tracy leads the male contingent in a picture that consists chiefly of one pretty miss surrouded by a maze of gents on both sides of the law, all of them pretty tough.

Essentially melodrama and rather hokey and stereotyped in its basic plot elements, the success of 'Whipsaw' is entirely a studio victory for smart treatment. Romance and sex angles mingling with the light touch of sophistication that is so popular nowadays carries events along at a speedy pace that is unabated until the fadeout.

Metro's fondness for brevity in titles is again demonstrated. 'Whipsaw' is an obscure Americanism now seldom heard. Most people probably will be uncertain as to its meaning. Which may or may not matter. Funk & Wagnalls defines it: 'to get the best of an opponent despite his every effort.' It fits the plot well enough as the story unfoldment is essentially a battle of wits.

Although some of the hoodlums are pretty much on the brutality side the illegal business concerns stolen pearls. That's a comparatively elegant and specialized form of larceny for modern cinematics.

Robert Warwick as the owner of the pearls cops some attention for able handling of his small role. Such Hollywood toughies as Bob Gleckler, Bill Harrigan and Harvey Stephens expertly impersonate muggs who will do anything but work. Land.

DAN MATTHEWS

Columbia release of Sol Lesser production. Stars Richard Arlen; features Charlotte Wynters, Douglass Dumbrille, Donald Cook. Directed by Phil Rosen. From novel by Harold Bell Wright; adaptation, Dan Jarrett, Don Swift, Karl Brown; camera, Allen G. Siegler. At Roxy, N. Y., week Jan. 24, '36. Running time, 69 mins.

Dan Matthews	Richard Arlen
Jane Strong	Charlotte Wynters
Hardy	Douglass Dumbrille
Kitty	Mary Kornman
Blair	Donald Cook
J. B.	Frederick Burton
Hypo	Lee Moran
Herman	Tommy Dugan
Partington	Edward McWade
Tommy	Carlyele Blackwell, Jr.

'The Calling of Dan Matthews' needs more than Harold Bell Wright and the many fans his novels brought him through the years to make it a go. It will require the most insistent selling campaign to pay its board. Points to secondary playdates.

'Dan Matthews' a slow article and creaky film material. Central character is Matthews, a militant minister, who sets out to clean up the gambling and vice in 'old town.'

Arlen plays the man of the cloth and Charlotte Wynters is opposite him for romantic interest that's a bit silly. She's worthy of much better opportunities than provided for her here. Dumbrille is satisfactory per usual as the leading menace and Donald Cook okay as a mugg who's also after the girl. Tommy Dugan has a minor assignment, well done, as a henchman of the racketeering mob. Char.

Widow from Monte Carlo

Warner Brothers production and release. Features Warren William, Dolores Del Rio, Louise Fazenda, Colin Clive, Herbert Mundin, Olin Howland. Directed by Arthur G. Collins. Based on play by Ian Hunter and A. R. Rawlinson. Screen play, F. Hugh Herbert; dialog, Chas. Belden; camera, Warren Lynch; editor, Thomas Pratt. At Astor, N. Y., week Jan. 22, '36. Running time, 60 mins.

Chepatow	Warren William
Ines	Dolores Del Rio
Mrs. Torrent	Louise Fazenda
Eric	Colin Clive
Mr. Torrent	Herbert Mundin
Eaves	Olin Howland
Dopey	Warren Hymer
Lady Maynard	Ely Melyon
Lord Steyne	E. E. Clive
Lady Holloway	Mary Forbes
Joan	Viva Tattersall
Butler	Herbert Evans

Grim determination to be farcical at all costs spoils what more sensitively handled might have been made into a bright little society comedy. It is behind the eight ball where big time dates are concerned. In lesser houses it probably will be better liked. It has a long stretch of a British equivalent of our own Coney Island, a man running around in his shorts, an old time Keystone race around a house, and it is not much hampered by what might be termed the story.

Plot is simple; too simple to carry much weight. A social climber seeks to blackmail a duchess into friendliness with a letter written by the latter and stolen by the climber from its recipient. It is stolen back by an American crook befriended by the man to whom the letter has been sent, but the incident serves to break the girl's engagement to the wrong man and pave the way for the right one.

Visit of Warren William and Miss Del Rio to Margate is made to serve for much needed filler, but overdone unless they care to see Miss Del Rio and Louise Fazenda sprawling around in a slowly turning barrel and in other comedy stunts. Dragged out too long, but footage is needed.

William plays in the right note as the ardent suitor, and seems to be enjoying himself, but Miss Del Rio is less happy in what should have been a slightly reckless assignment. She takes herself and her character too seriously for best results. Miss Fazenda is at home as the climber and wears some gorgeous dresses made too elaborate to stress her character. Colin Clive and Herbert Mundin are almost lost in small parts and Warren Hymer, as the imported convict, is required to play his action on the louder and funnier theory, which keeps him from doing what could be done. Viva Tattersall, a newcomer in a microscopic part, brings charm to her scenes. Chic.

Miniature Reviews

'Collegiate' (Par). Pleasing, lightweight filmusical with Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks and Frances Langford featured.

'Whipsaw' (Metro). Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy in a zippy romance unfolded in a background of jewel thieves. Should do okay biz.

'Calling of Dan Matthews' (Col). Weak results obtained from Harold Bell Wright's novel starring Richard Arlen.

'Widow from Monte Carlo' (WB). Good cast wasted on over-stressed farce, but okay for the lower brackets. Dolores Del Rio and Warren William.

'Dangerous Waters' (U). Weakie of the men-go-down-in-ships school, with Jack Holt. For the duals.

'Between Men' (Sup.). Actionful indie western starring John Mack Brown, but otherwise not much. A dual biller.

'I Conquer the Sea' (Acad). Life among the whaling folks with small chance of getting out of dual-bill fold.

'Swifty' (Diversion). Hoot Gibson western among the better films of its type.

'Freshman Love' (WB). Tepid conglomeration of high and low jinks around the campus; filler-in material sans marquee values.

'The Eagle's Brood' (Par). Second Hopalong Cassidy western, with William Boyd. Fair enough.

DANGEROUS WATERS

Universal release of Fred S. Meyer production. Stars Jack Holt; features Robert Armstrong, Grace Bradley. Directed by Lambert Hilliyer. Story by Theodore Reeves; adaptation, Richard Schayer, Hazel Jamieson, Malcolm Stuart Boylan; camera, Harry Forbes. At Rialto, N. Y., week Jan. 23, '36. Running time, 62 mins.

Jim Marlowe	Jack Holt
Dusty Johnson	Robert Armstrong
Joan	Grace Bradley
Ruth Denning	Diana Gibson
McDuffy	Charley Murray
Bill McKeechie	Willard Robertson
Chips	Dewey Robinson
Noun	Ed Sarzen
Captain Denning	Guy Usher
Hayes	Richard Alexander

'Dangerous Waters' tries hard to work up some excitement but the triteness of the story and the dullness of the dialog prove too much of a deadweight. It's tailored into the Jack Holt pattern, a two-fisted ruler of men but a pushover for a two-timing dame. The most that this sputtering firecracker can figure on is a dual setup.

Holt plays a sea captain in this one, the kind of guy who brings his tub to port no matter what mishaps behind. Wear.

Accompanying him on the trip is his coquettish wife, Grace Bradley, and a lad he had helped raise from the crew to a third omicership, Robert Armstrong. After the racketeers' henchmen on board put in their dirty work and the water starts pouring into the hold, the wife forces wifes on Armstrong, and when Holt catches them in a clinch she turns on Armstrong and charges him with strong-arming her. Holt floors Armstrong but eventually the climax finds them again in a Damon-and-Pythias, and together they overcome the resistance of the crew and save the ship. Out of the more or less comes the realization to Holt that his wife isn't the pal he thought she was. When the ship gets to port he's rewarded with a check for $10,000 from Lloyd's and a new command.

Holt's jutting chin and swinging fists are up to par, Miss Bradley overstrains herself in the siren assignment, Armstrong acts like a real storybook buddy. Charles Murray contributes in solid fashion the much needed comedy relief as the chief engineer who has a mania for repairing things, while Diana Gibson looks nice and gives the required lipservice to the part of the girl who silently adores Holt. Fadeout shows Miss Bradley gracefully bowing out of the captain's life and her husband discovering the other girl's love. Odec.

BETWEEN MEN

Supremo Pictures release of A. W. Hackel production. Stars Johny Mack Brown, features Beth Marlon, William Farnum. Directed and written by Robert N. Bradbury; adaptation, Charles Francis Royal; camera, Bert Longnecker. At Globe, N. Y., week Jan. 25, '36. Running time, 60 mins.

Johnny Wellington	Johnny Mack Brown
Gale Winters	Beth Marlon
Wellington Rand	William Farnum
Trent	Earl Dwire
Sir George Thorn	Lloyd Ingraham
Gentry Winters	Frank Ball

Inexpensively made western which crams a lot of action into its comparatively short running time. Far from high class drama of the sagebrush country but six-shooters and horses hoofs beat an almost continual tattoo for the edification of the fans who like that sort of thing. For the dual billers strictly.

Scenario is from an original by the director, Robert N. Bradbury, writen mostly to provide for a lot of badman tactics, wild riding, shooting and fighting. Anything goes with nothing but villyuns around most of the time and plenty of killings. With what the script called for, the casting has been for the toughest types.

Picture opens in Virginia and moves to the wild west of pioneer days to which a blacksmith has flown after killing two men in a brawl. Murders resulted when one of the victims shot down the smithy's son, the father believing the boy killed. He survives instead and grows up under the care of a titled gentleman who some years before had put his daughter out of his life because of a marriage he refused to approve. John Mack Brown, a good type for westerns of this kind, plays the boy who goes out to New Mexico to search for his benefactor's granddaughter

The fistic stuff is worth seeing, with the veteran William Farnum putting up a good contest. The girl is Beth Marlon. As usual, she shouldn't be out in the wild country demanded by the script or in the company of the men around her. Char.

I CONQUER THE SEA

Academy Pictures release of Halperin production. Features Steffi Duna, Stanley Morner, Douglas Walton. Directed by Victor Halperin. Story by Richard Carroll; camera, Arthur Martinelli; musical director, Arthur Kay. At Mayfair, N. Y., three days, Jan. 24-26, '36, as half of double bill. Running time, 68 mins.

Rosita	Steffi Duna
Tommy	Stanley Morner
Leonard	Douglas Walton
Caleb	George Cleveland
Pedro	Johnny Pirrone
Sebastian	Fred Warren
Mrs. Gonzales	Madame Dellinsky
Gabe	Olin Francis
Stubby	Fred Peters
Tiny	Jim Hertz
Josh	Albert Russell
Zack	Charles McMurphy

As a whaling story, with all the thrills attached to harpooning expedition, this may attract, but as screen entertainment it has extremely limited appeal. For the secondary dual-bill spots, though the title and running time are against it. Further box office weakness is the absence of names, only Steffi Duna and Stanley Morner being recognizable to average American audiences.

Effort to combine some truly vivid shots of giant whale being speared with a sketchy story is not aided particularly here either by the writing, acting or direction. Result is somewhat curious miscellany of tragic life among the Portuguese, who seemingly predominate po, ulace engaged in whaling along Newfoundland shores. Lack of humor is another detriment.

It's the time-worn theme of the two brothers loving the same girl, with suitor of first choice a victim of whaling trip in which he loses an arm. Then the plot climbs to ultimate sacrifice of cripple when he learns of his brother's success in winning the girl. In more capable hands it might have meant something.

Exciting moments on whaling juntas are marred by an admixture of real and studio shots. Film reaches its peak in grim scenes of sea, after small boat has been wrecked by two whales.

Steffi Duna, the Portuguese heroine, is competent enough, indicating promise if given a better break. Stanley Morner enough, indicating promise if given a better break. SWIFTY Diversion release of a Walter Fuller production. Stars Hoot Gibson. From story, 'Tracks,' by Stephen Payne. Directed by Alan James. Adaptation, Walton Farrar, Roger Allman; screen play, Bennett Cohn; camera, Art Reed. At Arena, N. Y., on double feature bill, Jan. 26-28, '36. Running time, 62 mins.

Swifty	Hoot Gibson

Hoot Gibson in a rollicking horse frolic against plenty of scenic background, which sagebrush eaters should find good fun.

Gibson, a lone rider, is suspected of killing a respected rancher of the community. He escapes a lynching with the aid of the rustic sheriff. Gibson is the kind of a fugitive who makes his getaways on conspicuous white animals and when riding away from trouble throws guns his pistols. His heart interest is a blonde orphan of the plains. Simple, but beautiful.

When she screams for help to be rescued from the villains who try to steal her late pappy's will, she sings her plaintive plea with a yo-de-do serenity. But everything winds up okay. Gibson nails the girl's foster brother as the real culprit in the plot.

Shaggy ranchers and dusty villains are numerous throughout the film. The heroine's voice is thin. She looks new. Shan.

FRESHMAN LOVE

Warner Bros. release of Bryan Foy production. Features Frank McHugh, Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull, Joe Cawthorn. Directed by William McGann. Based on story idea by George Ade; screen play, Earl Felton, George Bricker; music, M. K. Jerome; lyrics, Jack Scholl, Joan Jasmyn; camera, Sid Hickox. At Palace, N. Y., on double bill, week Jan. 24, '36. Running time, 83 mins.

George Ade's college widow may have been responsible for bringing a winning crew to dear old Billings but she shouldn't take the rap for the low entertainment content that's been built here around her achievement. 'Freshman Love' does a weak song and dance around the campus nonsense, with the interest of the lagging sort, the story too easy to anticipate, the laugh moments thin and the casting just good enough to pass muster. It's filler-inner fair.

Task of keeping the thing going falls for the most part on Frank McHugh's shoulders. Assigned to aid him in the comedy department are Joe Cawthorn and Mary Treen, and the struggle is a tough one all around. Three tunes bob up in the proceedings; also a mixed tap routine, but since none of these get in the way it's okay.

Narrative revolves around McHugh's trials at building a winning crew of oarsmen for Billings and the complications that follow when the prexy's daughter, Patricia Ellis, uses her wiles to lure husky material. Realizing that next season's bunch must win the regatta or he's out as coach, McHugh pushes the rigging a notch further and, unbeknown to the girl, circulates the outstanding oarsmen of other colleges with come-on letters, to which Miss Ellis' name is signed. Attached to each letter is a photo of the miss.

Interpolated for laughs is George E. Stone, as the band leader who becomes coxswain and introduces a stroking influence with jazz rhythm. Teamed with a newcomer who suggests possibilities, the squirm, Miss Treen, Stone cuts a row of bell-ringing capers. Cawthorn's comicalities derive from his tendency at Dutch tongue-twisting, while the part has him cast as a gum manufacturer who is determined to buy his son into college. 'The Collegians,' 'Frenchmen in Love' and 'Romance After Dark' are the film's melody and lyric contributions. Odec.

Builders of Socialism

(RUSSIAN MADE)

Produced and photographed by Soyuzkinonews in U.S.S.R. Chronicle of International Worker Delegations visit to the Soviet Union in May, 1935. At Cameo, N. Y., starting Jan. 25, '36. Running time, 88 mins.

(In Russian, with English Comment)

This may please members of the International, followers of Stalin's ideas and so-called Communists. But nobody else. Reason is self-evident—it's an attempt to make a glorified newsreel or travelog. No story. No plot. Just a prolonged procession of views in Russia as it existed last year when International Worker delegations converged on Moscow.

Camera work is spotty, jerky and ineffectual. Had this been high-grade and picture half its present length, it might have been a fair travel picture.

Accompanying English dialog is highly colored Communistic-Russian propaganda. Which squelches any chance it might have of appealing to average American audience. Scenes in factories, in mines and throughout industrial agriculture field are familiar to those who've seen an American travel pix. Much of what is supposed to be illuminating is old stuff.

Scenes in Red Square, Moscow, at the May Day celebration are excellent, but previously covered by newsreels. Shots of workers digging subway for Moscowites and completed system fall to startle. Wear.

THE EAGLE'S BROOD

Paramount release of Harry Sherman production. Features William Boyd and Jimmy Ellison. Directed by Howard Bretherton. Adapted from Clarence E. Mulford's book 'Hopalong Cassidy and the Eagle's Brood.' Screen play, Doris Schroeder and Harrison Jacobs; duties and Sam H Stept and Sidney Mitchell; camera, Archie Stout. At Strand, Brooklyn, week Jan. 23, '36, as half double bill. Running time, 61 mins.

Hopalong Cassidy	William Boyd
Johnny Nelson	Jimmy Ellison
El Toro	William Farnum
Soko	George Hayes
Sir Henry	Addison Richards
Dolores	Joan Woodbury
Dolly	Dorothy Revier

This second in the series of George Mulford's 'Hopalong Cassidy' stories is a marked improvement over initial effort in many respects. 'Eagle' Brood' is less stilted and stagey and Director

STATE, N. Y.

(BURNS AND ALLEN UNIT)

New York, Jan. 24.

Dear Santa Claus (if any):

There are 336 days till Christmas, but if you are taking orders early this year, please wrap up 52 nice Burns and Allen units for delivery to New York.

Take the current State show and multiply it by 52, and then you will have something. Simply follow the State's recipe: Burns and Allen with Ben Blue, Cardini, Stone and Vernon, Gene Marvey and Jacques Renard in front of the house band on the stage.

Let Burns and Allen open with some comedy introductions and have Marvey follow with some tenoring that puts everybody in scoring position. Follow with Ben Blue's pantomime, plus Mary Blue to lend it some class, and then bring back Burns and Allen to dance and mugg with Blue for the kind of laughs that can't be found in a joke file. With Burns and Allen jointly stepping with the finest eccentric dancer of his day, you will have to go back a long way to find a more audience-proof piece of business. Georgie, who hasn't been on the hoof since Dr. Pantages took down the shingle in Salt Lake City, was puffing like a big, bad wolf on the fifth show Friday. But he blew the house down.

Change the pace with Cardini, who takes it slow and easy while the peasants try to unravel his mitt work. But they can't. He's too good. Then give 'em Stone and Vernon in swift adagio with two gents tossing outcurves with a lady. And Burns and Allen for the finish in a routine that's filet mignon compared to 'Lamb Chops.' Bring the picture screen down quickly, for that's the only thing that can follow.

Not too much production, Santa. As at the State, let them look at the actors instead of the scenery. And keep the stage well lighted in white, as all good comedy shows should be lighted, so they can see what's going on without guessing. Hold it all down to 50 minutes, as per the State, and you will have a show that's vaudeville through and through, and entertainment all the way. The box office will take care of the rest. Of course, the bookers will help. After all, somebody's got to write the names in the book. Packed, delivered and assembled, such a unit should cost $10,000. A lot of money. You say $10,000 bills won't bring that vaudeville comeback, which is later than a Long Island train in a snowstorm, because they're too much for a sufficient number of theatres to carry? Right. But the other theatres are another story and another problem. Give the theatres that can pay and play 'em 52 shows like the one prescribed, and that will solve the problem for one strata of vaudeville, anyhow. The State will have a $40,000 week with this $10,000 show, which is better than $15,000 for $5,000.

You're the last resort, the final hope, Santa. The boys have tried everything else. They've tried making it look like anything but vaudeville, and it hasn't helped. They've had their tea leaves read. They've taken up religion. They even gave the air to Martin Beck. All for naught. What they need is a Santa Claus. And after all, you do owe a debt of gratitude to vaudeville. Where was the first sleigh ride ever given and taken? In the U.B.O.

So hop to it, Santa, and prove yourself a right guy.

Incidentally, with $10,000 to spend, don't act like a Congressman—or a 1932 booker. For $10,000 your show will have to draw business. Plenty. Phoney headliners won't do. Remember, Santa, that you can't sing tenor from a trombone part.

Address the shows to Sid Piermont, Bill Howard, Charlie Freeman, Steve Trilling, Harry Kalcheim, et al. Don't bother delivering them, kid. These boys will be glad to go all the way up to your shop at the Pole and call for 'em in person.

Yours, Bige.

P.S.—'Ah, Wilderness' is the picture at the State. Do you happen to know any of the boys out in Hollywood, Santa?

A. B. C., PARIS

Paris, 18.

Raymond Baird's sax virtuosity gets past the sales resistance of a very Frenchy audience for a warm reception here. When caught, the A.B.C. customers were in no mood to tolerate foreigners, and they gave the bird to a couple of colored Americans earlier on the same bill because they sang in English, but Baird's rhythm won them over, and he rated an encore.

What seemed to get them was his fast technique, rather than his hot playing, although the latter was appreciated, too. His number on two saxes at the same time got a good hand.

Victims of the audience's sudden spurt of patriotism were Browning and Starr. Somebody started to yell 'Sing French' in the middle of one of their numbers, and that did it. Their last number was a mixture of French and English: 'Darling, Je Vous Aime Beaucoup' but that pleased no more than the straight English.

Baird did what every artist should do who has anything to say which the audience should catch: he spoke in French—with a terrible accent, but understanable. And he apologized for his French at the beginning of the number.

Headliner is Noel-Noel, who was here a month or so ago in song numbers. This time he plays a sketch by Paul Colline embodying his popular film character, Ademai, the conscript soldier. Goes all right, but no more than that. Better are Charpini and Brancato, former a man with a soprano voice, and latter a tenor, who sing opera, parodies, very funny and at the same time musically okay. Humor is a spot off-color, on account of the male soprano. Rebla, a juggler with a bored technique, also scores.

Alfred Escaver, tenor of the Vienna opera, gets good billing and a fair reception. Nona Reed, English girl hipshaker from the Tabaris show, goes on with Mae Elgin, toe tapper. Miss Reed's number is not strong enough to hold a vaude stage.

Other acts are Young Kee, Chinese acrosz, who close, and Jean Marsac, wise-cracking French monologist. Stern.

FOX, PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Fox's stage show this week is slightly under average in length, due to presence on bill of 'March of Time.' Quality mild. Pic, 'Paddy O'Day' (20th), with Jane Withers, will bring out the kids. Whether juves will go for stage part of bill is questionable.

Show opens with 12 Aristocrats appearing before curtain. Shandor, bill's headliner, follows. Staging for appearance of 'radio's midrite violinist,' is not bad. Set has a gate which swings open, framing Gypsy fiddler in pink spot. His presence has been forecast by striking shadow on back drop. Violinist's program has a quality of sameness with most classical and semi-classical tunes. No really familiar standbys included and audience is kept rather than enthusiastic. Why he chooses to play with muted strings and into the mike at the same time seems hard to figure. Background, included costume (Gypsy) and all the rest of the build-up bulk large with Shandor, who isn't any giant with the fiddle. He is accompanied by two pianists (not programmed), who have no individual solo material. Also with him are three girl singers (unprogrammed) who, standing on a platform in the rear, and looking rather well in evening gowns, vocalize in okay style. Their numbers are mainly background stuff for Shandor's own contribution.

Third offering is Three Were Brothers, who were with the current 'Scandals' when that revue played the Met here recently. They use same routine and click just as solidly as in the revue.

Four-a finale the Aristocrats appear again (10 at the show caught Friday) doing a ballroom adagio in which five couples perform some corking precision stuff. It's fast, intricate and easy on the eye.

SHEA'S, TORONTO

Toronto, Jan. 25.

Chiefly a laugh session at the Shea show-shop this week, with 70 minutes of fast-moving prez in which clowning and mayhem take up most of the time. Eddie Peabody is headlined, but a string of talent trails after him. Tagged 'Happy Days,' it's another Anger production with unbalances that stack's reals.

Peabody does his usual, swift manipulations on the banjo, a swing-em-low pop medley on his cumbersome harp-guitar, some double-stopping on his violin plus bird-imitations, and then 'whams with 'Tiger Rag' on banjo for a clincher. Brought back for a curtain speech and had to beg off.

Full stage opening has the line girls emerging from a gigantic bed for a hi-kick routine in yellow pajamas, and very nice. Al White, Jr., trails for a tap-eccentric and over on smooth hoofology. Then Grace Perry, brunet soprano in black, for a couple of warbles in 'one' and the versatile Ina Ray Hutton and her 14-piece band follow.

Starter has Don Cummings out for rope spinning and breezy chatter, some new gagging with the pit boys, and a tap and rope finish complete with back-flips which goes big. Then the Nonchalants, who missed the first two shows through trunk trouble in getting here from the Roxy, N. Y. Lots of kicking and manhandling on the part of this trio, but the knockabout spasm is climaxed by clever risley-work and a triple-stand that draws gasps at the topple finish. Chatter and easy personality aid.

Medley and Dupree add to the hysteria. Peabody next to closing, with line girls introducing by means of banjos, inverse of which spells out Peabody. Girls work hard throughout the bill. Besides the opening, they do another routine in rhinestone green scanties, with Joan Zanna in for a burlesqued sur-less-points specialty then a sleeve-drill production number that gets over on disciplined grace, and all on for a hot finale plus company round up.

Feature, 'In the Air' (Par). Stay.

Wintergarten, Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 17.

For two generations, the Wintergarten has been the best known and most popular vaude house in Germany and today, as in 1880, it sails merrily along with straight vaude of 12 acts, only one show a day, except for matinees on Wednesday and Sunday. Crowded houses are the rule, and an appreciative capacity audience on a Monday night in the middle of Berlin's tempting ball season seems to indicate healthy biz.

Acrobats always form the base of the Wintergarten's popularity, not headliners. The Flying Codonas, great favorites here, should be topping the bill this month, but owing to Alfredo's accident two seasons ago at the Ringling Show, Wintergarten informed the troupe that without Alfredo the act would have little appeal. So a substitute was found in the six Flying Artonis (four men, two girls) and strongly enforced by five other acrobatic turns. Artonis have not the thrilling flying trapeze sensation of the Codonas, they contend themselves with four aerial bars just beneath the Wintergarten stars, but manage to squeeze out lots of excitement by a daring double backward somersault and scores of double pirouettes from bar to bar. It's a pleasing act.

Other highlight of the current show is a Hungarian orchestra of 24 Gypsys who make a nice picture on the huge stage and specialize in Czardas and other native tunes with remarkable rhythm, considering the fact that most of boys are seemingly of school age.

Three Orantos, known in the United States from their long association with the Ringling Show, are experts on perch and foot ladder, especially their two-men-high on the pole, a great stunt.

Contra and Re, comedy acrobats somewhat on the lines of Collins and Hart, have a dandy opener, when the tall fellow walks in with a seeming dwarf, kicks his head and the partner is revealed in contortionist fashion, head down on feet.

Hilde Selpp and Otto Berco, local radio stars, fail to shine, except that Hilde is a shapely blonde with a fair voice and Otto a good mimic. Old Wintergarten tradition of putting on colored lights to heighten stage effects is very much in evidence during this act.

Three American Babes do peppy acrobatic tumbling with good comedy business plus the essential acrobatics and register strongly.

Tokawa, in Japanese make-up but hailing from this country, excells in acrobatics with the assistance of three cute spitzhounds, while Emmy and Louis in clown attire play several instruments nicely.

May and May, opening second part with more gymnastics are splendid head and hand equilibrists, one man an unusually good contortionist.

Three Veronas are good roller skaters, and Wilhelm Kunze entertains with comedy songs and patter, reminding the audience that comedians nowadays in Germany are much handicapped in their choice of material.

Kay, Kay and Kay, English knockabouts and eccentric acrobats, close, with their 'Dying Swan' parody going over strong.

CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 25.

Plenty of entertainment and a flood of box-office strength on this bill, which is in line with the recently adopted policy of this Balaban & Katz flagship to go to town on names and marquee strength. It has resulted in the doubling and tripling the grosses. With stage budgets of $4,000 and $5,000, the Chicago managed an average $23,000-$27,000 weekly. By forgetting about the budget and increasing the purchase of stage power to $10,000, the house has boosted its recent average gross to $40,000-$50,000.

Libby Holman and Ina Ray Hutton band share the spotlight. Miss Holman figures as box-office at present. She demonstrated she could draw when she went into the Chez Paree here and boosted that nitery back into the winning column. And here she is doing the best stage show trade of the town. The house was well-filled at the fourth of the five shows on Friday and indications are for a fine gross this week.

Miss Holman is standing up there as 'one' and on her smart delivery is giving this audience some 15 minutes of genuine entertainment. Using two current songs and then closing her act with a medley. Miss Holman has a pair of smooth as silk pipes, but she adds to the delivery by skillful use of her hands. It's a pleasure to see a singer on the stage who knows how to use her hands, after the radio singers who can only stand there with their hands glued to their sides or wrapped around a handkerchief.

For hotcha swing and girl stiff there is still Ina Ray Hutton. A constant repeater in this town, she still retains a load of box-office strength. Steadily developing, Miss Hutton has become a shrewd worker on the stage, handling herself, the orchestra and the other acts on the bill to the best advantage. Hard-working and willing orchestra, even playing for the Jack Pepper act and doing a bang-up job of it.

Pepper finds himself here with his two-stooges, one femme and one man. The girl, who is one Miss Taylor, is a knockout. Just a tiny person, she makes a cute appearance in kid clothes and then comes through with a great job.

On the other side of the fence is Pepper's other stooge. Designed to be funny, his costume is merely sloppy. Fortunately, Pepper is using him to open the act and is permitting the girl to save the situation for closing. Pepper, himself, can warble a pop song for anybody's money. He is depending too much on the stooge. He could do better on those comedy lines himself. With a bit stronger material, and a better taste and the femme partner, Pepper has the makings of a surefire comedy two-act. It would take a little work, but would be worth it.

Opening the show after the line of girls are two dancing acts, Dorothy Crocker with her control specialty, and the Romoffs and their comedy Russian adagio. Miss Crocker's four-minute one-leg control dance is a cinch, and this time is no exception. Grace and Nikki Romoff have a fine flair for burlesque adagio dancing and top the bulk of other acts doing this type of work. Make a fine appearance, especially the woman, and come through with genuine performance.

EARLE, PHILLY

Philadelphia,

Frank Parker is star of stage bill at Earle this week. Radio singer shows clear, flexible voice with distinct enunciation and shrewd choice of numbers. Songs include only popular ballads of kind that brought him his rep. Drawbacks are an uneasy stage manner and what appears to be a lack of forceful personality in face to face appearances. For a name his reception was little more than polite.

That may have been partly due to couple of unfortunate remarks he made from stage. One was reference to his radio 'popularity' as evidenced in telegrams from fans. Other was totally unnecessary plugs for radio sponsor. If part of Parker's air contract, it would have been better taste just to be introduced as 'through courtesy of, etc.'

Runner-up of show brings Emera Sisters, trio of girl tumblers deftly combining agility with humor. Plenty of their stuff is beamoup tough. It's all fast, smart and not too long.

Rest of bill includes Virginia Bacon and troupe offering ensemble rhythm taps, Miss Bacon doing solo toe routines, and a so-so crooner. Stone and Lee, an above-par comedy patter duo, and Bob Hall, extemporaneous rhymester. 'Film, Widow from Monte Carlo' (WB). Business big. Hobe.

PARAMOUNT, N. Y.

Par's new bit band policy, under Bob Weitmann's aegis, seems to be a clicker. A bit too vivid illustration of this occurred change day (Wednesday) at 12:30 a. m. when a waiting line of 2,000, fearing they'd be caught at the 50c tap after 1 p. m. (instead of the 25c gate mornings) rushed the ushers, reserves, et. al.; did a little physical damage to the outer premises and to themselves in the fervor of trying to get in. By 2 p. m. all had finally been admitted.

'Collegiate' (Par) is the feature and the live entertainment comprises the crack Hal Kemp orchestra doubling from the Hotel Pennsylvania, plus the Yacht Club Boys, who are now traveling on a cinematic rep attained in 'Thanks a Million.' Both ring the bell for a flock of cigars.

The Kemp music is smooth, rhythmic jazz at its best, melodic and not cacaphonous, yet tempo-tingling and dance-compelling. He has a nice range of numbers from smooth to hot with Saxy Dowell, Maxine Grey, Bob Allen and Skinny Ennis officiating vocally. Latter, always a clicker on the air, on the Kemp band's Brunswick disks and at the Pennsy, somehow overacted in the 'Alone' rendition. As a result, his vocal effectiveness is militated against by a straining for dramatic rendition. Among the instrumental highlights, Kemp's 'Bolero' (Ravel) in foxtrot tempo is an outstander.

Maxine Gray's three vocals register well, including 'Nasty Man' to set the Joe Penner mood. The Kemps, like the Yachtsmen, work in the rising pit.

Yacht Club Boys (Adler, Kelly, Kern and Mann), open with their ABC number, encore with the campaign song, also out of 'Thanks a Million,' and then a hokum Russe number, all getting over. Their lyrics are crisp, a bit intricate, but ever clear through seasoned rendition plus the good acoustical assistance of the Par mikes.

Complement of shorts and Don Baker at the console round out the Par's currently good show, which should garner okay trade, judging by the initial pace. Abel.

ROXY, N. Y.

Ed Sullivan, N. Y. Daily News columnist turned actor, heads the stage bill here this week, moving up the street a ways from Loew's State, which he played New Year's week. He didn't have much of a layoff between the two houses and whatever draught he has acquired may help here, together with the rest of the show, but outside of Sullivan there isn't much to entice. The picture is weak and the unit layout with the columner proves only fair. Feature is 'Calling of Dan Matthews' (Col), a slow stream of 35 millimeter tape.

Rostrum portion runs exactly an hour, or did Friday night, and in many spots is pretty slow. Sullivan himself does okay, doing a thesp role as m.c. that's smooth and agreeable. The columnist has an easy stage presence and a good voice. He even goes in for a bit of song at the close. It's a return date for him here.

Dave Vine is spotted in the audience for a crossfire with Sullivan which marks the highest degree to which the entertainment thermometer up here reaches this week. Sully makes a perfectly satisfactory straight for Vine's dialectic cracks. Some novelty is provided by the special trailer of personalities of another day, about whom Sullivan comments from the side of the stage. It's the 'Water Under the Bridge' routine, now standard with the columnist.

Freddy Mack and his pit crew are on stage for a change in a setting that's adequately stage-filling. Ahead of the band the Gae Foster girls do three routines and specialty people perform. These include Georgie Tapps in a flashy tap dance; Frazee Sisters, from the niteries, in songs agreeably done, and Ella Logan. Last mentioned scores well in torch and other numbers, going into cowgirl character for a portion of the song which leads into the finale. Her 'Round and Around' is also done in an effective manner. Foster line has done much better than currently but their routine with the big rubber balls isn't hard to take.

Business fairly good Friday evening on first show. Char.

MINNESOTA, MPLS.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.

With several acts brought in to supplement Ina Ray Hutton, this ace Publix house has first-class stage entertainment to offset any lack of strength on the part of its screen feature, 'Dangerous' (WB).

In contrast with the bitter cold that sent the thermometer outside tumbling to the 25 below-zero level, the hot rhythm of the Hutton band and even hotter hip swaying of the blond Miss Hutton in her tight fitting gowns set well with the customers inside. The band plays well enough, but Miss Hutton is the real treat and the optics are more regaled than the ears. Miss Hutton makes several changes of costume and each gown, as worn by her, is more blood-heating than its predecessor.

Miss Hutton swings a mean baton as she wiggles her 14-piece orchestra through a medley of pop numbers to start the entertainment. Then she introduces Jack Pepper, who strums his ukulele and sings a bit before engaging in some clowning with his funny stooge, Sammy Canter. Pepper also gags and tells an amusing story or two. He is followed by Dorothy Crocker, a remarkable control dancer who performs across the stage on one leg.

Helen Honan next, does imitations in passable fashion. After another orchestra number Lela Moore does her novel 'Dance of the Lovers' in 'one' with the pit band providing the musical accompaniment.

Going back to full stage, the show next offers the three Burke Sisters, who warble through a mike in front of the orchestra. Then follows Miss Hutton in pink pantaloons, stopping the show with her 'trucking.' Pepper works next with Terry Howard, a diminutive miss who impersonates a small child and lands solidly with comedy and singing. The orchestra winds up with a strong finish.

Usual shorts along with the feature. All for 60c top, but business badly off, undoubtedly due to the weather handicap. Rees.

EMBASSY, N. Y.

King George V and induction of Edward VIII comprise the first and most heavily detailed items on current bill. Fox opens with a biographical sketch from time of the late king's coronation until his reign concluded, by far the most complete. Hearst and Pathe in successive order stress the new ruler. The libraries were ransacked for most of the compilation of foregoing three reels and result is a pretty good pasting job. Universal and Paramount went light in this division. Par lends glimpses of flags at half mast throughout nation. Universal ditto at British Embassies and eulogizing by Cordell Hull, Senators King and McAdoo and former Ambassador Gerard. Graphic study in contemporary British history.

For 'Annie'

For the run of 'Annie Oakley' the Astor, N. Y., used a red and yellow tent structure atop the marquee. Looked all right through the day, but at night, with lights inside, the effect was much improved, and it stood out of the huddle of electric signs around the square at probably a tenth of the cost. Tent was virtually one-half of a four-sided pyramid, standing 10 or 12 feet and affixed to the theatre front. It was provided with blow holes to fend blow-overs, and carried no lettering, so it can be used repeatedly for circus titles. Lettering is provided on the marquee sides and a banner above. Gives the circusy effect without messing up the under-marquee portion.

Same effect could probably be gained with white canvas, and probably look more circusy, but this touch of realism is offset by the greater attraction power of the red and yellow. If paint is used for the striping, a transparent color should be used.

Another gag, this time for the lobby, could be one of the electric target rifles operated in a glass case, the hits being registered. Fairly safe to offer tickets for bull's-eyes, since the gun is of doubtful accuracy. Can be borrowed or rented from a slot machine parlor. Air rifles shooting darts can be used, but it will be less effective and take up more space.

A decidedly effective bally can be arranged in the shape of a girl sharpshooter, if the proper ammunition can be obtained. This is a shell with a brittle bullet which will shatter into 100 or more fragments when shot against a steel plate. If the girl can hit the plate, the pieces will fly back and hit any glass ball within reach.

Striking 'Em Pink

St. Louis.

With Producer Samuel Goldwyn dangling a C note for the theatre which produces the best campaign on 'Strike Me Pink,' Jimmy Harris and 'Chick' Evens of Loew's, aided and abetted by Maurie Davis, UA exploiteer, did everything but storm the City Hall on the latest Eddie Cantor opus.

National tieups stressed included 300 window streamers on Lux; 250 on Old Gold; 175 on Peter Hauptman cigars; 500 Pebeco window broadsides; 10,000 imprinted tabloid heralds; 5,000 package inserts through department stores and specialty shops on Gotham gold-stripe hosiery and 50,000 heralds distributed through a department store tying in with a new game. In addition, the Loew boys succeeded in grabbing a number of national and local co-operative ads which cost nix.

Biggest break was due to friendship of Arthur Baer, exec. of one of largest department stores in town, and Cantor. He not only permitted co-oping of about a dozen newspaper ads but gave several windows for display of actual wardrobe from the picture's femmes, all of which interested the women and sent them one block down the street to the theatre. The picture was featured in Jewish newspapers and a display at Y.M.H.A. A greyhound bus, plastered with 24's paraded streets from morn until night for a week before feature opened attracted considerable attention. Around the theatre, big cut out letters, studded with electric lights and big mechanical displays featuring Cantor's roly-boly eyes, helped decorate theatre front.

Got the Monkey Back

Lancaster, Pa.

'Fang and Claw,' Buck jungle snarler, got some very snappy exploitation at the hands of Ray O'Conner of the Capitol.

As part of his campaign O'Connell borrowed a stuffed monkey which he wished on a local V & X for use in a special window display. Store put in a solid window of ginger snaps with the monkey on top. Monk held a photo of Frank Buck in one hand and a ginger snap in the other. Copy read "For a snappy snack try ginger snaps—for snappy entertainment see Frank Buck's 'Fang and Claw.''

The window attracted so much attention that O'Connell was elated—until the picture finished its run. But the window was still selling ginger snaps and the store was reluctant to pull it. O'Connell had to plead with the manager and finally killed the already dead exploitation by arguing that the stuffed monkey was only borrowed and had to be returned to its rightful owner.

Plenty

Universal has made a tie-in to Standard Red Crown gasoline which is running 1,200 line ads in 1,400 midwest papers.

Hook is to the effect that Irene Dunne uses the gas. Standard takes less than 20% of the space for the oil. The rest is art and picture mention.

For 'Ceiling'

Big stunt for the front of the Strand, N. Y., on 'Ceiling Zero.' Display front shows a scene from the picture in which Cagney, O'Brien and an operator are receiving an S. O. S. over the short wave set. Backed by a p.a. loudspeaker with dialog from the scene apparently coming through the horn. In the lobby was an actual short wave set picking up aviation messages coming into nearby airports.

Junior Irdmen, a Hearst juvenile organization, were invited to a special morning show, which was broadcast, and the regular Birdmen broadcast over WINS made much of the picture in its daily airing. The Quiet Birdmen, aviation organization, attended the opening.

Hearst American had serialized the story a few weeks in advance, with emphasis on the Strand showing, and 29 model planes, borrowed from an air magazine, were spotted in as many Broadway store windows. Other stores displayed were in the Postal Telegraph windows, in Roth's restaurant, a baggage chain store sportwear in another chain and cards in bus terminals.

Two weeks in advance the pic was advertised on the barricade of the empty Hollywood theatre, and banners were hung on both sides of a dance hall on a Broadway corner.

Makes Presswork

Detroit.

Capped by party in downtown hotel for young socialites to meet Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable, Hollywood's most prominent engaged couple,' Michigan theatre treated its combo program this week to an exploitation. Pic, 'Rose of Rancho' (Par), got a good share of Publicity Director Hudson's attention, but 'Hollywood Secrets' unit proved a 'natural.'

Besides the party, Coogan-Grable were featured in several fashion tie-ups with downtown department stores; got lords of society art and stories in daily press in addition to the usual roto art and interviews; spoke over couple of radio stations and mugged in numerous window displays and stills.

Pic received window-display tie-up with Postal Telegraph; countless plugs over radio with songs; special daily press art and stories; window displays in better class music stores; use of songs by local radio sponsors with plugs for flicker; and art in 35 window stills, 11x14, scattered throughout the town.

But His Ears Froze

Indianapolis.

Venturing out into the coldest weather in 27 years, Orville Crouch got two frozen ears and some of the best exploitation breaks of the season on 'Strike Me Pink' at Loew's. Very few items on the work sheet were unchecked when the pic opened.

Those which got the favorable marks were: Advance announcement stories in all papers; special art break in Times; 2,000 'men or more' coins distributed; 3,000 tabloid heralds distributed with papers on downtown corners; 20,000 Pebeco heralds given away by distributors; 10,000 menus at McCrory's five and ten; 2,000 inserts in laundry bundles; 10,000 napkins imprinted for Murphey's five and ten on Cantor sundaes; a hosiery ad with Wassons; Fur Company ad in the Sunday Star; Lux ad in opening day's edition of the Times; girl art window in Block's; special front with pennant streamers from upright; 110 downtown ash cans; 150 bumper strips on Red Cabs, 20,000 paper bags imprinted for Kresge's five and ten; 100,000 parking checks and restaurant checks; 25 drug store windows; 200 slugs in News classified section; roto breaks in Star; 5,000 Parkyakakas cards istributed on street, and windows in drug stores on pipes; mask in optician's window, and window in music store.

'Popeye' Suits

Lynchburg.

Popeye costume giveaway has been worked out by the Isis here to promote a special children's cartoon show on Saturdays.

Outfit will consist of a sailor suit, the blouse of which is stamped with Popeye's mug, and a real corncob pipe. The anchor tattoo on Popeye's left arm doesn't go.

Tie up with department stores and the manufacturer was effected by Manager Dick Eason and Max Karmitz, Publix exploiteers.

Candid Shots

Bridgeport.

Morris Rosenthal, manager Majestic (Loew-Poli), capitalizing on current candid camera vogue in tie-up with Bridgeport Post.

Sneak shots of Bridgeporters shopping, walking, chatting, etc., run daily by paper. Subjects of pix bring tear sheets to Majestic b. o. and exchange for Oakleys. Theatre gets daily explanatory break as well as plug on current bill.

Got 'Em

One of the gags that had a traffic-stopping crowd lined up in front of a store window was based on an old aquarium which had a hole in the center of the bottom. Through this hole white mice would emerge and apparently run around in the water in which fish were swimming.

Hole was bored in the tank and then a small round fish globe was cemented in, being turned upside down, of course. Sand was sprinkled over the bottom and the usual marine growth and fish introduced. Mice would pop in and out of the hole from a cage fastened to the underside. Advertisement for the picture was lettered on the glass front in such a way as not to cover up the globe.

Simple to construct, but difficult to figure out to most persons. A special card announced 'Samoan Submarine Mice,' which helped to put a kick into the idea.

BEHIND the KEYS

Spartanburg, S. C.

Flames, which for a time threatened the entire business district, destroyed the Chadnourn theatre Jan. 22. House was opened a year ago in a new building. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Derrick, owners and operators, announce plans for rebuilding.

M. F. Schnibben, operator of the Carolina and Colonial theatres at Florence, has bought the former from John M. O'Dowd, owner. Purchase price, $55,000.

First federal theatre project for N. C. started at Asheville, where rehearsals for 'The Master Builder' (Ibsen) are under way. First show opens Feb. 10, per info from Prof. Frederick H. Koch, director of theatre projects in Va. and Carolinas. Wilbur K. Morgan, playwright and Little theatre head, directs.

Sixty-five miles per hour gale blew down a wall between hotel and Broadway theatre at Fayetteville, causing estimated $3,000 damage, but not all to theatre. House ok. and biz goes on.

State, Palmetto Amusement Corp. second first-run house here, sidestepped a fire when nearby tar ignited. Show was on, but audience didn't know until later, hence no panic.

Denver.

Gibraltar Enterprises, Inc., Denver, has added another theatre to its string, making 22 houses. Lyric, which was owned by the Lyric Powell Theatre Co., is latest acquisition.

New Boulder theatre, Boulder, opened by Fox Intermountain. The new house, which will seat 1,040, is on the site of the old Curran theatre.

Empress here, which has been closed for three years, was purchased by L. F. Eppich, Ed P. Eppich and A. G. Talbot, real estate men, who formed the Center Investment Co. for the deal. It is planned to reopen as a first run house with stage show.

St. John, N. B.

Harold Parker, manager of the Yarmouth, N. S., picture house and dance hall, and also a local orchestra musician and a star rifle shot, was suddenly stricken while at his desk in the theatre and rushed to the local hospital for an emergency operation. Several times previously during the past year Parker has been threatened with appendicitis, but medical treatment sufficed, temporarily. He is now convalescing from the operation.

Houston.

Weldon Parsons, formerly of Galveston, has been transferred to the Houston publicity staff of Interstate, to handle new suburban houses. First of five neighborhood theatres opened Christmas day, with others to follow shortly.

Denver.

Rick Ricketson, manager of the Fox Intermountain division, has made following managerial changes and promotions: Ben Benda, assistant at Fort Collins, Colo., to the Coronado, Las Vegas, N. M., as manager; Otto Brown, manager of Fox at McCook, Neb., resigned and succeeded by John Taylor from Strand, Rawlins, Neb.; Edward Voorhels to the Strand, from the Coronado, Las Vegas; Si Sanders, assistant manager at Strand, Rawlins, moved into Denver headquarters in charge of poster department; Harold Jones, temporary manager of the Babcock, Billings, Mont., moved to Nampa, Idaho, to manage the Majestic and Adelaide, newly acquired.

Fox Intermountain division now has 52 theatres with new leasings of the Majestic and Adelaide, from Herman Brown.

Longmont theatre, Longmont, Colo., re-leased by Fox for term of three years from J. J. Goldstein.

Down in Pensy

Lancaster, Pa.

Lancaster newspapers were busted wide open for the first time in a series of moons when Frank Leighton, manager of the Grand theatre, cut loose on a unique campaign on 'Magnificent Obsession.'

Not only did Leighton's stuff hit page one, he also broke through a hard boiled City Council for the use of the city's sacred lamp standards.

Playing up the angle in which the heroine steps into the path of an auto and is blinded as a result of the injuries suffered, Leighton put on a one man safety campaign which quickly drew in the city fathers to say nothing of civic clubs and the public print.

Papers, which are famous as being tough to crack, went all the way, giving 'Obsession' greatest play any picture has received here in at least five years.

Los Angeles.

Garden theatre, nabe, will be reopened by Claude Spaeth. He will operate spot with Fred Herschon of the Trojan.

With Simon Lazarus reopening Colonial theatre, Pasadena, Dave Cantor is abandoning plan to erect new house in same locality. Colonial being remodeled as second Lazarus house.

Charleston, W. Va.

Immediate sale of the Capitol, Wheeling, to satisfy claims of bondholders was halted by decision of Court of Appeals, which also held that tenancy of theatre by subsidiary of Warner Bros. should be terminated. Decision reverses two decrees of the Circuit court of Ohio county, and remanded the complicated and long-fought case for further hearing. The action was brought by Cleveland Trust Co. as trustee for large group of bondholders.

Lincoln.

Cavalcade of Cooper Enterprises officials moved on out of town this week. Cooper, himself, is understood to have gone south to Oklahoma City, with his division manager, Pat Magee, who rules the Oklahoma end. L. J. Finske, the Colorado and Nebraska division head, went back to Denver.

Jack Sweet, editor of the Nebraska City News Press suggested in an editorial last week that churches take on bank night in his town to boost attendance. Decided to take it all back when he heard one patron had sued to collect a pot from a theatre. Said editorially, 'You can't sue a church and promote dignity; sorry I brought it up!'

Albany.

Changes in Schine theatres' personnel includes: Harold Kayes, from manager of the Oneonta theatre to the Olympic, Watertown; Clinton E. Dadison, from the Olympic to the reopened Avon, Waterfown; Charles Howard, from assistant manager at Malone to the Avon, Watertown; Frank M. Brown, assistant manager of the Olympic, Watertown, to Oswego, as manager of the Capitol.

Hamilton, O.

Southio Theatres, Inc., Paramount subsidiary, has taken over the Sorg and Gordon, Middletown, O., from Gordon Theatres, Inc., which gives Southio domination of the town with present operation of the Paramount and Strand. The organization also has the Paramount, Palace and Rialto here, and operates the Palace, Marion, under name of Mohio Theatres, Inc. Tracy Barham is general manager and George Fetick booker of both organizations, with headquarters here.

Birmingham.

Bill Coury, manager of the Strand, transferred to the Ritz, succeeding Tom McConnell who has gone to the State at Chattanooga. Milton Newsome, manager of the Rialto, becomes boss at the Strand and Milton Samuels takes over the Rialto.

Wheeling, W. Va.

Kenn Hoel now manager Capitol, replacing Andrew Gibson, who goes to State, Kittanning, Pa.

Newark.

Robert Ungerfeld, manager of Proctor's, is made also manager of the Terminal. That house, belonging to Skouras, is also run by RKO. George Nichols has gone to the Fox Liberty in Elizabeth. Anthony Bell from the Tilyou, Coney Island, has become house manager.

San Francisco.

Fox-West Coast again juggling mgrs. Doug Graham from Fox California, Watsonville, to El Rey, Salinas, and Harry Hunsucker of

Played Local Angle

Lincoln.

F. F. Vincent came in here from the Coast and Universal to help the boys sell 'Magnificent Obsession' and he ideaed one of the best stunts lamped here in quite awhile. Since the pic stars Robert Taylor, and Taylor is a Nebraska boy, Vincent went to Taylor's Beatrice, Neb., home town and got the mayor to drive through the worst snow in years to get here for a special screening of the picture; a similar invitation and acceptance was made by the glee club from Doane college, where Taylor went to school; and the Governor (Roy Cochran) also attended.

After seeing the picture at a morning pre-view, the whole party went immediately to KFAB, highest powered local ether link, where the governor gave an applause testimonial on why the state should be proud of Taylor, the mayor of his home town did likewise, and the glee club filled in for a few of the 15 program minutes. It went on the air at noon, a good time to catch the larger share of listeners.

For the pic, 'Three Live Ghosts,' Bill Lindeman, house manager for the Colonial, did the obvious thing to sell it. By offering three kids passes to see the show, he was able to tog them out in some muslin sheeting and have them wander up and down the street for a couple of hours opening day. Worked out okay and without any signs, which are tabooed by city ordinance here.

Two at a Time

Winnipeg.

Larry Graburn, manager of the Orpheum, has the local boys all green with envy after a recent stunt of his that crashed the front pages twice in one week.

First crack came on Wednesday when Graburn had Anita Muth, singer with the Cushman unit playing house, pose with an ancient model lizzy being shown at the local auto show. This took up three columns and was sliced between the Hauptmann story, and the Arkansas plane crash.

Second bust came on Friday night, with five of the line girls, in costumes used in the show, helping to show off the cars being raffled off at the auto display. This took up a six column spread across the bottom of the page.

Stresses Trips

Montreal.

For 'Tale of Two Cities' coming to the Palace here in the next few weeks, George Rotsky, manager, has planned his campaign well in advance in conjunction with A. Labelle representing the French Line in this city to show a $15,000 model of the Normandie in the line's window.

This is in connection with the grand-prize of three-trips to Europe aboard the ship given by MGM in a continent-wide contest. While other cities in Canada showing or about to show 'Two Cities' have neglected this aspect of exploitation of the film. G. Rotsky has made it the keynote of his publicity and has started it well in advance of the showing of the film. Further, at night, the Normandie model will be electrically lighted.

Tie-In Helped

San Francisco.

By far the best exploitation on the main drag was Herman Kersken's tie-in with Hale Bros. dept. store. Gag netted solid block of big window flashes—star enlargements to life size of Baxter, Oakie and Alice Faye in 'King of Burlesque.'

Sold store on idea of holding 'All-Star Sales Event' for week picture played. Store also paid for double truck in Examiner grabbing lion's share of top space for Loew's Warfield and pic title. Stunt considered with upping business considerably on first week of house's first double bill inaugurating new policy.

French Temple Club

Paris.

Following success of contest to find Shirley Temple's double, local Fox is organizing Shirley Temple Club for French kids. This comes after organization some years ago of Laurel and Hardy club by Metro, with great success.

Memberships for Shirley outfit are rolling in by thousands, and kid star, thanks to local exploitation under Bob Harley, seems to be working up to position in France commensurate with her popularity in rest of the world.

Can Be Done

'Captain Blood' hardly lends itself to co-op pages, but Frank Shaffer, of the Warner Virginia theatre, Harrisonburg, worked a page on the idea that certain merchants also had a main sale, which is pretty far fetched—but it got the page.

Paper tossed in a half column to help along, and put it on the editorial page.

The king and queen of rhythm . . . whirling away to romance on a tidal wave of joy!

Advance Production Chart

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Production activity at the major plants in Hollywood continues to function at slightly above normal pace with 43 features before the cameras, 28 in the editing stages and 77 stories in process of treatment and preparation for early production. These figures include eight new features that started work last week, while six were completed and previewed.

Pioneer producing four technicolor features for RKO-Radio release, got under way with its third feature last week under title of 'Dancing Pirate.' At the RKO studio, Sam Briskin started his first production under his new regime as general production manager. It is the fourth of a group of Stewart Palmer mystery novels produced by this company. New story is from the book, 'Mystery of the Briar Pipe.'

Metro placed screen version of 'Petticoat Fever' into production, while at the Roach studio, 'Kelly the Second' went into work as an an all star feature.

Among new pictures to start last week was 'For the Service,' sixth Buck Jones western in series of eight for Universal. Republic placed 'Laughing Irish Eyes' and 'Red River Valley' into production. Columbia brought back the Harry Richman picture, 'Music Goes 'Round,' for added scenes when it was decided to work in sequences with composers of the tune. Picture was about to be previewed and shipped when a deal was made to have the songwriters come here and appear in the picture with the Onyx Club (N. Y.) band which introduced the number to the public.

Features previewed last week and reviewed by Daily Variety were: 'Colleen' (WB), previewed Jan. 21; 'Call of the Prairie,' fourth of Harry Sherman's 'Hopalong Cassidy' series of six westerns (Par), previewed Jan. 21; 'Dangerous Waters,' (U), Jan. 22; 'Every Saturday Night,' (20th-Fox), Jan. 24; 'Tough Guy,' formerly known as 'The Getaway,' starring Jackie Cooper for Metro, previewed Jan. ; and 'Milky Way,' Harold Lloyd picture for Paramount, previewed same night.

In checking over the accompanying table of production schedules, 20th-Fox and Warners are way out in front with their deliveries. 20th has only nine to go to complete its current program of 53 features while Warners has six to complete its program of 60. While both companies have several more months to wind up the 1935-6 program, it is obvious that by the end of March they will be into the 1936-37 lineup of product. Warners, as well as 20th-Fox, does not, at present, anticipate any recess in production, but will continue at normal by producing advance product for the new season.

Columbia, Metro and Republic lead the list for lagging in product for the current season. With a lineup of 82 stories in preparation, many in final stage, it looks like production activity will continue right through without the usual spring lull that has occurred in past years.

Adapted by Ray Harris and Francis Faragoh; Robert Edmond Jones designed sets and is color director for this all-Technicolor feature being produced by Pioneer for RKO release. John Speaks associate producer. Russell Lewis, who staged the 'La Cucaracha' dance short for Pioneer, staging dance numbers with Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart on music and lyrics. Cast: Charles Collins, Frank Morgan, Steffi Duna, Louis Alberni, Victor Varconi, Royal Cansinos, Alma Real.

Story—Concerns Boston dancing master shanghaied aboard a merchant ship, later confiscated by band of pirates who sail the ship to California where the boy escapes. Mistaken for a pirate he is sentenced to death until the mayor's daughter discovers he is dancing master, has sentence postponed until he can teach her to dance. Action takes place in quaint pueblo, known at that time as Las Paloma, situated somewhere between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara in 1820. Natural background of that period furnishes opportunities for color in outdoor settings. Production will use many large dance ensembles depicting unusual dances of that period. Third all Technicolor production to be delivered to RKO-Radio for release on Pioneer's 1935-36 schedule.

'PINK' STRIKES FOR 19G, NEW PROV. RECORD

Providence, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation: HKO Albee)

Eddie Cantor's 'Strike Me Pink' the big noise in town this week. Pace at Loew's State indicates record biz, bettering even the big gross piled up by 'Mutiny.' House figures on grabbing $19,000 for the week, helped considerably by nice campaign.

The p.a. boys were out in earnest this week trying to outdo each other. Pressure resulted in some of the biggest publicity splurges this conservative town has seen in several years. Loew's exploitation outsmarted by a nose for first honors, Albee's campaign on Joe Cook rating the blue-ribbon. Howard Burkhardt at Loew's spent plenty of coin via the newspapers, tieing-up a half a dozen stores, and also worked routine stuff to the hilt, but the Albee staff assisted by Paul Benson, Cook's rep, went to town with several unusual stants which worked themselves easily by virtue of Cook's appearance at a hockey game before 5,000 persons; greeting by Elks on arrival here resulting in newspaper publicity, and story in the powerful Catholic press, the first of its kind, on Cook, being a Catholic and member of Legion of Decency.

Parkyakarkus, radio comedian, appearing in Cantor film, in town on opening day. Loew's sought breaks in the press, but editors frowned when they learned comedian came to town for the express purpose of making a personal appearance at one of the local furniture stores. Because of this his arrival here, except in advertising, went unmentioned in the press.

Albee campaign too big to bring out in detail, but apparently having no telling effect on the box office because biz reported below average; at present pace not likely to go over $7,000.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,200; 15-25-40)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). Swell going, capacity business at matinees and evenings, auguring a grand gross $19,000, about shattering every record since the 40c. top. Last week 'Professional Soldier' (20th) and 'Three Live Ghosts' (MG) plenty bad at $5,000; blizzard walloping this one more than any other one in town.

Majestic (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and 'Dangerous' (WB). Despite stiff opposish this one looks as though it will garner at least $7,000; nice. Last week 'Magnificent Obsession' (U) given big setback by storm, but recovered enough to garner the best gross of the week, $8,500, great.

Fay's (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and vaudeville. Film brought over from Majestic in effort to milk those held back by weather; coupled with a dandy stage show gross should come close to $5,500, okay.

Strand (Indie) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Millions in Air' (Par) and 'Lone Wolf Returns' (Col). Pace not bad, and with half a break things should be okay around $6,500. Last week 'Rose of Ranch' (Par) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep) not bad at all, $6,900.

R.K.O. Albee (2,500; 15-25-40)—'Chatterbox' (RKO) and Joe Cook unit, 'Topsy Turvy Revue.' Mild notices, and even with big campaign house does not figure on getting more than $7,000, bad. Last week 'Only Human' (RKO) and vaude also off at $7,600.

RKO Victory (1,600; 15-25)—'La Maternelle.' French film not likely to excite any curiosity except among the highbrows, in for indefinite run, and 'Hot off the Press' very good Last week 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) $2,000.

Cantor $16,000, 'Zero' $7,500; Cincy Strictly An Iceberg Town

Incinnati, Jan. 28.

(Best Exploitation; Albee)

Stretch of sub-zero temperature, during which mercury dipped to 16½ deg. below for burg's all-time second down-under, a real b. o. chill for past week. With natives hugging family firesides, current take of first-run houses as a whole is akin to what the cast dragged home. Exceptional is Keith's $7,500 on 'Ceiling Zero.'

'Strike Me Pink' is the ace fetcher for $16,000 at the Albee. 'Riff Raff' is bringing in $10,000 at the Palace. Vaudfilm Shubert, with 'Two in the Dark' and Benny Meroff, is sagging at $9,000.

'Pink' walked away with the space credits this week via a wanted tie-up and 'Cantor quacks' contest with series of stills in news columns of Times-Star, offering $40 in cash prizes for three winning answers.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,300; 35-42)—'Pink' (UA). Cricks n. s. h. about Cantor's comedy vehicle. Load of juve trade. Not less than $16,000, okay in view of extreme cold. Last week 'King of Burlesque' (Fox), $15,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 35-42)—'Riff Raff' (MG). Should hit $10,000, fair. Last week 'Rancho' (Par), $8,000, sour.

Shubert (RKO) (2,150; 35-55)—'Two in Dark' (RKO) and Benny Meroff band. Under average at $9,000. Last week 'Three Live Ghosts' (MG) and Jackie Coogan and Betty Crable topping 'Hollywood Secrets' revue, $10,000.

Keith's (Libson) (1,500; 30-40)—'Ceiling Zero' (WB). Cagney-O'Brien the sales tag. Rave reviews and dandy audience reaction. Strong opening pace maintained through first half. Ascending to $7,500 for best figure at this stand in some months. Last week 'Dr. Harrigan' (WB), $3,200, creepy.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 35-42)—'King of Burlesque' (Fox). Transferred from Albee for second week; $5,000, nice. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) (2d week), $4,000, fair, after $11,500 initial showing at Palace.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 35-42)—'Obsession' (U). Returned to main line after week's absence; $4,500, all right. Pic got $19,000 in first week at Albee. Last week roadshowing of 'Dream' (WB) at 55-83-$1.10-$1.65 scale, $11,500, above expectations, considering weather.

Grand (RKO) (1,200; 25-40)—'Informer' (RKO). Brought back to downtown sector on strength of its place among best 10 films of '35, and after repeating at RKO Orpheum, second suburban run stand, to big biz. Chalking up hefty $3,000 and cinched for an encore swing of nabes. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG), third downtown week, $2,300. Drew $21,000 in first nine days at Albee and $6,000 in transfer week at Capitol.

Family (RKO) (1,000; 15-25)—'Bar-20' (Par) and 'Guard That Girl' (Col), split. Normal $2,100. Last week 'Nevada' (Par) and 'Too Tough' (Col), separate, $2,000.

London Exhib-Distrib Battle on Pic Cutting

London, Jan. 19.

Squawks by renters here against the mutilation of prints by exhibs, particularly in the provinces, may result in a clash between K. R. S., the Renters' protective society, and the C. E. A., which serves the same purpose for the exhibs.

Grouse is that the local lads like to make heavy cuts—to get the footage comfortably into what would otherwise be unwieldy two-feature programs.

One or two principal firms have lately cut their own copies before sending them out on general release, preferring to do the hacking themselves.

MAJORS REVIVE WESTERN DRAMAS

MG, Radio and 20th-Fox Favor Oaties to Displace Some B Flickers Due to Double Bills—Demand for Weekend Dates

INDIES' BREAK

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Figuring that considerable money may be saved on B product each year, Radio, Metro and 20th-Fox are planning to return to westerns, a type of picture they have disdained for the past few years. It is figured that western product will net more, in most cases, than the lower priced B dramas.

With double bills now the major thought of all producing and releasing organizations, westerns are again in favor due to their low cost and attractiveness to nabe theatres as Saturday and Sunday entertainment.

Both Radio and Metro are seesawing with George O'Brien, who has two pictures to make on his current Sol Lesser contract. His films are now released through 20th-Fox, but O'Brien is asking $25,000 per picture from Lesser on a new contract. Producer and actor so far have failed to get together.

Radio has been without westerns for two years since the studio dropped Tom Keene, its western star, in favor of making low-priced action pictures. Latter also were dropped. Metro has been out of the western field since it closed out the Col. Tim McCoy series four years ago. Twentieth-Fox, once the western leader of the majors with Tom Mix, Buck Jones and O'Brien has been off western production for two years. However, it has released the four O'Briens made by Lesser during the past year.

Par, U Conti

Only Paramount and Universal of the majors have consistently maintained a western schedule. Paramount releases yearly six Zane Greys and recently contracted to release six Hopalong Cassidy features being made by Harry Sherman. U always has a western name on the program and is currently releasing the Buck Jones westerns.

Half a dozen indie producers are making cheap westerns with former major names. Outstanding have been the John Wayne operas being produced by Republic and the Harry Carey westerns which William Berke is producing. Both series have been widely booked by circuits for weekend traffic and have to a certain extent cut into major product on week-end double bills.

ure is subnormal for business and must be improved to justify the straight picture policy here. Just over $10,000.

Hipp (Shea) (2,400; 25-40)—'Pro. Soldier' (20th). Looks well set here. Touted by local reviewers and liked by the fans for a prospective $7,000. Last week 'Splendor' (UA) did a terrific drop-off for a low of $5,200.

Great Lakes (Shea) (3,400; 25-40)—'Zero' (WB). Sailing along nicely at opening and unless clipped by the cold should get $8,000. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) off from anticipations when gross got down to around $7,000.

Century (Shea) (3,400; 25)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Ship Cafe' (Par). Still moving at good clip and looks set for $6,500. Last week 'Fleet' (WB) and 'Man of Iron' (WB), excellent, coming in with $7,700.

Lafayette (Ind) (3,400; 25)—'Hobo' (G-B). Bowling along at a nice pace and should get $8,000. Last week 'Obsession' (U) (3d week). Kept the turnstiles warm again and came in with splendid $9,300. Total of $38,000 for the three weeks.

Important Proposed Changes in N. Y. Theatre Bldg. Come Up Thurs. (30)

revised building code for New York, which will get its first general hearing before the committee on buildings of the Board of Aldermen tomorrow (Thursday), will, if passed, permit the construction of skyscrapers over theatres for the first time in the city's history. Under the present building laws, auditoriums and stages of theatres, while supposedly part of tall office buildings, actually had to be free overhead.

New code would mean a substantial saving in theatre construction in the future. In the past, 'skyscraper'-theatres had to build the auditoriums and stages on property behind the actual office-structures to enable the overhead clearing. Notable examples of such construction in N. Y. are Radio City's Music Hall and Center theatres, the Paramount, Roxy and Loew's State. New regulations will also obviate the necessity for a theatre-builder, owning a comparatively small plot of ground, going to market to purchase more land to hold the office-structure as well, or else confining himself strictly to a theatre.

Present building regulations were drafted in 1905. Agitation for a change has been carried on for eight years by the N. Y. Merchants Association, with realty and building interests believing that the new code will act as an impetus to new construction.

Other changes proposed will permit the storage of scenery below-stage in fire-proof vaults, prohibited now; permission for the lobby to be 10 steps instead of four above street level, so that the street floor can be utilized for stores, etc., and elimination of the eight-door open courts on either side of the auditorium for emergency exit purposes, with adequate enclosed fireproof exits, reached by open balconies such as now used for fire towers, substituted. This would also mean a saving in land space.

However, to continue previous safeguards against fire and panic, new code demands that the stage be free overhead, though the auditorium, may be covered by hotel or commercial structure.

Talk Vaudfilm Back at B'klyn Met, Now Duals

The double featuring in downtown Brooklyn, N. Y., with the Fox, Met, Strand and Albee recently pairing 'em up, is going to be busted up a bit under plans of Loew's Metropolitation to restore vaudeville shows and return to single features. Only house in the downtown Fulton street sector which hasn't been doubling is the Paramount, which has the pick of Par, Warner and 20th Century-Fox product.

No definite plans for reconversion of the Met to a combination policy, but it will probably occur within a month or so. The twin feature spree which hit Brooklyn resulted from a price war when the Albee dropped vaude, chopping admissions, with the Met following immediately after. The Fox held out longer with its stage shows, but finally dropped them last fall, making it necessary for houses in the downtown Brooklyn zone to shop extensively for enough pictures to go around.

Return of Met to vaude may force the Albee and Fox back to stage shows, also.

CLAIMS AGAINST PAR ON COAST CUT DOWN

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Claims against Paramount Properties have been settled and the outfit has received a clean bill by District Judge Paul J. McCormick.

Nearly every claim of significance was reduced materially. Bondholders' Protective committee asked $7,500 for services, but obtained $4,500. T. R. Cadwalder, secretary, asked $1,500, but got $1,000. O'Melveny, Tuller & Myers, attorneys for Paramount, requested $15,000, were cut to $10,500.

Stock Market

wound up week at 43, for a gain of 0.385 of a point.

Closing level of amusement group did not compare favorably with the advance of main body of industrials, Dow-Jones industrial averages closed at 147.30, an advance of 3.25 points over preceding week. High point in industrial averages was recorded Monday (27) when they hit 148.33, best mark in several weeks.

Passage of bonus bill over the President's veto by the Senate Monday came so late that it had little effect on stock trading. Traders all last week attempted to see inflation implications in possibility that the bonus bill would become a law. Some observers are inclined to think that Senate's action may later be reflected in higher stock prices, although, temporarily, the good news may cause some reaction.

Amusements chipped in with the usual quota of nine highs for stocks and one for a bond issue. New 1935-6 tops were recorded by Columbia Broadcasting A and B stocks, with 56½ as asking price (up 3½); Columbia Pictures pfd., at 51¼; RKO, at 8; Universal Picts, pfd., at 80; Warner Bros. common, at 11⅞, for a gain of 1⅜; and preferred at 54, up 3¼; Westinghouse common, at 110¾, an advance of 9⅜; and the preferred, at 135, up 4¾. Warner Bros. 6s was sole bond issue to reach new peak territory.

Federal Reserve Board's surprise order increasing margin requirements from 50 to 55% hit stock prices in early Saturday trading. However, whole market snapped back vigorously and went higher again on Monday. Rally Saturday, after this reactionary news and following Friday's spotty and weaker affair, proved a pleasant surprise for bull forces. Considerable short covering undoubtedly aided many issues Saturday. Little forced selling is anticipated as a result of reserve board order, since about half of issues now traded in are held outright.

In addition to the showing made by stocks that hit new tops, there was a batch of other amusements to turn in high grade performances. Columbia Pictures certificates pushed forward more than a point to 45¾, selling lower later as stock went ex-dividend.

Par a Feature

Paramount 1st pfd. was an especial feature in Monday's transactions although strong all week. It registered highest price of week at close 83¾. This represented an advance of 3¼ points. Both the common and second preferred of Par also were active, highly, although showing only fractional gains at the blow-off.

Loew common was stronger in most sessions. It went to 53⅝ Monday but dipped at finish. Stock was up nearly a point even at 52⅝, final quotation. General Electric also acted well, sporting a 2-point gain at the close, 38⅞. High price was 39⅛.

Failure of Radio Corp. of America directors to act on Joe Kennedy's suggested recapitalization plan probably prompted selling pressure on Radio common and Radio B in last day's trading. Common dipped to 12⅞, off 75c., while Radio Preferred B was down 2½ points to 81½. Trend in these two issues probably will be influenced in next few weeks by what RCA directors do about recap set-up. The selling on Monday was based on an excuse rather than any specific reason.

High recorded by Warner Bros. common came on Monday, and strength continued right up to final gong. The preferred which has been inactive and tending to be a laggard compared to the common snapped back hitting the new peak at 54, a gain of more than 3.

Westinghouse directors are skedded to meet for dividend purposes today (Wednesday). The common stock finished at 109¼, little more than a point below sensational top made in earlier Monday trading. With this issue paying only $1 currently, recent market action strongly suggests that directors will hike the divvy or at least pay a cash extra.

Tough for Preferreds

Among the preferreds in amusement list, most of which had tough sledding, Keith preferred looked best. It climbed 2 points to 85 on a few transactions. Loew preferred and preference stock of Eastman Kodak were weak. Universal preferred, however, suffered most startling loss. This issue at one time was off 11 points, winding up week with a decline of 9 points to 67. Had made new peak earlier. Consequently, reaction was not entirely unforeseen.

While the old upper resistance mark around 55 continues to baffle Loew common, its action last week indicated to chart readers that it should do better if market continues strong. During past week, it joined the procession of leaders and moved up to 53⅝.

Period of consolidation is being experienced by 20th Century-Fox stocks, according to some observers. There was little evidence of any considerable distribution with the common hanging near high of 27. Since the new 20th-Fox common issue hit the big board, it has moved up approximately 10 points from lowest level latter part of August and gives promise of doing better.

Warner Bros. common moved out of its old narrow trading range last week. Old resistance point was between 10½ and 10¾.

Technicolor continued to be the outstanding stock of amusement category on the curb. It made a new high for current move at 23⅞, and held close to this level in subsequent profit-taking. Showed an advance of 1½ at blow-off. As was indicated here a number of weeks ago, the stock plainly evidenced it was going through period of accumulation and that there were prospects of a sharp advance. This was based on optimistic outlook for company's soon to be released color product.

In addition to smart advance of Warner liens, Paramount 6s also contributed a splendid show of strength. These obligations pushed ahead to 94¾ to show a gain of 2¼ at the finish. Paramount-Broadway 5½s also were firm between 57½ and 58.

Warner Bros. bonds closed at the new 1935-6 peak of 92, this representing a gain of 2⅞ points. Loew 6s were a weak feature, dipping 1 point to 103¼, presumably on news that company might supplant them with an issue of liens paying smaller interest.

FOX-W. C.'S ANSWER

Sweepingly Denies Tally and Corbar Corp.'s Charges

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Fox West Coast, Fox Films, National Theatres Corp., Charles Skouras, Charles Irwin (latter two former trustees in bankruptcy of Fox-West Coast) and other respondents in the petition of T. L. Tally and Corbar Corp. (Lou Bard) to have the $25,000,000 Fox-West Coast bankruptcy adjudication set aside, will file answer today or tomorrow (Wednesday) in Federal Court to fraud conspiracy charges brought by former creditors. Answer, which will be heard Feb. 3, on an order to show cause, makes specific denial of accusations, involving attorneys, and naming certain federal judges as complaisant to bidding of Fox-West Coast.

Answer in 36 typewritten pages also sets up affirmative statements against Tally and Corbar, countering that charges are false and groundless, with detailed refutation of alleged facts. Respondents demand not only court costs but heavy counsel fees as well.

Answer states that Tally and Corbar, represented by Attorneys Neblett & McAdoo, either knew that the charges were false or could readily so ascertain. Sweeping denial is made of all allegations. Further denied that Federal Judge William P. James and Harry Hollzer, and Referee Samuel McNab, were in any way involved in any alleged conspiracy, or were disqualified to act in judicial capacity. In reference to Tally's asserted claims and grievances respondents state the Criterion theatre, L. A., leases between Tally and F.W.C. set forth limit the liability of Fox-West Coast to $50,000 forfeiture, under any circumstance, and that Tally actually paid $49,065. Answer denies F.-W.C. ever had any lease with Corbar and therefore could not, as charged, have disaffirmed it. Also states Corbar's only claim is for $640, and this was voluntarily withdrawn.

HARRY SHERM'N MAY RETURN TO PAR

Harry Sherman, veteran union executive, at one time in charge of labor matters for Paramount, may return to Par in the same capacity he formerly occupied. He was in New York during the past week and talked the possibility of such a connection with Par executives. Understood the matter is under consideration. A final decision may await the return to New York of John E. Otterson, at present on the Coast.

Sherman has been in the northwest in theatre operation for Paramount. He came on to New York on business matters, and during his visit the possibility of a return to the home office over all labor dealings was discussed. It was reported in some quarters that Par sensed the importance of a labor contact executive following its recent difficulties with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which resulted in the IA winning a virtual closed shop over all studios. This originated when the IA and Par clashed over a crew that came east on location work, Par defying threats of the IA to pull men out of theatres.

RCA's Kennedy Plan

Because of conflicting interests represented by various groups of stockholders on Radio Corp. of America's board, the Joe Kennedy suggested recapitalization plan probably will not be acted on until the regular directorial session late in February.

Kennedy submitted his proposal, after about a month of work, to RCA board at the regular Friday (24) meeting.

Pierre Boucheron's New Berth

Pierre Boucheron, former advertising and sales promotion director of RCA and RCA Victor, and for the past year exploitation specialist for RKO Picts, has become assistant sales manager (cutlery division) of Remington Arms, Bridgeport, Conn., effective Feb. 1.

Loew, RCA and 20th Join Industrial Trend to Call In High-Divvy Issues

Increasing tendency of leading industrial companies to call in higher dividend-paying preferred stocks and bonds is beginning to be reflected in amusement industry. Reason is that these companies are gradually coming to realization that they cannot profitably employ the high cost of capital represented by current preference issues and obligations.

This trend is best typified by contemplated recap plans of Loew's, Inc., Radio Corp. of America and 20th Century-Fox, latter retire one issue of obligations and call other to be supplanted by one bearing lesser rate of interest.

Loew proposes to call in present 6% bonds, which are comparatively few in number, and issue in its place liens that will give holders slightly less than 4%. It means a saving of thousands of dollars annually.

Recapitalization proposals, now under consideration, by RCA are reported to include supplanting two preferred stocks with two paying substantially less in dividends. One plan calls for cutting present Class A from 7% to a stock bearing only 5% interest and slashing the Radio B from 5% to 4%. Expected that if this proposal is adopted it not only would reduce interest outlay, but do away with problem of appeasing Radio B stockholders who have been seeking arrears in divvy payments for a year or more.

G-MEN K.O. WOULD-BE THEATRE RACKET ORG.

Knoxville, Jan. 28.

G-men and local police have closed their investigation of a big-time racketeering jab at all major film houses here. Managers called the bluff of 'organizers,' allegedly from Chicago, who suggested they buy 'protection' or else. Deal was for a 5c up in prices to provide cut for the agency. Managers inserted three ads in Knoxville paper in reply to letters from the 'organizers,' turning thumbs-down on the proposition.

Ads were in , which sent newshawks on the trail. G-Men entered the case on strength of tortion letters sent by the 'protection association.'

No arrests have been made and G-men have intimated they consider the case washed up unless future developments occur.

16MM. LOBBY TRAILER AS BALLY SUBSTITUTE

Introduction of 16-millimeter continuous motion picture projection in lobby of the Rialto theatre, N. Y., has aroused considerable discussion in industry circles as to possibilities of employing same miniature film outfit for ballyhooing coming attractions.

Figured that the 16-mm. pictures from forthcoming feature productions could be used as supplementary to customary advance screen trailers, or in some instances as a substitute. With these miniature outfits, since one or more could be located in a large theatre lobby, it could be made a voluntary thing so arranged that those wishing to see what could be expected in future films could turn on projector themselves on leaving the house. Either that set-up could be arranged, or an exhibitor could turn on a continuous 16 mm. projector at every show break.

Jim Furman Retires

James C. Furman, charge of publicity and advertising for Loew's Newark and Jersey City theatres, is retiring, one of the rare cases where a p.a. quits for such a reason. Furman for years was with Publix.

Of the family which founded the Furman University in South Carolina, Furman recently inherited a large sum of money. He is planning a trip to the Coast; then a world cruise, accompanied by his wife.

Arthur Egbert has been placed in charge of publicity and advertising for Loew's at Jersey City, Al Lippe in charge at Newark.

CONTRACTS

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Brian Marlow and Dore Schary tagged with riting pacts at Paramount.

Radio lifted Cliff Reid's producer option for six-month stretch.

Option on stock contract of Victor Killian lifted by Columbia for six-month stretch.

Frank Thomas tabbed with termer by RKO. Ticket starts following close of 'Remember the Day,' now completing N. Y. run.

Gladys Hulbert handed term writing pact at Metro.

William Berke lifted option on Harry Carey for six more westerns.

Paramount handed termer to William Russell, dialog director.

John Arledge's option lifted at Radio.

Phil Epstein, collaborator with his brother, Julius, on 'Stars Remain,' Theatre Guild's next, handed termer at RKO. Julius under the Warner flag.

Edwin L. Marin drew option pickup on directorial pact at Metro. Next is 'Speed.'

"ROSE MARIE I LOVE YOU!"

—that's what your patrons will be singing and your box-office will be SHOUTING!

BOX-OFFICE SWEETHEARTS! JEANETTE MacDONALD and NELSON EDDY!

There were cheers in the M-G-M Home Office Projection Room at the conclusion of the "Rose Marie" screening this week. We knew from Coast reviews and word-of-mouth that another great M-G-M hit was on the way. We sincerely believe it is even greater than "Naughty Marietta," the triumph that introduced MacDonald-Eddy, the screen's greatest singing sweethearts. And now as "Rose Marie" leaps into the box-office headlines we lift our hats to its stars, its director, W. S. Van Dyke, and its producer, Hunt Stromberg. Together they made "Naughty Marietta." And now they have repeated! And the M-G-M torrent of hits rolls merrily on!

PARAMOUNT, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.

Billy and Beverly Bemis, those young and energetic dancers, feature this week's bill, a potpourri of terpsing which runs the gamut from ballroom to hot tapping. They just finished engagement at Seville club.

Al Lyons and his band, in for fourth week, play several hot numbers, but mix up the fare by permitting nine of the tuners to sing a comedy song and a trio to bring their instruments down front for a screaming rendition of 'St. Louis Blues.'

Precision chorus of Fanchonettes opens show with 'challenge' dance to the band drummer. He raps out a few bars and they follow. Clever. Band next for 'Thanks a Million,' with Bob Rogers, personable young tenor, vocalizing. Nine bandsmen follow with their song.

Judy Starr, torcher, who recently rejoined the band after an auto accident, gives out with a repent of 'Basin Street Blues' and 'Music Goes Round and Round,' which she did two weeks ago. Nick Cochrane, singer-trumpeter, joins in on the latter song, which caused the audience at the first show to yell and stomp for more.

Jue Fong, Chinese tenor, sings a medley of classical stuff and ends act with 'Irish Eyes Are Smiling' which he puts over in good fashion. Neil Castagnoli, clarinetist; Roy Phelps, guitar, and My Hoaz, bass viol, come down front for the blues number. Lyons aids on his accordion.

Bemis duo next, starting with their semi-ballroom tap routine. Billy, in white hat and tails, follows with his fast soft shoe dance. Bevy ends up by singing her 'Selling Rhythm' number followed by their dance performed in Paramount's 'Collegiate.'

Band moves back of scrim, and Fanchonettes parade down aisles to stage in new fashion creations. Once on they perform a slow dance while Rogers sings off-stage.

Paramount's 'Anything Goes,' newsreel and shorts subjects are film fare. Biz at first show near sellout. Hane.

IMPERIAL, TORONTO

Toronto, Jan. 25.

In experimenting for a policy that will bring in the box office shekels consistently, Jack Arthur seems to have at last ended the search as far as this deluxe 3,640-seater is concerned. Josef Cherniavsky is in for two weeks, plus option, as guest conductor and that option will be taken up, judging from the first night-audience reception.

Cherniavsky effectively brings an atmosphere of intimacy into a house that has had difficulty in putting over anything from presentations to symphony overtures with 61 musicians on stage. For the first time in many moons, the customers gave a palm-pounding climax to the offerings of a showman who knows how to sell.

This week the augmented orchestra is on the stage, with Arthur giving the boys a flash set and Harry Fisher creating a light plot that adds to the in toto reaction. Musicians in crimson mess-jackets are on a white semi-circular dais behind music standards of gleaming red lacquer, whole backed by white satin drapes, with a rhinestone studded drop. No conductor's podium necessary here, for Cherniavsky is all over the stage and conducting with every part of his anatomy.

Starts off with a Friml medley that runs 12 minutes and is generous on solo step-outs; then John Goss and his London Singers for 10 minutes of folksongs and sea chanties, this quartet in tails getting over nicely on masculine harmony without the aid of the p. a. system, and this is a relief from the usual mike-masking; then Cherniavsky conducting his own arrangement of Volstead's 'Jolly Fellows,' this embodying a drunk motif that clinches the customers. Whole bill runs 28 mins.

Next week, the leader gets an opportunity to present his pit-prez ideas.

Feature, 'Dangerous' (WB). McStay.

PALACE, CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 25.

Big news at the house currently is the Wayne King orchestra (New Acts). For some five years the theatres of this country have been bidding for this band. They had the figures of the band's click at the Aragon ballroom, of the orchestra's job for Lady Esther on the air. It looked like a cinch draw. But King was skittish about theatre appearances.

He was wrong about that: his orchestra plays good music and that's always good entertainment. He comes to vaude about two years too late. In 1934 he figured as cinch box office. Today he must pick his spots. He needs exploitation and ballyhoo.

King is doing 30 minutes of straight musicale, varying his act with occasional fox trots to break up the waltzes. It's a good musical act, the type of stuff that is expected from King. He is a bit too stiff and formal with his audiences, but that can be corrected. It's basically a fine 30 minutes of well played popular music.

With King taking $8,500 there was hardly much left for the rest of the vaude bill, but somehow the house managed to squeeze in three standard acts to round out the performance. Opening are the Six De Cardos with their teeter-board and barrel-jumping work. Clean-cut acrobatics routined smartly, building up to a smacking climax on a triple-high jump into the barrels. Act has added new costumes.

In the deuce Bliss, Lewis and Ash are somewhat wobbly on their straight tap routine, but come back with a sock on the girl's toe-tap number and their closing military sequence. Not-to-closing in the trey were Arren and Broderick, back in town after more than a year's absence. Girl is still aces for low-down hoke. She gets some eight minutes of solid laughter out of it. Had to speech herself away.

Picture, 'Two in the Dark' (RKO). Business bad last show Friday. Gold.

G. O. H., N. Y.

House was so packed Saturday that newcomers were returning stubs. Kids checked in in droves, not discouraged by the standing ordeal at the opening mat.

New act, Lucky Sisters, breaks the ice. None too fast at first but speeds up for finale. Face is maintained by deucer, feline impersonations of Bert Nagel and Co, filling the second notch to perfection. Nagel works with a single femme acrobatic dancer now instead of his former miniature ballet. Honestly obtains plenty of laughs with his tomcat antics. Girl, if new, is exceptionally good.

One of few remaining members of a vanishing profession, Ray Conlin still manages to hold interest with his ventriloquism. Conlin should remember where he is when down here and refrain from subleties. Healthy chunk of his wittiisms are wasted.

Emerson's Mountaineers, hillbilly aggregation, (New Acts) put the finishing touches to a very good vaude show. No duplication in acts this trip. Film, 'Night at the Opera' (MG). Short 'Perfect Tribute' (MG) fills the gap created by absent double feature.

Conlin and comic of the hillbilly return at the finish for an afterpiece burlesque on the dummy act. Good idea for down here and well received.

JEFFERSON, N. Y.

Mrs. Evans boys are doing nicely at the 14th street stronghold of vaudeville this week. James of that ilk starts the bill with his smooth pedal juggling and Steve does the janitor work in the next to last—he cleans up very nicely. He had two earned encores after a rather extended first part, followed with a beg-off and still they wanted more. He slaughtered them with his Lon Chaney, in spite of its antiquity. But it would be as good under another moniker if there were any outstanding freak actor to pin it on to. Since there is not they take it nicely with the Chaney tag.

It's a nice audience to work for on 14th street. They are quick and reasonably intelligent with their applause, and patter in any time through a turn instead of waiting until the exit. A couple of trick laughers in the audience the show caught broke Evans up for a moment.

James Evans, who has been nite clubbing recently, has a good sense of showmanship and projects himself nicely. He keeps the turn from looking ordinary, though there has been little new in the barrel kicking since F. F. Proctor used to work on his back as one of the Levantine Bros. Evans just makes it look different. That's something.

Carolyn Marsh wrestles the mike in the second spot. Builds her act nicely with lively songs fore and aft and a show piece in the middle, but she stands too still to win full approval here. They like 'em to move around. Oddly enough the mellow notes of her extremely lower register failed to move them in this quasi-Italian neighborhood where musical appreciation might be looked for.

In the middle are Conrad, Leon and Carl, whose orchestra parts are still clean and white, but whose stuff is not so recent. It's the old mayhem routine with these boys being careful not to get their new suits dirty by falling around. The comedian tries to work in durante fashion, but all he gets is the natural voice. Down here they got over because they worked hard, but that can't pull them through many spots.

Closer is Vernon Rathburn, who works with four women and another man in a mostly musical act, punctuated by a fair dancing interlude by two of the girls and the other man, and a mike singer. Mostly however it is saxophone work, with Rathburn a really clever player and the others competent to back him up. There's material here for a better act with a different routining and different dressing.

Feature is 'Freshman Love' (WB) with a scenic, U's 'Camera Thrills' and a newsreel. Show takes up 58 minutes of the 160 minute show with Joe Gershenson's orchestra accounting capably for a five-minute spell. Business close to capacity Friday night, but that's one of the three bank nites the house holds each week. That may account for some. Chic.

KEITH'S, BOSTON

Boston, Jan. 24.

In line with the current Keith house production policy, this week's offering consists of a unit, Connie's Inn Revue, plus name acts (Fats Waller and Ada Brown). The blend proves eminently satisfactory.

Waller has not appeared before in Boston, but has draw value. Closes the show, and it's apparently the climax the customers are waiting for. Radio's 'harmful little armful' is also playing across the street on the screen in 'King of Burlesque'; in his 10-minute of poignant pianoforte he unfolds 'Fingers Crossed' from the pic. He's generous with his own writings, and justified, because they're all click material. In his vocaling, Waller has that rare, daffy delivery that compares markedly with Louis Armstrong's; and although he is by no means copying, it is, nevertheless that infectiousness that puts him way over. Only by stepping directly into the finale could Waller avoid a flock of encores.

Show shuts and opens with stoppers. At the front end are Ford, Marshall and Jones, who follow the conventional opening number with the line. This trio of torrid tappers rattle off a sock routine that puts 'em on their seat edges after not many bars. They wham with precision, challenge and very eccentric stuff that's aces.

For the hoofing fans there's plenty of action all through the show. Miller Brothers sock midway with their sensational dancing on platforms and pedestals. Single hoofer is Roland Holder, who emerges very satisfactorily on his own, even with opposition from the two triple teams.

Dixie Four, in the singing department, are tops in this lineup. Eccentric posturing, rare arrangements, and smart routining. Payoff is some ludicrous eccentric hoofing for a closer.

For single vocals Ada Brown was booked in for additional strength. The strength is there, judging from reception on show caught, and although Miss Brown's diction is not always clear, she is well liked for her 'Tiny Fingerprints' and a touch of truckin' for an encore.

Crowding her for honors is Avis Andrews and her shrill, blue voice. Clinches early in her line of pops, then closes with 'You Ain't So Hot' from 'Parade,' in which short-lived revue she last appeared in Boston. The tune is catchy, but the bitter lyric is lukewarm vaude fare.

Susaye Brown vocals introductions to chorus numbers adequately pranced by good looking line of sepias. Straight comedy dished out by Radcliffe and Rodgers, still polishing the piano and getting generous laughs with a line of gags more or less familiar.

Screen, 'Melody Lingers On' (UA). Fox.

Court's judgment will not be swayed by the mere fact that the defendants are big financially.

Just prior to adjournment Hardy again asked Judge Molyneaux, who has previously ruled against Government, to permit him to present evidence of profit and loss of Shubert-Rialto and Orpheum theatres, asserting that Government believes these houses were opened as a move of continuing fight on F&M interests here. Hardy asked to be heard again on point and court said he might argue it later.

Milton Arthur Testifies

Milton B. Arthur, president and general manager of Cabart Theatres Corp., controlling 16 theatres in the West, and brother of Harry C. Arthur, v. p. of F&M interests controlling three St. Louis houses, was called by the Government as its witness on Thursday (23) and testified that houses in west were deprived of pictures because of St. Louis theatre war.

Another new government witness made his appearance on the stand Wednesday (23), following Thomas N. Dysart, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Bondholders' Protective Committee at the time it accepted bid of Allen L. Snyder for the theatre properties.

Irving Lesser, managing director of the Roxy, N. Y., was another witness, but when government counsel attempted to get his whole film career into the record, Judge Molyneaux somewhat impatiently said, 'His career may be very interesting, but we'll assume he is qualified as an expert,' and as defense counsel agreed, Lesser's word picture of himself was left untold. Despite vigorous objections by defense, Lesser was permitted to relate a conversation he had with Roy Haynes, eastern district sales manager for WB Pictures, Inc., and other picture product negotiations.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTOA of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, called as a government witness late Tuesday (21), testified of vain efforts to obtain contracts to show Par and RKO pictures subsequent run at the New Grand Central after he had been offered two propositions to become interested in that house.

Harry M. Warner, president of WB, made his appearance in court for the first time since the equity case has been under way and although Assistant Attorney General Rice made vigorous efforts to have him barred from the courtroom, until called as a witness, Judge Molyneux permitted him to remain, stating it was within the discretion of the court, and it was his opinion that Warner, as head of his company, a defendant, should be permitted to aid in defense.

MEDRANO, PARIS

Paris, Jan.

Hold over its 'clownerie,' 'Rhum at Rome,' sort of burlesque ring review which has proved the only big post-holiday business-getter in Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Medrano have added to it a series of nice acts for the first part of the show this fortnight.

Headliners are the Four Macks, American roller skating act. They are as good as any team of the kind around here lately, with the exception of the fact that their big fellow is not heavy enough to swing the other three. Nevertheless, they try a three swing, last man on the outside getting his skates off the ground only for a moment, and the result is disappointment.

Earlier on the bill is a really exceptional aerial act, the Two Clerans, who work high without a net, a combination of ring, rope and iron jaw performance. Both of them powerful men, their facility and the risk they run are breath-taking.

Three Shyrettos, two men and a girl on bikes and monocycles, also big. All three do a monocycle dance, with good rhythm, in unison, and the men do a funny drunk number on wheels.

Other numbers are Garzoni, juggler, and Paul Sandor's circus.

Floyd du Pont, American, who puts on the 'clownerie' which is the second part, has worked down the show until it now is fast entertainment and the talk of Paris. tern.

STATE, BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Jan.

Far over on east side of town this split-weeker been chugging along for years most inconspicuously. Flagship in fleet of nabe indie subsequent-run film spots operated by Frank H. Durkee, State is only regular vaude spot in Balto aside from the downtown week stands, Loew's Century and Rappaport's Hipp. Budget at State for the three-act bills is around $700 weekly; first half is Sunday through Wednesday. Eddie Sherman is the booker. Mostly individual acts, though occasionally a unit is given a whirl. State cannot afford the bigger, higher-priced units, and will not truck with the other sort.

Spot is extremely comfortable and modern. Seats about 1,500, and sports seven men in the pit. Pix are third-run. Evening top is 30c.

Nice bill on stage Saturday was warmly welcomed by the house. Show ran about 35 minutes.

First out, Ray and Trent, manual and pedal balancers, with some good stunts in stock. Kind of turn apparently doted on by the customers, and really nifty for house like the State.

The vet of better vaude era, Willie Solar, deuced and found novel by the mob. His vocal and labial clowning didn't strike far from dead-center of the bull's eye.

Alvin and Kitt, a five-person flash, closes. The single man in troupe is best on his hoofing. The pair of girls who dance seemed very youthful. Couple of girl harmonizers round out the retinue; singers would impress more with a better p.a. system than this house affords.

The State gives but briefest billing to vaude. None on marquee to even suggest a show, but couple of stills in door frames out front. The films get all the buildup. Only newspaper advertising indulged in breaks in Sunday editions, and then only mentioning the word 'vaudeville,' unqualified further.

SCALA, BERLIN

Berlin, Jan. 17.

'Scala—Etwas Verrueckt' ('Scala, a little crazy'), a Duisberg production, is the title of the current show. It's a crazy show, all right, but more bordering on the burlesque. In fact, were there any strip, woman it would be perfect Minsky, since all the ingredients are there—dirty jokes and vulgar sketches, topped off by a wriggler from the Orient.

It seems a little nuts to change a 100% family house like this into burlesque, but the Scala seems encouraged from the success of a former production along similar lines.

Acts must suffer by necessity in such a make-up, but Ray Huling, who opens with his seal 'Charlie,' has no difficulty in convincing the audience that real vaude is still okay.

Heinrich Stengel, a German comic, is about the only one in the cast who gets laughs without dirty jokes. Rudi Grasl imitates cleverly several instruments and looks like a second Willy Fritsch.

Adriano and Charlot are fine in acrobatics on a bouncing pedestal, and Beuvell and Tova are a different dance team.

The Three Diamonds in the next to last spot arrive late, with a bored and exhausted audience, but their exceptional hokum acrobatics wake the lads up; a big click.

Germany's torch singer, Claire Waldorff, is as funny as ever and sells sausages in the interval. This about indicates the kind of crazy show it is.

nesians, 268 to Cubans, 204 to Germans, 351 to Indians, 183 to Armenians, 157 to Greeks, 108 to Japanese and 101 to Yugoslavs, with the rest being in smaller lots of from one to 39 being divided among Austrians, Australians, Belgians, Canadians, Esquimaux, Filipinos, Hindus, Hungarians, Irish, Poles, Swedes, Swiss and Turks.

The increase of employment for Women during the year was not as tremendous as among the men. The gals earned a total of $724,154.60 in 86,001 jobs against $606,486.61 for 73,216 placements in 1935. The biggest amount of employment allotted them was in the $7.50 and $10 classes, as with the men; 20,439 drew $153,292.50 in the $7.50 group, while 20,391 had a take of $203,910 in the $10 grade where they had to wear smart clothing.

In the $15 group, $15,468 were paid $232,020, the de luxe class drawing the most money in the woman's division. In these classes there was a combined increase of 8,081 placements with an increase of $116,217.50 being allotted for these groups over 1934. However, in the $7.50 class, year 1934 was more lucrative for the girls as there were 543 more placements with the outlay being $4,062.50 more than in 1935.

For some unknown reason that class between $10 and $15 or the $12.50 group got scant attention as only 275 received checks of this size to the total of $3,437.50/while the year before there were just 229 listed in that class to draw down $2,862.50.

The girls in the $5 group were over the year before as 20,736 checks were paid out to a total of $103,680, against 18,404 who received a total of $92,020. Getting the $3.20 checks were 8,692, taking a total of $27,814.40 against a combined take of $8,219.60 for 2,719 jobs in the $3 and $3.20 classes in 1934. The $3 tickets are out this year as they were abandoned when the NRA Film Code came in last year and were not reinstated. Same is applicable in the men's, boy and girl groups.

There was even a slight increase in the amount of employment given children. During 1935 the boys got 5,447 jobs for a total gross of $34,491.10 against 4,943 who drew a total of $31,612.80 the year preceding. In this group the biggest amount of checks went to the $5 a day workers as in 1934, with 2,954 drawing a total of $14,470 against 12,420 being paid 2,484 in 1934. However, in the $7.50 class more jobs were given in 1934 than in 1935. For 1934 there were 2,227 placements against 1,997 last year, with the '34 checks amounting to $16,702.50 against $14,977.50 in '35, or a decrease in earning for the past year in this division of $1,725.

The $10 a day workers amounted to 302 who got $3,020 while year previous there were 186 placements amounting to $1,860. Earnings in the $15 grade more than doubled over the previous year as did those in the $12.50 grade. In the $15 class there were 84 jobs allotted, amounting to $1,260, while in 1934 there were only 37 who drew $555 total. The $12.50 class had work for 12 who drew $150 while in '34 work was only found for five who were given a gross of $62.50. There was big increase in the $3.20 group for last year over preceding one as 98 were paid $313.60 against four who earned a total of $12.80.

Heavy Run in $5 Class

In the girls' division largest number of jobs were allotted the $5 a day adolescents, who were spotted 2,076 times for a gross of $10,380 against 1,845 placements in '34, who were paid a total of $9,225. As with the boys there was less work for the girls in the $7.50 class in '35 than in '34, with 2,018 being paid $15,135 against 2,213 who got $16,597.50 for their time in '34, or a decrease of $1,462.50 in this division. In the $10 group there was also slight decrease in '35, as 171 found employment against 174 in '34 with payment for '35 in the class being $1,710, or a decrease of $30 over year before.

The $3.20, $12.50 and $15 checks increased 400% and more in 1935 over 1934. In the $3.20 group jobs were given 71 against four with earnings in the division jumping from $12.80 to $227.20. In the $12.50 class nine were given jobs as against two, with the take being $112.50 as against $25, while in the $15 grade 43 found employment to tune of $645 as against nine who were paid a total of $135 in 1934.

The average daily placements during 1935 for men were 583 as against 440 in 1934, with women daily average being 275 as against 235 in 1934. The children were prorated at a 31 job figure daily against 30 in 1934 with the average daily placements combined in 1935 being 889 as against 705 in 1934 or a daily increase of 184.

As there are always new applicants for registration on the Central list, the number of interviews in 1935 each day averaged 87 as against 64 the year before.

Weather elements and improper placements are also important in the handling of people and during 1935 brought about a daily average of cancellations of calls amounting to 48, while in 1934 the number was far below, or 17 people checked off daily.

There is no notation of overtime being paid to people on the accompanying lists. However, there was considerable of this at the various studios, with the overtime paid for by the studios, who also pay the wages direct instead of clearing any part of their expenditures through Central casting. They simply pay Central a percentage fee on all people hired through them, with this amount of money being used for office overhead. Office, since established by Dave Allen 10 years ago has been operating on profit side of the ledger. Allen resigned early last year, Campbell MacCulloch the current operating head.

Last year earnings of top working individuals were included in the Central report. However, this year, with the induction of record keeping system by machine for unemployment insurance and old age pension requirements, no tab was kept on the top money grossers in the extra division of the industry.

Tearle's Eight Indies for Leichter

Mitchell Leichter has re-signed Conway Tearle through George Ullman for a series of eight pictures for 1936-37.

Nothing Like Asking

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

A Warners efficiency expert asked the assistant director on 'Sons o' Guns' set who would play the part of 'Jimmy' in the picture.

Film had been in production eight days.

Joe E. Brown had been playing the role from the start.

U FINISHES 'SUTTER,' 'LOVE,' MARCH RELEASE

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Universal's 'Sutter's Gold', washed up Jan. 25, three days under schedule, directed by James Cruze, under supervision of Edmund Grainger.

'Love Before Breakfast,' starring Carole Lombard, finished Monday (27). Pic had been in production six weeks, Walter Lang directing. Both will be released middle of March.

Sagal Estate Tangled

A controversy over appointment of an administrator for the estate of Louis M. Sagal who died intestate in December, 1935, culminated in the naming of Nathan G. Sachs, deputy coroner, by Judge John L. Gilson of probate court.

Sagal, former associate of S. Z. Poli, who made and lost several fortunes in show business and other enterprises, left his affairs badly entangled and Benjamin Slade, attorney for Sagal, moved for the appointment of Mrs. Eugene B. Rodney, a daughter, as administratrix of her father's estate. Trustees representing a defunct local bank, with a $75,000 claim against the estate, opposed appointment of Mrs. Rodney and when counsel for both sides failed to agree on a compromise appointee, step was taken by probate judge.

Slade expressed the belief that claims against the estate, which has depreciated considerably in value, would reach close to $2,000,000. Complications expected to require several months to determine whether or not estate is solvent.

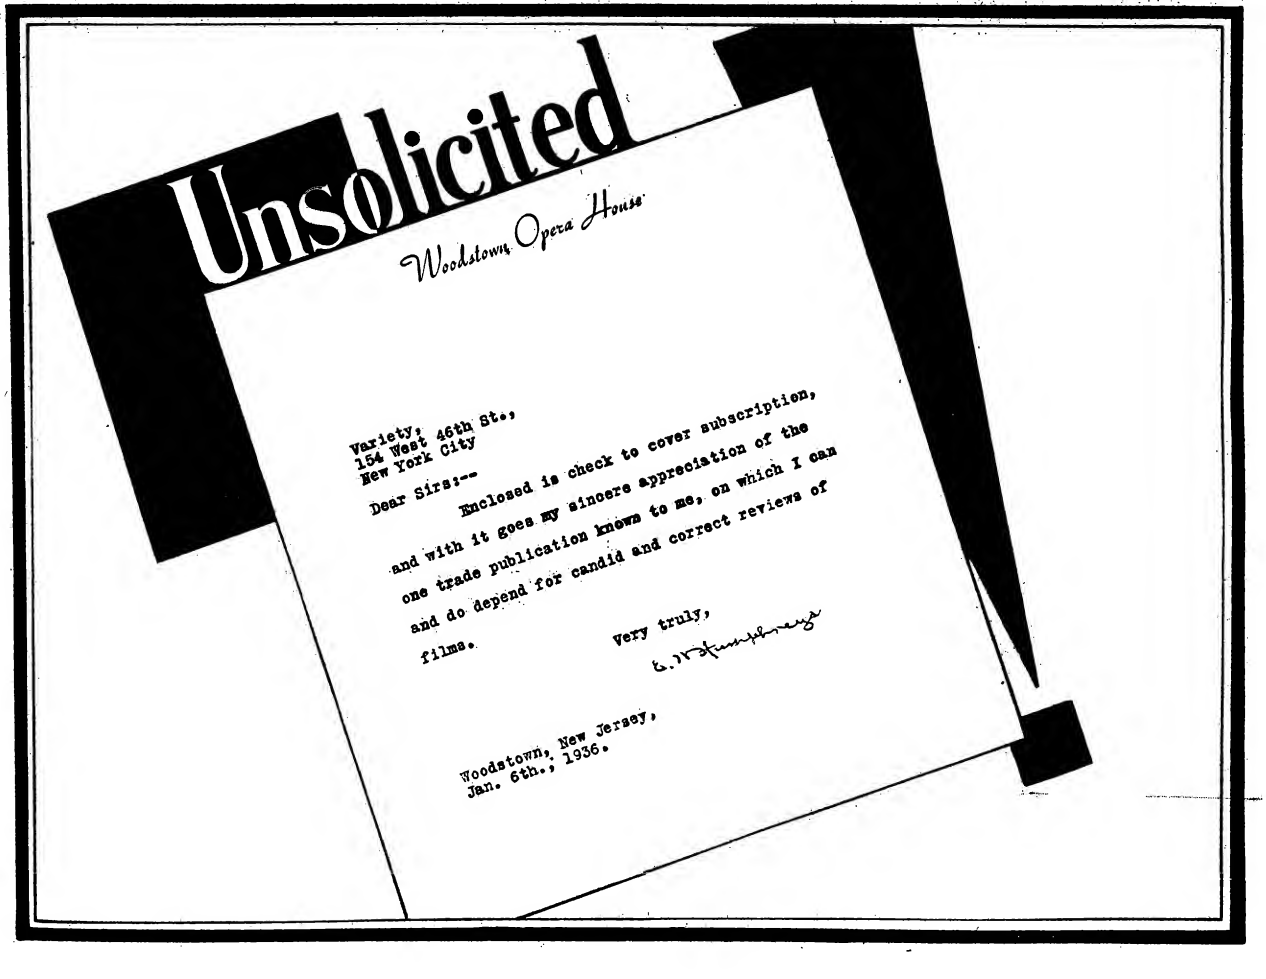
DISTRIBS PASS N.Y. SALES TAX TO EXHIBS

Placing the burden of a New York city sales tax on the exhibitors and regarding themselves merely as collectors, the distributors have started to ship all film on a C. O. D. basis, with no deliveries made unless the account is prepared and willing to pay the tax as well as the rental in cases where latter is due. This action by the distributors follows decision of a New York board of review on the film rental-accessories sales tax situation which held that rentals were taxable.

A couple weeks ago when it was held that film rentals and accessories were taxable, the distributors notified exhibitors they would have to pay the levy, many complaints resulting. Some accounts started to pay the tax, others refused. The C.O.D.'ing on film, rental to force collection of the tax from everyone followed. Where the film rental has been paid, instruction to the exchanges is that the film, though paid for, cannot be delivered unless the tax is also collected.

It is estimated that the sales tax will run close to $500,000 a year.

The distributors do not believe they had a fair hearing on a review of the case, since the three members of the board who ruled in the test case against United Artists were all members of the city government. Expected that an appeal will be taken to the Appellate Division on a writ of certiorari. Distributor defense all along has been that film and accessories are leased or rented and not sold. It is also contended that collection of a city sales tax from New Jersey exhibitors, served by the New York exchanges, is in violation of interstate commerce laws.



Would Take Calif. Tax Problems Out Of Politico Hands

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Tentative plans for formation of California state tax commission of to be appointed for 10-year terms, have been drawn by the L. A. chamber of commerce and will be presented to Governor Frank F. Merriam at Sacramento Feb. 3. Governor is calling tax conference for reps of various civic bodies throughout the state.

Special committee of 10 from the L. A. body agreed upon the plan in order to take tax matters out of the hands of politicians, they said. Proposal will be one of many submitted at the confab.

It is believed here that the governor eventually will issue orders for a special session of the legislature to delve into tax matters.

Governor has indicated that income and sales taxes will be supported by all conferees. He also intimated that he will not press the gross transactions tax, as indicated previously. Admish tax problem remains as is.

Talisman Lease Pends

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

A long lease on the Talisman Studio to an indie producer or private group is expected to be closed with the arrival from the east of John Crinnion, representing owners of the property, and H. William Fitelson, attorney. Plant has been operating on rentals for the past two years, with owners wanting relief from operation.

No sale is contemplated, as owners don't want to unload totally.

TITLE CHANGES

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Columbia has rehandled three pictures. They are 'Money Mad' which becomes 'Don't Gamble With Love'; 'Rolling Along' now 'Music Goes Round'; and 'The Law Rides West,' which becomes 'The Cattle Thief.'

'Mother Lode' hits the RKO release sheet as 'Yellow Dust.'

STORY BUYS

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Joseph Simmonds has bought 'The Road,' series of Jack London wanderer yarns for Excelsior Productions.

Columbia has purchased film rights to 'Taxi Please,' forthcoming mag yarn by Octavus Roy Cohen.

BILLY AND BEVERLY BEMIS

AMERICA'S MOST VERSATILE DANCE TEAM

Eleanor Barnes, 'Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News,' January 24, 1936, said: "On the stage of the Paramount Theatre the big thing is two small things—the Bemis Kids—Billy and Beverly. They are two young versatile youngsters, who have danced their way from Hollywood to London, Europe and back, with all kinds of success which they duplicate with their routines this week at the Paramount. Fast stepping with varied and unique routines these two youngsters won a hearty round of applause at yesterday's show."

ST. L. POLICE DRIVE ON 'BANK' UNDER WAY

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

Bank nite received a setback Friday (24) when Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller informed the police department that they were lotteries and therefore, under Missouri laws, illegal, advising cops to take necessary steps to stop the practice. Circuit Attorney gave notice of his decision to managers of the Missouri, Fox and Ambassador theatres, F&M owned, which he turned over to plainclothes man to deliver. Surprise is expressed on film row that Circuit Attorney took this action, as there are close to 100 nabe houses in St. Louis that have been engaging in bank nite and giveaway policy for more than nine months.

When Police Chief McCarthy received word of Circuit Attorney's edict he notified each of city's 14 district captains to make survey of their districts and warn each operator of theatre where bank nite, etc., was being held that a continuance of it would mean matter would be laid before Grand Jury for indictment action. Missouri theatre disregarded order and held its advertised drawing for a $1,000 cash prize.

Drawing Friday night was attended by a near capacity house, considerably larger than average attendance. The person named on ticket drawn by a boy from audience was not present so no award was made. Announcement was made from stage that next drawing will be announced over one of city's radio stations.

Harry Arthur, v.p. of F&M here, announced that an injunction would be asked to restrain the Circuit Attorney and cops from interfering with bank nites which he and his attorneys contend is a strictly legal proceeding and is in vogue in many cities and states in the country.

F&M says it is going ahead with plans to award 30 automobiles in its three theatres within next 10 weeks., beginning Feb. 4.

In meantime Loew's and WB are on side lines, doing nothing but watching developments.

Legislation

Wash. Tax Rap?

Tacoma, Jan. 28.

State legislators are already out with statements that picture interests in Washington are going to be further taxed on admissions. A plan is under way to run a series of trailers showing the audiences what it will cost them for their amusement should any additional admission tax be added exploiting the fact that the patrons are being taxed and not the theatres.

ill Vt. Tax

Burlington, Jan. 28.

Combined efforts of amusement operators succeeded in blocking bill to levy 10c. tax on all admissions in Vermont legislature. Bill had previously passed the lower house by large majority. Not expected another attempt will be made to levy tax in this field at present session.

Would Outlaw 'Thons

A move to outlaw walkathons and marathons in Virginia is gaining headway in the state legislature with the backing of Senator Charles E. Burks. Burks' bill proposes a fine of $100 to $1,000 and a jail sentence up to one year upon individuals or corporations who 'promote, maintain, conduct or advertise' marathon contests.

Economy

roadway film house specializing in foreign pix and playing a Polish currently didn't bother about turning on any of the marquee or electric sign lights one evening last week.

Asked how come, the house manager explained, 'What for? It costs money. And besides, anyone who wants to see this dog will come looking for it.'

PHILLY INDIES MERGER COLD

Philadelphia,

Proposed union of local indie - hib bodies appears to have landed on the rocks.

At a meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern Jersey and Delaware, called late last week by its prez, Lewen Pizor, it was decided that the organization should keep its own identity. Seventy-five exhibs, representing 190 indie theatres and 180 affiliated theatres, were present either in person or by proxy. Pizor who had opposed submerging of body's identity into that of newly formed Independent MPTO won his point, with strong backing of upstate and affiliated members.

Pizor was reelected president; George P. Aarons elected secretary for 15th time (incidentally he was also elected Secretary of the Indie MPTO when that body was formed); Mike H. Egnal, A. R. oyd and George T. Gravenstein, v.p.'s., and Al Fisher, treasurer.

Duo-featuring no longer being a subject under discussion, body took a shot at triple-feature problem which, although not prevalent, is said to exist in certain sections of this territory. Resolution was passed opposing it, also one against newsreel participation in politics. Claim was made that partisan newsreels tend to put exhib, who isn't sure of politics of his patrons, on the spot.

Publix theatres, Tower, Nixon and Roosevelt, nabe houses, admitted as members.

Decision of MPTO to maintain its own identity means, in all likelihood, that whole local indie exhib question will return to situation existing before proposal for union of IEPA and MPTO into Indie MPTO was made. Whether IEPA will continue to function as a separate indie organization only time will tell.

Competish for Mgrs. Too Tough, Fox-W.C. Trims Giveaway Pool

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Heeding squawks from theatre managers that they can't buck high-priced giveaway competition, Fox West Coast has decided to cut down its gravy and split amount into smaller groups. Final coin award is $1,500.

For three weeks the 16-theatre group of Hollywood and Glendale houses has been exploiting bank night as largest in the world. Biz proved terrific and moved B. V. Sturdivant from next to bottom to top spot in the F-WC managers drive.

Charles P. Skouras handed out $20,000 in bonus and prize checks to district and theatre managers in an 'appreciation contest' held by Fox-West Coast.

District Winners were Nick Turner, George Bowser and Cullen Espy. House managers were Fay Reeder of Sacramento; H. J. Peskay, Long Beach; Clarence Laws, Berkeley; Frank Newman, Oakland; Mort Goldberg, L. A.; Meyer Kellsohn, Long Beach. Winning bookers were James Chapman, Charles Piercey and Sam Blowitz.

Chi Film Bd. Awakens

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Chicago Film Board of Trade is slowly returning to activity after a long period of hibernation. Exchange managers, along with a few film district managers, get together this week for a dinner at the Congress hotel for an informal discussion for the film situation in this territory.

Exploitation Ratings

Herewith VARIETY presents its ratings for the key city theatres in the matter of exploitation for the past 16 weeks, as determined by its correspondents in these cities. Survey covers the period from Oct. 10, 1935, to the week ending Jan. 23, 1935.

Where more than 16 credits are set forth it is because at one or more times two houses have conducted campaigns of even merit, making it impossible to select a definite first. In Los Angeles, where there are two day-and-date operations, credit is given both houses for the joint exploitation on any given picture. In other locations joint credits are on dissimilar pictures.

Where the total of credits falls below 16 it is indication that on some weeks the exploitation campaigns did not ranks as sufficient to deserve credit.

'BANK' REVIVAL SEEN ON IOWA DECISION

Cedar Rapids, Jan. 28.

Theatres here and in other Iowa spots have started 'bank nights' again or are preparing to do so as result of the recent ruling by the supreme court of Iowa that such stunts are not illegal. G. P. Hundling, Newton, Ia., manager, brought the test case.

Ralph Branton of Des Moines, general manager for Tri-States, said that all 'bank night' purses for the Des Moines houses had been kept intact and would be distributed according to lists of registrants on file when court action stopped distribution.

Adverse Mass. Decision On Bank; $200 Fine

Boston, Jan. 28.

In the first Massachusetts test case on bank nights, last Friday (24) a decision was handed down against the theatre by Judge Thomas H. Dowd of Middlesex superior court. James Wall, manager of the Fellsway theatre, Medford, Mass., was fined $200. Counsel immediately appealed to the superior court.

Wall was specifically charged with being concerned in the setting up of a lottery for money Dec. 18. Case was watched closely all over the state, as the bank night gag is spreading in this territory.

E. C. Mills Reported Going to NBC; N.A.B. Meeting in Chicago Feb. 1

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Philly broadcasters, in a dither to grab air rights for local edition of President's Birthday Ball, are stepping forward gingerly on account of Warner-ASCAP split.

They're scarey about music bands playing at the party. Solution expected to be co-operation by all stations to have staff man present to check all numbers before they go on and shut, off broadcast in case.

James J. Baldwin, executive secretary of the National Association of Broadcasters, has called for a meeting of the organization's board of directors in Chicago Feb. 1 to listen to his report on the performing rights situation and decide on the association's future program of action toward the copyright issue. This meeting is expected to bring into the open the resentment of indie broadcasters toward what they allege to have been a squeeze play engineered between the networks and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The manouver referred to was the Society's wire of Jan. 12 to stations informing them that they had to take out five-year renewals of contract or else.

It is understood that Baldwin will in his report charge that the Jan. 12 wire was a case of pledge-breaking as far as he personally was concerned. Baldwin will tell the NAB directors that E. C. Mills, ASCAP gen. mgr., and Nathan Burkan, the Society's general counsel, had assured him that no drastic action would be taken toward the broadcasters before another conference was held with him (Baldwin). Opinion prevailing among indie broadcasters is that the networks had favored the sudden move of the Society so that they (the webs) could cease worrying about the unlicensed condition obtaining among the vast majority of their affiliated stations.

Two reports which circulated in broadcasting circles last week have been denied by the organization concerned, ASCAP. One report had it that the writers in the Society were on the verge of forcing a dissolution of the performing rights combine so that they could take over the licensing rights themselves and clear them through the 'Songwriters' Protective Association, while the other report was to the effect that the Society had designated a go-between to feel out Warner Bros. on the proposition of selling its publishing firms to major publishers affiliated with ASCAP, with the purchase money to come from the Society. It was also reported last week that E. C. Mills was considering resigning from ASCAP and taking a position with NBC in the capacity of buyer of performing and mechanical rights. Mills was head of NBC's whilom music publishing interests, Radio Music, Inc.

WB File More Suits

Warner Bros. in the past week filed 11 more copyright infringement suits against New York stations, making a total of 15 actions that it has pending in the local Federal court. New complaints involve NBC in six instances, Columbia in three, WOR in one, and WMCA in one. NBC has three previous cases.

From WABC, CBS' key, Warner is asking $15,000 for three unauthorized uses of Harms' Chansonette, twice on Jan. 18 and once on Jan. 23. Counts against NBC's WEAF concern the broadcasting of 'Painting the Clouds With Sunshine,' Jan. 1, 'Where Am I?', Jan. 1, and 'Memories,' Jan. 2, while the same network's WJZ has to answer for the airing of 'Congratulate Me,' Jan. 1, 'Then You've Never Been Blue,' Jan. 16, and 'Blue Nights,' Jan. 2. WOR is accused of making an unauthorized use of Remick's 'Isle of Golden Dreams' on Jan. 6. In all foregoing actions WB is asking damages of $5,000 each. The suit against WMCA cites 'Avalon,' Jan. 19, and asks for $1,000 and an accounting of the profits. Also served in the last case was Sally Studios, Inc., the account behind the program involved.

Baldwin is slated to meet with Herman Starr, WB v.p., immediately after the Chicago get-together to discuss a permanent licensing plan for local stations. Contract which Warner Bros. has now in effect is for three months and expires Mar. 31.

L. K. Sidney's Confab

Group of New York station operators met last week in the offices of Louis K. Sidney, head of WHN, to discuss ways and means of co-operating on the avoidance of infringing on the copyrights controlled by the Warner Bros. publishing group. Each explained what precautions he has taken in this direction and pointed out the possible pitfalls.

Among those who sat in on the meeting was Sidney Kay, of the CBS legal staff.

Sherwin-Williams Case In Court Again; Judge Cautions C. H. Freeman

Charles H. Freeman, Jr., concert manager, failed last week in his effort to make the Sherwin-Williams Paint company of Cleveland a co-defendant in the suit that he brought some time ago to restrain Cecil, Warwick & Cecil and NBC from using the Metropolitan Opera auditions idea. Federal Judge Knox, in N. Y., before whom Freeman made his move, ruled that even if he wanted to grant the request he couldn't because the case was in the jurisdiction of a higher court.

Judge Knox's reference was to the Circuit Court of Appeals, before which is pending Freeman's appeal from an injunction obtained by NBC. Network got an order restraining the concert impresario from interfering with the Sherwin-Williams show after Freeman had made allegations that the latter was a takeoff on a program he had offered to several commercials.

During the hearing on the motion to join Sherwin-Williams as a defendant Arthur Driscoll, C, W & C's counsel, asked Judge Knox to admonish Freeman against issuing any statements or making any comments in the trade on the case. This the court did.

WLVA CLIPS 3 HOURS IN WB-ASCAP RIFT

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 28.

Hard hit by the Warner-ASCAP row, station WLVA has sliced three hours off its daily operating time for lack of music. Station deals out mostly platter tunes. Some of the canned commercials, including a lucrative Chevrolet hour, had to be ditched because Warner music was on the discs.

Edward Allen, station head, is National Independent Broadcasters, president, said station has been on 16-hour daily basis.

Shift of attitude on part of smaller New York City radio stations in metropolitan area seen in employing of West W. Wilcox, copyright authority, to serve WHOM and WFAB. All musical numbers for these two stations will be cleared through his office, and there is a possibility that Stations WFAS and WEVD also may co-operate and establish a similar set-up.

Where a week ago, it looked as though WHOM and others of the small stations might sign with Warner Bros., this new move indicates an attitude of marking time. These two stations formerly had no regular copyright department. Stations WWRL, WBNX and WAAT are now operating under the conditional pact with the Warners.

San Antonio, Jan. 28.

Texas Quality web in a quandary over WB-ASCAP schism, tendency being to sit tight in hopes situation will automatically better itself. WFAA, Dallas, is only web outlet to sign with WB. Station execs recently huddled in Dallas but no decision reached. WOAI, San Antonio, and KPRC, Houston, are other members of regional clique. Chain's ace commercial stint, Pepper-Uppers, lost its theme following the split.

KMAC and KONO, San Antonio, indies, are only stations here currently signed with WB.

E. Katz Signs WOWO

Ft. Wayne, Jan. 28.

E. Katz Special Advertising has been named representative for WOWO, Fort Wayne, in the east.

This is the newspaper rep firm which recently has entered radio station brokerage field.

Chicago, Jan. 28.

E. Katz special rep outfit added a couple more stations to their list last week.

Joining the group are WGST, Atlanta, and WDHL, Billings.

MARK TIME IN CONNERY MATTER

Washington, Jan. 28.

Showdown over demands for congressional probe of Federal Communications Commission activities is expected late this week.

With both the justice department and the five-man commish committee still digging into handling of radio applications and trying to get the truth about influence-buying allegations, congressional faction desiring to turn the heat on the regulatory body is waiting for the House rules committee to signify what stand will be taken on the proposal of Representative William P. Connery of Massachusetts that a select investigating committee shall be created to look into charges of monopoly and favoritism.

Political opposition to the Connery investigation resolution appeared quickly last week as administration sought to prevent any scandal which would cast reflections. As this is campaign year, Democratic chieftains are reluctant to let the Connery proposition come before the House through fear that Republican members of an inquisitory body might try to exploit the probe for campaign purposes.

So far, Chairman John J. O'Connor of the rules committee has snubbed Connery, declining to grant any date for a hearing on the inquiry proposition. But the committee is due to meet this week, when Connery's friends will demand that some action be taken on the whole matter.

Efforts to obtain the consent of Speaker Byrns and other Democratic chiefs are being made by leaders of the faction which has assailed the commish over a period of several months.

With Connery slated to be chairman, if the inquiry committee ever is created, members of the House already are talking about the identity of the remaining probers. Resolution calls for three Democrats and two Republicans, but it is understood the measure may be amended to authorize a seven-man committee, with four Dems and three G.O.P.'s. This arrangement would permit representation for every section of the country, Connery being chosen from the Atlantic seaboard, and the other three Democrats coming from the middle west, Pacific coast and south.

Walter King Sponsored

Walter Woolf King, lead in current Broadway show 'May Wine,' signed by Socony-Vacuum Oil for 13 weeks for fuel air show. Starts in about a week.

Zeppo Marx agency negotiated.

Armstrong's Star Line-Up

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Guest stars of Louella Parsons for next four weeks on Hollywood Hotel have been set by F. Wallis Armstrong agency. Leading off next Friday (31) are Edward Arnold, Lee Tracy and Binnie Barnes in a bit from 'Sutter's Gold.' Following week brings to mike Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea and Bonita Granville, doing sequence from 'These Three.'

Skeded for Feb. 21 are Irvin S. Cobb and Rochelle Hudson in 'Everybody's Old Man.' Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterseen follow with scene from 'The Country Doctor.'

Robert C. Williams, heretofore with Benton & Bowles, added to the commercial continuity division of Young & Rubicam's radio department.

Republican Radio 'News' Service

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Late last week the Republican National Congressional Committee headquarters in the Capital sent letters to many broadcasters throughout country offering a 'news service' (by mail) to whatever stations may want it. Form letters included a copy of Section 317, FCC Act of 1934, which reminds that if stations broadcast anything directly or indirectly paid for, they must announce fact by naming the coin-donor.

Letters advise: From time to time a portion of this (weekly) column will give the Republican viewpoint of Washington happenings. However, it will contain informative matter of general interest to members of all parties and persons who desire sidelights what is happening.'

And that quotation about states situation as may be gauged from the initial column of 'news' sent out. Comments are made on half a dozen phases of the national Government of pertinent, topical value. There is not so much as a tittle of direct Republican propaganda in the whole quarter-hour-full of chatter. Stuff is, however, shrewd amalgamation of slightly old and fairly w.k. spot news which press generally has carried. Patently, there is nothing favorable to the New Deal in the copy, but by same token about as bitter a condemnation as appears is a remark that taxes are going to be increased. And the surmise as to what the national debt will be at end of current fiscal year is a figure far under that pegged by many another New Deal opponent.

All in all, this new Republican idea of air propaganda is shrewder and more subtle than those dramatized skits which evoked such hooting when initially broadcast fortnight ago over WGN, Chicago.

GEORGIA GOVERNOR APPEASED BY CBS

Atlanta, Jan. 28.

Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, Thursday (23) dropped plan to mandamus Federal Communications Commission to allow broadcasting of Grass Roots convention (Anti-Roosevelt Democrats) in Macon, Jan. 29, by a Mexican radio station. Action followed agreement by CBS to use a half hour of the convention proceedings over a national hookup.

Morris A. Bealle, editor Plain Talk, had prepared mandamus action on theory that FCC planned to pigeonhole application to have sessions telephoned to Mexican station, then broadcast throughout United States.

Governor recently criticized both NBC and CBS for their purported refusal to broadcast meeting.

CBS hookup scheduled from 1:15 to 1:45 p.m. (E.S.T.) Jan. 29

Stephenson Quits CBS

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Couple of changes in the sales and program departments at Columbia and WBBM here take place this week. Bob Stephenson, who has been head of the local offices of the CBS Radio Sales company, resigned after several years with the organization. Stephenson is understood to be headed for the coast for a sales connection with a regional group of stations. Bill Williamson will fill the Stephenson spot here.

Cecil Widdifield, who has been in charge of sales service for CBS-WBBM for some months, is out. Understood to be lining up with a local agency. No replacement contemplated for Widdifield at CBS.

'CROSSROADS' WILLS, WONT'S CANVASSED

National Republican Committee may be able to use the major part of the Mutual Network for a series of live dramatic broadcasts. Committee's radio director, Charles Sabin, has asked the New York office of Mutual to find out what stations will be willing to carry the 'Liberty at the Crossroads' program, with the understanding the committee is willing to take as many releases as are made available providing there won't in any case be an added charge for lines.

Here's how stations, which take the Mutual service either regularly or occasionally, reacted to the Republican committee's quest:

WOR, New York: Has adopted the policy established by NBC and Columbia and will under no circumstances broadcast dramatic programs sponsored by a political party or candidate.

WLW, Cincinnati: Prefers to defer making a decision, principally to see what attitude the other outlets on the network take.

WCAE, Pittsburgh: Wants to discuss the policy angle with the higher-ups in the Hearst organization, and if there is no objection from this source it's okay with the station.

WGAR, Cleveland: Has indicated a willingness to take the series.

CKLW, Detroit: Will accept the business.

Yankee Network: Replied that it is willing to release the programs not only over WNAC, Boston, the key outlet, but WEAN, Providence, and WICC, Bridgeport, which John Shepard, 3rd, also owns and operates.

WGN, Chicago: Mutual's other basic station, was the first to accept and broadcast the 'Liberty at the Crossroads' programs. Tribune mouthpiece had several weeks previous put into effect a pay-as-you-go policy for political time. In the past the Trib had taken the viewpoint that political broadcasts, providing they were interesting, were of public interest and should receive gratis clearance.

Nate Tufts to Chi

Nate Tufts, radio man in the Ruthrauff & Ryan home office, is temporarily joining the agency's Chicago office for a few weeks to get three new live talent shows launched for Kentucky Winners cigarettes.

Trio is slated for KMOX, St. Louis, and WGN and WBBM, both in Chicago. All programs to be sportscasts, with Bob Elson doing the spieling via WGN and Pat Flanagan via WBBM.

MacKenzie to KPDN

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

Bob MacKenzie is resigning as client service manager of WJAY after a stay of seven months.

Will become manager of KPDN, Pampa (Tex.), owned and operated by the Pampa Daily News.

YANKEE AGENCY IN FRANCE

Runyon's Coast Trip Spurs Rumors; Involves Lee, McClatchey Groups

departure Mefford Runyon, CBS treasurer, for the westcoast last week has aroused a series of speculations not only among broadcasters in that area but in competitive network circles. Belief in quarters is that Runyan will come back with either a contract binding the Don Lee Network to Columbia for another period of years or agreements which will have KMPC, Los Angeles, and KFSO, San Francisco, as the network's substitute allies in those two cities. CBS's program clearing deal with Don Lee expires this August.

Of important moment in the westcoast situation is the reported demand of the McClatchy newspaper and station group for a change in status on the CBS rate cards. Outlets controlled by the McClatchy syndicate have been rated as bonus stations, as far as the network's card is concerned, while they have a definite schedule of payment with Don Lee. McClatchy now wants a rate schedule to be set aside for each of its stations on both the Don Lee and CBS rate cards. Stations in the McClatchy group are KFBK, Sacramento, 5,000 watts; KWG, Stockton, 100 watts; KMJ, Fresno, 5,000 watts, and KERN, Bakersfield, 100 watts.

Richards' Option

A six-months' option on KMPC, Los Angeles, was recently taken by G. A. Richards, who also controls WJR, Detroit, and has a major interest in WGAR, Cleveland. KMPC is on the same channel with WOR, Newark, and the impression in broadcast circles is that WOR will make no objections to KMPC bidding for full time if it develops that the latter's night time signal will offer no interference with that of the Newark outlet. KFSO, San Francisco, has a 90-day experimental alliance with KNX, Los Angeles, with a permanent line connecting the two stations and the latter outlet doing most of the program feeding.

It was also reported following Runyan's departure that CBS may make a partnership offer for the Don Lee Network, with Richards, who has a home in lower California and spends a major part of his time there, serving as the operating link. This report was pretty much discounted by those close to the Don Lee situation. Latter pointed out that Tommy Lee has declared himself as determined to maintain the independence of the network as a memorial to his father.

LESLIE HOWARD REP SUES ON % SPLIT-UP

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

William Morris agency has been made defendant in action brought by Henry Sherwin, Leslie Howard's radio rep, in which he seeks an accounting of monies received by agency on Howard's broadcasts for Hind's Honey and Almond Cream.

Sherwin alleges he was to have received 50% of commish. Howard received $3,500 a broadcast, with Morris agency allegedly taking $500 of this amount. Howard has made 15 airings and has 11 more to go, according to the complaint.

Grace Moore on G. M.

Grace Moore is pacted for appearance on the General Motors show over NBC for March 22, being the last singer signed for this series. Date was kept open by sponsors, until diva's present Vicks' contract expired on March 11.

Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, ends the second 13-week G.M. series on March 29.

F. C. Schang, Jr., of Columbia Concerts handled the Moore date.

Announcers $12.50 Wk.

tation in New Jersey has a set starting wage of $12.50 a week for announcers. If the spieler proves satisfactory, he has a chance of getting a boost to $15.

Job entails working seven days a week at the rate of seven hours each day.

SPONSOR'S 40 HOURS W'KLY ON WHN

Adam Hat Company has 40 hours of time under contract each week with Station WHN, New York City. This is believed to be far and away the largest single purchase of time by one advertiser from one station in the 16 year history of American broadcasting.

Supplementing the nightly five-hour owl program which runs from 11:30 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. and accounts for 35 hours of commercial time weekly Adam Hat is now inaugurating a series of boxing broadcasts four nights a week from such sports arenas as the Broadway, Olympic (Philadelphia), Ridgewood Grove and St. Nicholas. That accounts for another five hours.

Still another hour, a Sunday afternoon program not yet fully worked out between the station and the sponsor may hike the total to 41 hours weekly.

JOHN ELLWOOD WITH G.O.P. RADIO DEPT.

Expansion of the radio personnel of the Republican National Committee is under way, with a couple of former web execs slated to join the G.O.P. brigade end of this month. Newcomers are John Ellwood and Keith McLeod.

Ellwood, until Sept., 1933, was an NBC vice-president and subsequently has helped with the radio end of the Will Rogers memorial fund and the President's birthday ball. Full title for his new functions is 'manager of the eastern office of the radio division of the National Republican Committee.' Thomas Sabin remains G.O.P. national radio chief.

McLeod, erstwhile NBC music man and later identified with WFIL, Philly, is being assigned program supervising. Both newcomers skedded to work out of New York.

WNOX Gets Clergymen Up at 5:30 A.M.—They Don't Like It

Knoxville, Jan. 28.

WNOX, Knoxville station recently added to the Scripps-Howard chain, has boosted its broadcasting time to 19½ hours daily, keeping it on the air longer than any other station in Tennessee. Schedule now begins at 5:30 a.m. and continues until one a.m.

Listeners like it, but Knoxville ministers have given several loud squawks. First broadcast daily is morning devotional service, and clergymen who are guest preachers object to the early rising. Six was bad enough, they say, but 5:30 is enough to aggravate the soul of a saint.

PARIS EXCITED BY 'INVASION'

Lord & Thomas Sends Radio Production Man to Put On Commercial Program — Plenty of Local Difficulties Face Don Forker of real commercial programs in France and a consequent revolution of local radio biz is seen as possible result of visit here of Don E. of Lord and Thomas, to put on the first French commercial broadcast with American methods.

Forker was sent here from New Yor because no one in the Paris office of Lord and Thomas has any radio experience. A purely local account—Cadum Soap—wanted to use the air. Although this one account was not sufficient to justify sending a man from America to put on the program, the agency felt that it was a chance to teach the French branch something about the business for future use, and hence Forker came.

Cadum program will begin Feb. 4 with half an hour, once a week, from Poste Parisien, leading non-government station. Agency would like to put it over a nationwide hookup, but there are plenty of snags, mostly legal. There are about half a dozen non-government regional stations in France, including a couple of pretty big ones such as Radio Normandie and Radio Toulouse, which could put on a commercial program. Only the Communications Administration, which controls both government radio and land phone wires, has a rule against carrying commercials, even over the land wires, so there's no way of hooking up a network unless the rule can be set aside or got around.

Figuring out his program, Forker hit plenty of local difficulties, due to primitiveness of local radio, which still remains, in spite of improvement of the last year or so. First thought of an amateur hour, as a successful type of American program, but the only purees available here were so terrible he had to give this up. And Frenchmen want to be paid. Then looked for humor, but local comedy, he found, usually has a political or off-color tinge, and is likely to offend someone. He finally turned to the friendly type of program introducer, and he thinks he has the right local man in the shape of one Jean Sablon. This is the only talent definitely booked.

Most useful tips he figures he can give the French office is advice on where to put the microphone so as to get balance from an orchestra, etc., and also dope on keeping holes out of a program. He finds that normally the natives don't pay attention to such details—just let the sound hit the mike anyway chance wills, and the program rolls along in haphazard fashion.

French Excited

hose of the French trade who know about his presence are all excited over the revolution in their methods, and particularly over the fact that an American agency is introducing real commercial radio. They think the results can be terrific.

Forker expects to leave for England as soon as he gets the Cadum program started. Before that, however, he may make arrangements for broadcasts to America, either from French stations or via Geneva. Latter is preferable, for Geneva works two ways and can come in on signal instead of time agreement, as is necessary with one-way French stations, but land-wire transmission difficulty enters into Geneva broadcast.

Irony

One minute announcements preceding or following sustaining programs often confuse listeners.

Nellie Revell has been receiving notes from fans congratulating her on landing a sponsor and declaring they are using the sponsor's product!

Advertiser in question has blurbs at both ends of the Revell program. Nellie gets nothing.

KING'S DEATH KILLS COMEDY IN CANADA

Radio stations in Canada made special efforts carry news of death of King George V and subsequent ceremonies. Canadian Radio Commission flash of death direct from British Broadcasting Co. at Sandringham, Eng. Most stations in Canada went off the air Jan. 20 immediately after the word was received at 5:55 p.m., M.S.T. CJRM did not broadcast following morning.

Practically all Saskatchewan stations put on memorial programs and otherwise cancelled anything that might jar with mourning. Stations operated at 3 a.m. Jan. 22 to bring broadcast of ceremonies marking accession to British throne of King Edward VIII.

Commission opened its evening's programs with Blattner-phone recording of the event. CJRM was refused this as not being a regular station of the CRC network. Howls of protest from station brought no result. Vic Nielsen, station manager, went on air; explained Commission's refusal and suggested fans tune CHAB or CHWC, which were carrying it.

Newspapers howled about radio broadcasts of King's death but could do nothing. Sale of extras badly cut by radio flashes.

Radio Commission toned down all of its programs, taking off any with humor and hot music. Gentleman Jim (R. E. Guy, Winnipeg) humor show taken off Jan. 23 for concert trio; Jean Sinclair, blues singer, removed from Chasing Shadows (Moose Jaw) and Bob Forrest, baritone, substituted. Rhythm Rebels off for Herb Saddler, organist. Freshmen, Regina quartet doing Mills Bros. stunt, off for Jean Sahlmark, pianist. Live, Laugh and Love program from Winnipeg Jan. 24, turned concert music instead of usual comedy. Fiesta from Vancouver killed for concert program. Ghost Walker, murder story, off for ladies' choir from Trail, B. C. Three Guitars off Regina for Al Smith, concert pianist. Saturday night, Jan. 25, Western Dance Parade embracing orchestras from Winnipeg to Vancouver off for half-hour organ program from Regina with Cyril Hampshire, and second half-hour from Vancouver by concert ensemble. Network closed down at 11 p.m. instead of midnight. Bass fiddle, drums and other oompah in Chasing Shadows taken out leaving only Calgary piano team, Sunday, Jan. 26. Mart Kenny orchestra from Vancouver eliminated all but old waltz numbers. Other programs also changed style. Monday, Jan. 27 saw Farmer Fiddlers from Saskatoon off for Arthur Bates, organist. Ten-Thirty Telegram from Edmonton off for concert program. Tuesday, day of funeral, network remained closed all night.

Minor Changes in Identification Requirements on Wax Are Due

Washington, Jan.

Present stringent rule requiring frequent announcements of electrical transcriptions and phonograph probably will be lightened slightly by Federal Communications Commission but will not be modified to the quested by broadcasters.

While no final decision has been reached, commission is said to have tentatively agreed on a new regulation midway between the present rule and what station operators want. Text is entirely unsatisfactory to union musicians, who protested vigorously some months back against any change in the existing code.

The suggested compromise, which has been given informal okay, would waive the requirement of announcements at least every 15 minutes in exceptional cases so that half-hour or hour programs would not have to be interrupted repeatedly by explanations that wax music is being used. This exception would cover only certain types of programs where continuity would be harmed by the periodic announcements.

Otherwise, the present rule probably will stand as is, with one possible minor change. Commish code now stipulates that announcements must precede each separate mechanical reproduction, except where transcriptions for a single continuous program are made on more than one disc. Under the proposed modification, five-minute announcements would be sufficient, with added leeway given by retaining the present regulation that the public must be informed every 15 minutes, except for unusual circumstances where effect would be marred by interruptions in the middle of the period.

Spitalny Gets Zotos Account Sans Audition

Phil Spitalny with his 35-piece girl orchestra returns to the air Feb. 23 over 81 Columbia stations in a coast-to-coaster for Zotos, chemicals permanent hairwaver product developed by Neal Andrews of Sales Affiliates (Marinello-Incco-Notox). irl orchestra was figured a natural showmanship tie-up for the product by Andrews.

Unique angle of deal is that Spitalny got the contract without making a single audition. Sponsor has previously advertised certain products on spot broadcasting but this is maiden venture on a pretentious network scale.

Spitalny will do a half hour program Sundays at six p.m. EST. Grey agency handled.

Doc Levy Back

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Dr. Leon Levy, WCAU and KYW prexy, returned last week from Florida, where he'd been convalescing after appendectomy.

Carol Irwin's Job

Carol Irwin, formerly with Pedlar & Ryan agency and before that program manager of KYW, Philadelphia, has been named head of the creative end of Lennen & Mitchell's radio department.

Will work on the Whiteman stanza specifically, with other shows also on the assignment list.

New WKY Studios

Oklahoma City, Jan. 28.

On April 1, station WKY will move into its own new studios in the Skirvin Tower hotel. Last word in radio studio equipment in this part of the country.

Building was constructed around the studio plans, with the WKY tenancy having been figured right from the start of the blue-printing. Probably the first time that a hotel has been built around a radio studio.

CANNED NOISE 'INDUSTRY'

Hear NBC to Move WOWO, Ft. Wayne, Near Chicago as Protective Move

lated acquisition of WOWO and WGL, Fort Wayne, Ind., by NBC (through Westinghouse) is regarded in New York broadcast circles as presaging one of the shrewdest series of wavelength manipulation that the industry has experienced in recent years. Out of these maneouvers NBC, it is believed, will emerge solidly esconced in the Chicago area and fully protected against any threat of a breakaway by WLS, the Prairie Farmer's outlet which shares the clear channel 870 k.c. with WENR.

Impression prevailing in radio is that NBC proposes, after the Federal Communications Commission has approved the sale of the two Fort Wayne stations, to ask for permission to move WOWO to Gary, Ind., and also effect a deal with WWV Wheeling, W. Va., which will result in the latter outlet moving to another frequency and thereby give WOWO the standing of a full time clear channel station. Under the present setup WOWO shares time with the Wheeling transmitters, with each licensed to operate at 10,000 watts. With WOWO allowed to call Gary its new home, the next step would be to give the station a Chicago program originating source, as Ralph Atlass has done in the case of WIND.

Still in Indiana

So long as WGL remained in Fort Wayne objectors to the transfer of WOWO could not contend that this move would leave the town without service. Nor could any one in applying for new facilities in Indiana contend that the state has been deprived of parts of its broadcast quota. WOWO's 10,000 watts could still be counted against Indiana's allotment.

In the juggling around of wavelength positions WOWO might be moved over 1,180 k.c., on the Portland, Ore., end of which channel is located KEX, NBC owned and operated and thereby receive full time status, while WWVA would likely wind up sharing the 1,160 frequency with KOB, Albuquerque. WOWO and KEX are far enough away to operate simultaneously. Under such circumstances NBC would have two full time allocations of its own in the Chicago area, the other being WMAQ.

NBC has experienced considerable difficulty in renewal negotiations in the past with WLS, with the network being forced to make particularly heavy concessions in deal which was consummated two years ago.

NAB NEGRO

with Extortion Try on Jules Alberti

Judge Nathan D. Pearlman, sitting in the new Felony Court in the Criminal Courts bldg., N. Y., held John Days, Jr., 23, and colored, without bail on extortion charges rising from a $1,000 allegedly attempted extortion upon Jules Alberti, showman. Days' wife was formerly employed as a domestic in the household of the radio and theatrical manager.

Days is alleged to have visited Alberti's office, at 515 Madison avenue, and at the point of a pistol demanded $1,000. Upon advice of Julius Kendler, Alberti's counsel, a rendezvous for $100 in cash was arranged at 54th street and Lexington avenue at 7 p.m., Thursday night (23), when two detectives from the East 51st street station took Days in charge.

Hinkle Out, Foster In

Frank Foster appointed publicity chief at WINS, New York, to succeed Fred Hinkle who is resigning.

Hinkle came in from Hearst newspaper org two months ago to replace Edythe Messer and who had been with WINS through six changes of management.

Research

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 28.

How to overcome dearth of program material has been figured out here by Hines Hatchette, manager of WGAL. Hatchette conducts a sustainer on safety, and after running the stanza awhile has found his stuff ebbing.

Solution has been to invite the chief of police, commissioner of safety, auto club prexy and civic leaders to a weekly feed at local chophouse. Boys sit around eating and discussing accidents and how to avoid 'em. Hatchette takes notes on the chatter and then whips it into a script.

All it costs him is the price of the gang's lunch.

REVISE TEXAS MAP FOR BLUE NBC WEB?

As part of its expansion campaign for the blue (WJZ) network, NBC has under consideration the splitting up of the Texas affiliates into two groups. Plan involves assigning WFAA, Dallas, and KPRC, Houston, to the blue, and making KGKO the Fort Worth release for this supplementary. Hearing on KGKO's application for a transfer from Wichita Falls to Houston was held in these two towns yesterday (Tuesday) and the day before.

Lineup for the red (WEAF) link in this area would include WBAP, Fort Worth; WOAI, San Antonio, and KXYZ, Houston. In the case of the last it would be a new affiliation.

Congressman Calls F.C.C. Examiner Biased in Labor Union Appeal

Washington, Jan. 28.

Complaints that labor groups have been the target of discrimination in attempting to obtain broadcasting franchises were made in Congress Friday (24) by Representative Byron N. Scott of California.

Appealing for support for a series of bills outlawing censorship, providing for non-profit broadcasting, and compelling stations to report refusals to sell time, Scott charged that Examiner P. W. Seward arbitrarily discriminated against union labor forces seeking to erect a station in Southern California.

Seward was accused of arbitrarily refusing to permit the Los Angeles labor council to become a party in the case of Metro Broadcasting Co., applicant for a new station. Congressman Scott protested that the F.C.C. examiner declined to accept in evidence a cashier's check for $10,000, an assignment from the Metro Broadcasting Co. to the L.A. labor council, a lease for the proposed transmitter site, and other data intended to show that the station would be financially sound and well-managed.

Noting that the application was turned down, the California Representative bluntly asserted that Examiner Seward 'is against labor.'

SOUND EFFECTS ENCIRCLE GLOBE

Love Call of Cincinnati Hippopotamus Among the Items Sold Internationally on Platters — Trimmings for Radio Programs the World Over Becomes Radio's Only Universal Commodity

HOOTS AND MOOS

Cows moo, owls hoot, rooks gurgle pretty much the same the world over. Authentic moos from New Jersey holsteins recorded on American discs can be sold and used anywhere. Upon this fact is based the recent emergence of a new international sound effects 'industry' within broadcasting. Canned noises have become a universally marketable commodity for international radio.

One American sound effects company, Gennett Records, reports the international market for American-made cow moos, owl hoots and brook gurgles is booming. So much so that the company finds it profitable to keep a traveling representative, Tom Valentino, working the far corners of the globe. He goes out again soon heading for the Caribbean ports and South America. Just recently back from Europe.

Reason for the boomlet is attributed to improvements in radio transmission and reception as well as the spread in foreign lands of more elaborate script shows. Higher levels of program showmanship are now typical. Platter gang has tied its sales palaver to these developments, and talks quality to the bigger stations and cheapness to the indies. Indie stations, American and non-American and foreign outlets are the biggest customers for sound effects. Can't afford live sound men and props so they buy the discs at $2 a throw plus 5% tax. Webs also doing plenty of buying, using the recordings to supplement their sound men's repertoire. (Incidentally, sound effects discs are the only recordings allowed in the American chains).

Biz is all the more lucrative because there aren't as yet many contenders for the coin. Gennett Records does the biggest volume, with RCA picking up some orders here and there. Foreign competish practically limited to one German company. Upbeat in take from radio, however, makes competition from new companies a future probability. Gennett is currently trying to protect its stake by adding 10 new noises to its catalog every month, thus trying to impress by sheer size.

Hissing Badgers

Catalog all told now contains about 500 discs, most of them cut from the real life McCoy. Prize newcomer to the collection is the love call of a hippopotamus in the Cincinnati zoo. Other choice samples: badger hissing; cows mooing and calves bawling; driving rails; hog calling contest; putting out a fire; tuning a piano; walking in wet sand and gravel.

Biggest foreign takers for this kind of thing are England, France and Belgium. Governments run the stations there and consider it pretty swank to get fancy types of rackets into the 'educational' broadcasts. Looks like the sound effects biz is one type of showmanship that has a common language all the way around the globe.

Michael Fitzmaurice leads band in Republic's film, 'House of a Thousand Candles.' After all these years of announcin them on KHJ, Los Angeles.

L. A. Times readying appeal of $2,501 judgment to KNX for libelous editorial.

NBC in 1935 Paid $2,400,000 A.T.&T. Tolls; CBS, $1,800,000; $84 a Mile on Far West Loops

PAULIST CASE STILL BIG PUZZLE

Washington, Jan. 28.

Protracted fight of Paulist Fathers for full-time radio station in New York flared again last week when Federal Communications Commission was petitioned to immediately revoke special experimental licenses of stations KWKH, Shreveport, and WWL, New Orleans.

With projected nine-station shakeup conceived by Father John P. Harney still on the griddle, commish sidetracked the latest plea by owners of New York's WLWL until briefs, due Feb. 1, have been submitted by various parties to the many-angled fight. Members of broadcast division are reported perplexed by the latest turn the long tiff has taken.

In trying to clear the way for favorable action on their request for full time on 810 kc., involving facilities of WNYC, New York, and WCCO, Minneapolis, Paulists charged that special grants to the two Louisiana stations are interfering with other broadcasters. Noting that Commish reserves right to recall experimental authorizations at any time for cause, Paulists insisted WWL be reduced to specified hours on the 850 channel and KWKH be forced to stop broadcasting on 1100.

The two Louisiana stations are supposed to share 850, and the New York group contends that the special arrangement prevents its station from getting franchises to which it is entitled.

Whole problem was gone into last summer and fall when the Broadcast Division, not wishing to turn the complicated mess over to an examiner, spent several days listening to evidence pertaining to 13 applications for license renewals and modifications. Deadline on rebuttal briefs is the end of the month, but indications are the touchy problem will not be disposed of for many weeks yet.

Toledo May Go NBC

Toledo, Jan. 28.

WSPD, Toledo, may switch its affiliation from Columbia to NBC's blue (WJZ) trail. George Storer, major owner of the Toledo outlet, has been approached on NBC on the proposition. His contract with CBS, though not expiring until May 1, 1936, contains one of those 30-day cancellation clauses, which may be exercised by either party.

Since tieing up with WJR, Detroit, CBS has been light in its sale of network commercials for release over WSPD. Toledo has always been without a blue outlet.

Pete Dixon, Kenyon & Eckhardt radio chief, grabbed a boat for an 18-day Caribbean cruise when the cold wave hit New York on Thursday (23).

NBC expects to establish a new high in 1936 for telephone line payments. Major part of the boost will be due to the two loops that the network has now running to the west coast from Omaha, plus th charge entailed in the constant hookup of the blue (WJZ) link's own Pacific supplementary. Other added tolls will derive from the eight stations that are figured to be added to the blue trail this side of the Rockies during the current year.

Line which connects the Omaha end of the blue link with the second Pacific group of supplementaries will, on the basis of $84 a mile, mean an annual bill of around $130,000 in itself. There is then the cost of looping up the stations in the blue group along the Pacific area, which figures around $125,000, while every time that a network adds a station it has a bookkeeping item of $4,400 a year for lines. With eight added to the blue setup east of the Rockies, the debit to the American Telephone Co. will take an additional jump of $126,000. Altogether NBC's increase for connecting wires this year will, it is estimated, be at least $400,000.

NBC's line bill from the A. T. & T. last year was $2,400,000, as compared to $2,150,000 for 1934, while Columbia went up $200,00 as compared to the $1,600,000 it paid in 1934 for hookup facilities.

MORE STIPULATIONS AFFECT STATIONS

Washington, Jan. 28.

Federal Trade Commission's radio cleanup crusade assumed wholesale proportions last week as 20 stipulations to drop certain offensive programs were initialed by 17 stations throughout the nation.

Three programs carried by KNX, Hollywood, and two aired by WHDH, Boston, were on the list, with the remainder of the stations agreeing to quit carrying one offensive blurb each. Stations promising to obey Commish ban are:

WAAB, Boston; WFAB, New York; WEFB, Buffalo; WHDH, Boston; WDRC, Hartford; WDBO, Orlando, Fla.; KSTP, St. Paul; WGES, Chicago; WGAR, Cleveland; KNX, Hollywood; WTMJ, Milwaukee; WFBC, Greenville, S. C.; WBAP, Fort Worth; KEX, Portland, Ore.; WFLA, Clearwater, Fla.; WHK, Cleveland, and KGW, Portland, Ore.

Five stations agreed to desist from broadcasting 'misleading' advertising of Katro-Lek Laboratories, Inc., Boston. Other blurbs condemned as deceptive were used by the following advertisers:

Clark Bros. Chewing Gum Co., Pittsburgh; Brossier Twin's Laboratories, Orlando, Fla.; L. W. Palusek, Chicago (Vervena Co.); Cleveland Regol Co.; Freedol Remedy Co., Boston; Wain's Laboratory, Inc., Los Angeles; Smith Bros., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; M. L. Clein & Co., Atlanta; Hydrat Distributing Co., Fort Worth, Esbencott Laboratories, Portland, Ore.; Clinic of the Air, Oakland, Calif.; Smad Co., Pasadena, Calif.; Litmo Laboratories, Orlando, Fla.; Santiseptic Lotion, Portland, Ore.

WFBR, Balto., to Move

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Station WFBR, local NBC outlet, readying to move out of its quarters in the Chesapeake Bank building later this year and will establish studios in its own building, probably in a private home. WCAO, Columbia station here, has its offices and studios in an old southern-type mansion.

WFBR, however, will continue with one studio in the downtown sector. Now completing arrangements for such a studio in the Lord Baltimore hotel.

Canadian Broadcasters Draw Code of Ethics, Mull Music Problems at Toronto Meeting

Toronto,

Action on the part of the federal authorities in taking cognizance of the Judge Parker recommendations regarding the copyright situation and the appointment of an appeal tribunal to pass decision on disputes arising out of tariffs levied by the Canadian Performing Rights Society will be sought immediately by owners and operators of Canada's independent stations, following the two-day convention here at the Royal York hotel last week of coast-to-coast delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

It was promised by spokesmen of the Liberal administration that the suggestions of Judge Parker, following his chairmanship of the Royal Commission probe into the activities of CPRS, collection agency in Canada for ASCAP, would be carried out before the end of 1935. So far, the situation is still in abeyance, this now accentuated by the withdrawal of the Warner Bros. repertory. WB has asked Canadian stations to take out a special license for the use of the WB list, this based on a temporary scale for three months' duration until WB set their house in order. So far, WB have not filed their repertory list with the federal authorities at Ottawa nor has their tariff scale been registered.

Until the appointment of the tribunal, chaos is expected to continue. When Judge Parker set the 8c a receiving set fee as adequate compensation to CPRS from the radio music users, this was based on the alleged control of what the Society claimed at various times as 2,500,000-3,000,000 works, although the records re-

NBC, CBS Growl As Mutual Gets Royal Funeral

Mutual Network obtained permission from the British Broadcasting Company to rebroadcast the funeral of King George yesterday (Tuesday) despite the objections interposed by NBC and Columbia. Latter webs had contended it was unfair to let Mutual pick up its service on the event from the Canadian Radio Commission's shortwave pick-up because they (NBC, CBS) had to pay for all they got from abroad.

In the representation to BBC the two major American webs argued that Mutual shouldn't be considered a network. NBC and Columbia held that they were not only under expense in transmitting programs to the British system, but were obligated to pay RCA $50 a connection plus $10 per minute every time they picked up the shortwave version of a BBC program. Another point made by NBC and CBS was that they maintained representatives in Europe to contact BBC on program exchanges and that this cost should also be considered.

Mutual has been getting in on the broadcasts from England through a special connection permitted it at Windsor, Ontario, by the CRC. Latter's shortwave receiving apparatus is at Ottawa.

Lincoln News Huddles

Lincoln, Jan. 28.

Newspaper-radio dealings here for another news service for the KFAB, KOIL, and KFOR outlets, to replace Trans-Radio, is still in the fire. Stations have the Associated Press signed, but the AP news can't be sold for sponsorship, hence a contract for United Press was submitted, and was turned down this week.

Ether and newspaper gang goes into a huddle again this week and will give International News Service further consideration. Links are understood to want UP, because it feeds their big air competition WOW, in Omaha.

Reading 'Variety'

New Haven, Jan. 28.

Ben Cohen, manager of the College theatre here, has a radio program over Station WELI under the nom de radio of Bob Kelly. Program is called 'Reading VARIETY.'

It's just that—news of the atricals taken verbatim from this publication.

20 CITIES ON SMITH TOUR

Tabulation CBS shows that Kate Smith's p.a. tour for A&P, in connection with the latter's coffee drive and radio program, has resulted in 100,000 free admissions in the first seven cities on the itinerary. Spots were Detroit, Boston, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Cleveland.

Warbler still has 20 places to hit before spring when the free amusement stint is slated to end. Played in Louisville last week.

WNOX, Knoxville, Busy; New Bosses Take Over

Knoxville, Jan. 28.

Since passing under Scripps-Howard ownership Station WNOX has been buzzing. Payroll is up and new faces are numerous. A 14-piece Hill Billy band has been acquired for regular daily spot, and the following programs have been started:

One-hour dramatization by staff of five of Scripps-Howard comic strips each Sunday, from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.

Club calendar daily at 9:50 a.m. by former newspaper society editor.

'Let's Dance' program from 11:30 p.m. to closing time that is already averaging 300 telephone calls for requests. Heavy switchboard load necessitated hiring two additional operators.

Gossip program with incognito debutante handing out the dirt innocuously is slated to begin any day. Name of deb being carefully guarded. Routine will get strict censorship before it hits the air waves.

New on the WNOX staff are Lowell Blanchard, announcer and master of ceremonies; Ralph French and Robert Lee Hopkins on business end; Bob Anderson, former WNOX announcer as salesman.

Roland Weeks and Fred Shepherd left sales dept. a few days ago.

RICKER PROMOTED

Staff Changes at WXYZ Include New Manager

Detroit, Jan. 28.

Considerable shifting about of WXYZ personnel the past week, topped by naming of studio manager to replace Brace Beemer, who several weeks ago was upped to assistant general manager under H. Allan Campbell, in downtown offices.

G. J. G. Bicker, who came from New York recently to become WXYZ's production manager, is now studio manager and likewise will direct all WXYZ, Michigan net and C. R. C. programs originating in local station.

Nancy Osgood, one of first woman announcers in country, has joined WXYZ Players. She formerly worked in Philadelphia and the Yankee web, and her husband, Richard Osgood, is a continuity writer at WXYZ. Al Hodge, recently with Wired Radio in Cleveland, also has been signed as continuity writer and also will have leading role in a new mystery drama, 'The Hornet.' Also signed for part in new mystery is Raymond Toyo, native Japanese, who will be the Nipponese butler in drama. His real name is Tokutaro Hayashi, and has been appearing in commercial pix produced here.

Eddie Denkema, who left WOOD-WASH, Grand Rapids, a year ago to join staff at WRZO, Kalamazoo, returned again to WOOD-WASH last week to announce and work in continuity and program departments of stations.

Sponsor-Agencies

'Couple Next Door,' script formerly sponsored by Holland Furnace but now sustaining on WGN, the Chicago Tribune station, is making a heavy play for mail.

Hawk & Buck, work clothes manufacturers, has entered radio advertising field with a quarter-hour weekly stint via Texas Quality Net. Talent is hillbilly.

Minuterub (Bristol-Myers) has added WGAR, Cleveland, and WWJ, Detroit, to its spot list. It will in either case be a sports review. Young & Rubicam is the agency.

Grennan cake is dickering for time with both Mutual and Columbia, with the latter offering to waive the recovery clause on a split network of eight stations.

Iear-Again (cold remedy) planning a campaign through the Schwimmer & Scott agency, Chicago, with radio contemplated.

Health Products Corp. (Feen-a-mint) appointing A. McKim, Ltd., Toronto, as Canadian advertising agents, and planning a campaign in which radio gets an appropriation. The McKim appointment in no way changes Feen-a-mint's U. S. or English agency setup.

F.C.C. in 'Good Engineering' Drive; Radio Equipment Firms See Boom

Washington, Jan. 28.

tiffening engineering requirements, Federal Communications Commission last week revealed intention of conducting two station-to-station surveys to make sure that all U. S. broadcasters are living up to their obligation to maintain equipment in accordance with 'good engineering practice.' Move is expected to be a boon to equipment manufacturers.

With explanatory interpretation of the rules covering maintenance of transmitters, Commish gave all stations until next November to put their houses in order and conform with 'established' practices. Field inspectors will make thorough examinations of all stations in the near future, listing changes and improvements which must be made, and later paying a return call to see what action has been taken to carry out his orders and suggestions. All stations will be expected to have equipment cleaned up by Nov. 12.

Explaining that the objective is to improve broadcast reception and protect lives of station personnel, Commish laid down many specifications concerning the nature of installations, arrangement of equipment, and protective measures which must be taken, warning that no applications for new facilities will be considered unless the equipment conforms with good engineering practices.

WLVA's New Tower

Lynchburg, Va., Jan.

Permission is being sought by WLVA from the Federal Communications Commission to erect a 165-foot steel tower at the station's transmitter. The outfit already has an okay from city council for putting down 70 strands of copper ground wire, 205 feet long. The lines will be buried a foot underground, and will cross several streets.

Tower was brought from defunct WREX in Roanoke.

NEW YORK RADIO PARADE

By Nellie Revell

Phil Lord's Actor Trouble

Phil Lord is having conflict trouble with his actors. He will use only the best actors and the best are always busiest. So he is not getting the best actors. For his half hour program Lord rehearses about 12 hours weekly, whereas the usual half hour program takes a maximum of three to four hours of practice. Of course Lord prices are still above the average. He pays $40 a show, which, tho' less than he was paying last year on 'G-Men,' is higher than any other program. However, his long rehearsals and insistence that the entire cast remain even tho' not in action, results in numerous conflicts. And since Lord will give no time off, a few actors have had to turn in their parts cause of a five-minute difference in making a rehearsal.

Film Auditions on Air Commercial

Hammerstein Music Hall of the Air program does not air on the West Coast. Yet this program frequently features singers being given an audition for pix by film executives listening to the program on the Coast with a representative of the film firm also in the studio audience. An announcement to this effect being made on the program. (Presumably the Coast catches the show via short-wave, or sumpin.) The artist being 'auditioned' gets nothing in the way of salary for the program. One of the artists recently heard on this program has a four times a week sustainer that airs coast to coast. Seemingly, this program would be much easier to tune in on the Coast.

Esso Reports King's Death

An example of good taste was displayed by Esso on their Esso-UP News flashes airing over NBC following the death of King George. A recent order from the sponsor called for the deletion of all commercial spiel on news flashes that carried the death of any world-wide persons. First use of this order came on the news flash carrying notice of death of the King. All commercial talk was cut with Esso being referred to only in the title which is the usual opening.

Wright and Dietrich on Air

Wright and Dietrich will be the old-time guest stars on the Hammerstein Music Hall of the Air over NBC on February 3. In the days of Hammerstein's Victoria theatre, Horace Wright, tenor, and his wife, Renee Dietrich, soprano, were vaudeville topnotchers and billed as the 'somewhat different singers.'

John Mason Uses Noodle

John H. Mason, CBS engineer assigned to the Lux theatre program, is the inventor of a microphone zoner. Mason, noting the time it took Director Tony Stanford each week to explain to the guest stars about voice placement and distance from the mike, drew a diagram showing areas and angles from the mike. Transferred to an ordinary 9x10 rug marked in white paint into sections denoting the best distances for pick-ups of 'close-ups,' 'tete-atete'; general room conversation, entrances and exits, etc., it saves everyone a lot of time beside making for better presentations.

Motors As Stations' Sugar Daddy

Extent of the platter biz now being placed by auto companies is such that station reps and electrical transcription houses are viewing the motor boys as one of the most promising cynosures of 1936. Four companies—Ford, Plymouth, Chevrolet, and Studebaker—are e.t. users at the present time, with Dodge slated to resume a schedule first of next month.

Chevy's list of stations comes to 383, with 95 of them getting five 15-minute programs weekly. Rest get three discs a week. Studebaker is using 80 stations, each being assigned 15-minute discs anywhere from three to five times weekly. Plymouth's campaign calls for 81 stations, with three 15-minute platters per week for three weeks.

Ford's station list comes to 32, but its billing has been cut due to changes in the Waring web show. Since the latter has been sliced from an hour into two half hours, the discs have likewise been cut from an hour apiece to a half hour. Reduces the billing by about one half.

Dodge's campaign not set yet. Is slated to be a resumption of dealer advertising such as was carried on last summer.

Panelmen Strike in San Antonio

Cite Alleged Violation of Wagner Labor Law—KABC Off Air Two Hours

San Antonio,

Attempt to mediate of KABC technicians hasn't reached rst base and five panelmen are out, with non-union men from Houston pulling the plugs. Station was off the air two hours when walkout oc-

trike was caused indirectly by subscribing to Transradio news. employed to take short wave matter also was to have worked on panel. Would have displaced ree men. All five technicians walked as a result. Filed charges contending violation of Wagner labor law, holding station execs refused to bargain collectively.

Joseph Myers, federal mediator from Washington, attempted to straighten things out After investigation he reported operators were locked out. Edwin Elliot of regional labor board now investigating the trouble expected to call a hearing shortly.

Report is two station owners favor bargaining with striker while a third is dead set against it. Station exec claims walkers damaged equi ment to extent of $100 when they scrammed. T. G. Sharp, biz manager of panelmen's union and one of trio allegedly locked out, denies this, claiming a station exec was present when statior went off air and could have seen damage, if any.

Station, owned by Alamo Broadcasting Company, penciled Transradio contract after WOAI switched to International News Service.

Strikers have been picketing Texas theatre building in which studios are located. Dailies, ordinarily cold to radio and all its ramifications, taking notice of the situation.

Perry Charles Lay Off

Perry Charles who's been doing Itty Bitty Kiddy Hour over WHN, York, for past year, may exit for a spell, to catch up on gags. Finds himself repeating.

He'd like to percolate for two months.

WHN AMATEURS FROM THEATRE

Deal has been worked out between Louis K. Sidney of Station WHN, New York, and the Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency whereby the WHN Amateurs, probably the oldest continuous simon pure session in broadcasting, will originate from the stage of the Ziegfeld theatre, New York. Phillips Magnesia has just succeeded Schenley Whiskey as sponsor of the program. New set-up starts Feb. 4.

Sponsor will get no free ducats. Admission to the theatre that night will be at regular box office admission (50 cents) and the amateurs will be an added attraction to the usual straight picture policy. Jay C. Flippen continues as program m. c. Will run full hour from theatre.

Telephone voting on the program will be handled as previously through the 30 odd trunk lines in the Loew-Metro offices. Tabulations will be then telephoned backstage to the Ziegfeld theatre on a special wire and announcements made during the running of the show as to the standing of the turns.

Ethel Barrymore will be guest of Ben Bernie on the American Can program of Feb. 11. Kitty Carlisle set for following week (18). Both placed by Herman Bernie.

Woody and Glad Smith, original 'Songsmiths,' back on the staff of KMBC, Kansas City, after a three-year absence.

Bert Bidwell, back from a trip to California and Texas, to rejoin the sales force of WHB, Kansas City.

Blackett a Copy Okayer as B-S-H Readies Crazy Crystals Air Ride

Too Realistic

Atlanta, Jan. 28.

Regularly scheduled broadcast of junior chamber of commerce meeting failed to go over Atlanta station all because of a talk on martial law, which preceded scheduled broadcast.

To lend color to program President Bill Horne, Jr., called meeting to order with pistol instead of gavel. Three blank cartridges served the necessary effect bringing every one to order, but putting the mike out of commission.

WCOP Gets Transradio, Ending WHDH Exclusive

Boston, Jan.

rushing aside the semi-exclusive position that WHDH, Boston, had on Trans-Radio News distribution in the Boston territory, Gerard H. Slattery, General Manager of WCOP, Copley Plaza, Boston, has contracted for Trans-Radio News ticker for the broadcasting of at least 60 minutes' worth of news daily.

Trans-Radio News has three outlets in Boston area, WORL, Needham, Mass., about two weeks ago leased a Trans-Radio News teletypewriter, and relays the news through its remote studios in the Myles Standish, Boston.

Herbert Moore, reversed on WCOP recently. WCOP could have had the service last September, but for the fact that WHDH had the monopoly on it.

Jim Donovan, Boston newspaperman, employed solely to handle the news for editing and broadcasting over WCOP.

Sam Rosey joins Thomas Lee Artists Bureau to handle all night club bookings out of Frisco office.

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.

Cr rystals is returning to radio for a complete spread over a complete Mutual system hook-in not only the four regular outlets but all available supplementaries. Time is now being cleared on these stations through the Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency which has completed a deal to handle the Crazy Crytals account.

Under the arrangements with Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency Crazy Crystals will leave all questions of continuity and announcement copy to the agency with Hill Blackett himself exercising complete and personal supervision over all copy. Announcement wording and claims for the product must all pass Hill Blackett's personal okay before going on the ether. Understood that the Crystals account will appropriate around $500,000 for its siege on the air waves.

Negotiations now on by the agency are for a 15-minute strip across the board at noon, with origination through WLW. Besides the regular MBS quartet in Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit and New York, the B-S-H agency is contacting MBS affiliates in Kansas City, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and in New England. Show is expected to get underway by Feb. 15. Will probably be a musical program aimed at the semi-rural audience.

Crazy Crystals, previously a big air user, was hit by censorship regulations some time ago.

Mexico's 75 Stations

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

Mexico has 75 broadcasting stations of various sizes. Ministry of Communications has just issued an official tabulation of transmission and audience statistics.

Mexico City has 40,000 receiving sets in good repair and daily use.

RESPONSE TO RADIO ADVERTISING

The WLW audience is much more than the largest group in the world listening to a single broadcasting station.

It is an audience which responds readily to the advertising messages of WLW sponsors.

Few media, if any, available to national advertisers can deliver so great a number of responsive buyers as WLW.

THE CROSLEY RADIO CORPORATION CINCINNATI, O.

Muzak (Wired Radio) Tries New York After Test Period in Cleveland

Muzak, Inc., subsid of the North American Co., utilities combine, has entered the New York field as a purveyor of wired music to hotels, restaurants, bars and barber shops. It will offer a 24-hour service, using telephone lines for transmission. If the commercial venture pans out, Muzak may repeat on its activities in Cleveland and test out the advisability of extending the service to private homes in the Manhattan area.

E. H. H. Connick, head of the holding company's sound and music interests, declared last week that a survey which he had made indicated that Muzak should be able to place at least 2,000 receivers among business spots in Manhattan. It is intention to ask for $15 and up a month for the service, with the relative price depending on the size of the loudspeaker equipment and the place.

Under the operating policy which Connick proposes to debut, all clients will be serviced with the same program of music. Latter will be free of jazz until 10 p. m., from which time on it will be nothing else but. If a customer wants a distinct type of programing all day long or at definite hours of the afternoon or evening he will be able to get it later on for an added recompense. In such cases it will mean putting in a separate wire.

Studios have been opened in Manhattan for the broadcasting of the wired programs. Muzak has available a library consisting of 90 hours of wide range recording. Because of the inconvenient location it has abandoned its recording quarters in the Bronx and is making use of ERPI's studios on Fifth Ave.

If there is a demand for it, news bulletin broadcasts may be added to the service sold to the refreshment and tonsorial clientele in Manhattan. Muzak has obtained a manufacturing license from the Music Publishers' Protective Association to cover the latter phase of its operations, while the performing license requirements are under negotiation with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

In Cleveland the wired radio idea has been confined to home placement, with Muzak collecting from $2 to $5 a month for the use of a receiver. Programs are routed out over lines controlled by the local power company, which is allied with the North American interests.

Only Fires Are News

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Execs at WIP are in for some heavy scalp-scratching as result of new contract signed with Sleepsafe Industries, Inc., of New York. Deal calls for sponsor, manufacturer of non-inflammable mattresses, to bankroll nightly Transradio news broadcast every time there's mention of item having to do with fire. Plug will be follow-up on story.

Decision of whether or not yarn may be classed as fir news up to station's discretion.

Rio Grande Oil Show

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

'Calling All Cars,' series of crime yarns from local police blotter, goes on two coast networks next week. On KHJ and the Don Lee coast web for past two years, piece will continue there but also swing over to the Guy Earl two-station chain, KNX, Hollywood, and KSFO, Frisco. Rio Grande Oil is new sponsor.

Half hour weekly broadcasts on latter will be repeats of earlier airings. Different cast and production crew will be used on both swings. Fred Shields produces the repeaters, backed up by Wilbur Hatch's ork, augmented to 14 pieces for the show.

Bill Robson will continue to script the new series. KNX-KSFO deal calls for 52 weeks, airing Thursday nights from 8 to 8.30 p. m.

Hixon-O'Donnell agency negotiated the deal for Rio Grande Oil Company.

WCSH's Lewi rogram

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 28.

Bernie Howe, operator of Community Broadcasting Service, program producing outfit, is opening studios in the DeWitt hotel which are to be linked with WCSH, Portland.

General Mills' $3,000,000 1936 Budget; Adds Full Hour on 60 CBS Stations

Chicago, Jan. 28.

One of the biggest single purchases of radio time in broadcast history was consummated late yesterday (Monday) by General Mills through the Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency in the signaturing of a contract with the Columbia network for 60 minutes in the morning, five days per week.

Deal, which was handled by Glenn Sample of B-S-H and Lee Crosby, chief of General Mills, was closed following protracted series of negotiations with all available facilities. Toward the end, it became a bitter duel between NBC and CBS, but with Columbia in this case winning out.

It is estimated that this deal will boost the expenditures of General Mills in radio by something like $1,500,000 annually, which means the doubling of the present purchases of radio time by the flour company. General Mills has been averaging $1,300,000 in radio during the past three years, with the money distributed on both network and spot programming.

According to present plans, the 60 minutes of General Mills plugging on Columbia will start sometime in the spring, possibly late April. To that end CBS is clearing time and facilities on some 60 of its stations on a coast-to-coast ride.

Serial Strips

All shows will originate in Chicago, the starting point of the great majority of the General Mills radio shows. The programs will all strip across the board, and will be serialized for the most part, whether strictly dialog or musical.

Program department is now experimenting with a number of shows to decide on the arrangement of the talent schedule. Programs being worked on are 'Gold Medal Minstrels,' which had a 26-week try on Mutual, 'Broadway Cinderella' now cooking on Mutual, the 'In-Laws' of KNX, Princess Kropotkin of Liberty magazine, a Hollywood show, a psychologist and a service program.

Among the possibilities also is 'Betty and Bob,' which has had a long gallop on NBC and which may be moved over to Columbia for the 60-minute General Mills spread. The hour will be split up into four 15-minute periods, according to present plans, though there is a possibility that the timing may split into three 15-minute periods, one 10-minute period and a five-minute shot. Betty Crocker, who has been the General Mills service programmer for years, will be spotted in the hour show for more recipe-spieling.

More to Come

This purchase of the 60-minute spread on Columbia does not change the majority of the shows already on for General Mills, either spot or network. And if a click, the hour plan may be added on the NBC wires also, either simultaneously with the CBS shot, or just preceding or following the Columbia spread.

As far as money expenditure itself is concerned, it places General Mills on the top rung of radio money with approximately $3,000,000 annually being pumped into the ether. For Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency it means the boosting of its radio coin handle even farther ahead of the rest of the field. In the first three weeks in January the Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency has added nearly $2,000,000 to its accounts. $1,500,000 from the new General Mills business and $500,000 from the newly acquired Crazy Crystals account.

That Ethiopian Hot Potato

Wildroot Cancels Speaker, Fearing Resentment of Italian Barbers

Josef Israels, II, who's had a tough time of it trying to get on the air with his first-hand report on the Italo- thiopian war, whence he recently returned, is set to appear before the National Geographic Society in Washington on Feb. 7. He can tell all before that body without having to clip his observations.

Israels was first nixed on the Vallee program because of sponsor doubts and was then negotiated to appear on Ted Husing's Wildroot (hair tonic) program, but sponsor got jittery on the number of Italian barbers which might listen in, so pencilled him out at the last minute.

Geographic date is expected to iron out this snag, as it's a prestige date. Israels' office, Publicity Associates, handles public relations services for the Selassie government, and this close tie has affected his ether chores.

Laurence Stallings is scheduled to discuss the African fracas on the Vallee ram this Thursday (30).

Retailer in Intensive 1-Day WMCA Campaign

In one of the most extensive one-day radio advertisements ever broadcast, Michael Bros., Bronx furniture store, went on the air three separate times, Jan. 27, over WMCA. Two and one-half hours in all consumed. Time distributed over day between hours from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.; 2 p.m. 'til 3 p.m., and from 5 p.m. 'til 5:30 p.m.

Occasion marked opening of a new retail outlet for parlor and bedroom outfitters.

Virtually the entire artist department of station conscripted to entertainment corp. Some 40 members of staff included in the several programs.

ALL-DAY GRIND TO ELIMINATE PUREES

San Antonio, Jan. 28.

KMAC, town's hustling indie station, has found colored amateur programs produce oke results. Currently mulling idea of big scale colored simon pure blast from spacious municipal auditorium.

Similar stunt on smaller scale resulted in plenty turnaways and big mail draw. Some 40 tyros reached finals in which five cash prizes were distributed. March 1 tentatively set for bigger venture if muny house is obtainable.

Station has concluded a 32-week span of amateur programs for white talent. Climaxed with three-day grind in muny auditorium. Broadcast daily from 2 p.m. to midnight with exception of 15-min. intermissions every two hours. Fifty out of 252 amateurs reached semi-finals to win a match. Three finalists split $500. Boost toothpaste the sponsor.

CIVIL SERVICE QUIZ
KRKD, LOS ANGELES

KRKD's Civil Service Quiz
Los Angeles.

KRKD, Illustrated Daily News station, has a tie-up with the local civil service bureau here for a 'Civil Service Test' stanza. Head of the bureau calls off 50 questions during the program, and dialers can mark them true or false, later sending in their paper to be graded and returned.

Two weeks hence the questionnaire is analyzed, and those rating highest marks get their names called off.

Wholesale Rotary Program
Charlotte, N. C.

WBT has arranged to pick up a Rotary club program on February 18 for broadcast so that all the clubs in the 58th district of Rotary, comprising the two Carolinas, can receive the broadcast simultaneouly at luncheon periods they will be staging.

Appearing on the program will be George Ivey, district governor of Rotary, who will have a message for all clubs under his jurdisdiction. With him will be Dr. Tom Sikes, of Rotary International. The program will originate before a Rotary luncheon in Charlotte.

WGY's Bermuda Cruise Tie-Up
Schenectady, N. Y.

Two WGY singers, Helene May and Mary Jane Lang, are entertaining a group from the Schenectady Chamber of Commerce on its annual cruise to Bermuda. Miss Lang made a similar trip with her sister last year.

Late-evening broadcast from ship first day out of New York sent to WGY, with Bill Baldwin, of Schenectady 'Gazette' as m.c.

WKRC, local CBS outlet, announced hourly official temperature readings Thursday (23), when mercury dropped to 16½° below zero for the burg's all-time second low.

Dealer Goodwill Sales Angle
New York City.

One of the big problems of manufacturers has been how to keep dealer goodwill while price advantages go to non-advertised goods. This situation is now being used in some radio circles as a springboard for promotional stunts to sell manufacturers more radio advertising. Claim of the promoters is that radio has certain merchandising facets which can assure the much-desired dealer goodwill.

Along these lines, NBC is issuing a booklet entitled 'Mr. Holcomb Thinks It Through.' Tells the story of a department store in Erie which featured window displays of products advertised over NBC, mentioned the programs in its newspaper copy, stuck up pictures of the radio performers, and otherwise tried to cash in on the national advertising. Stunts all cost very little money and are supposed to have dragged 'em in.

Similarly WXYZ, Detroit, has printed up window cards listing the programs sponsored by big drug houses and the products advertised. Has shipped these out to 1,200 drug stores, and reputedly this resulted in customer interest and increased purchasing of the products thus plugged.

Transcriptions

American Washing Machine Manufacturers Assn., sizeable platter customer during 1935, is again opening up, using five-minute spots through Meldrum & Fewsmith, Cleveland agency.

Plymouth Motor's disc campaign was set last week through J. Stirling Getchell for 81 stations, each to get three 15-minute recordings per week. Name of the show is "Truth Barlow," woven around a rustic western character plus orchestra and singing. Campaign is to help dealers get rid of used cars.

Chevrolet still making additions to its lengthy station list. Among the latest comers are two Hearst stations, WINS, New York, and WISN, Milwaukee. Chevy now on all Hearst outlets.

General Baking Co.'s 'Adventures of Terry and Ted,' serial over CBS, is now being supplemented with a platter job over eight stations. E.T.'s are an 'off the wire' cutting job of the web show. BBD&O agency in charge.

Joel . Bard has joined the commercial staff of WGAL, Lancaster. Has transferred his three voice skit 'Kate & George' and presents it each Saturday afternoon in connection with WGAL's weekly Hill-Billy frolic.

Lorraine Pankow to N. Y.
Buffalo, Jan. 28.

Lorraine Pankow returns to New York Feb. 14 to rejoin the Bobby Benson CBS show as Aunt Lil. Also expects to take part in True Story Court of Human Relations dramas. Has worked them before.

Miss Pankow is only member of original Bobby Benson cast to remain with show. Her husband, Herbert C. Rice, WGR-WKBW production director, wrote and produced Bobby Benson for a year in Buffalo with network outlets before it was shifted to New York. Local cast was then replaced with New Yorkers except for Aunt Lil.

Crosley's Transcription Subsidiary Part of New Artists' Bureau

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.

General Program Service, Inc., formed here last week, is headed by Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Crosley Radio Corp., his brother, Lewis M., v. p., and John L. Clark, general manager of the concern's broadcasting division, operating WLW and WSAI.

A separate set-up, the new enterprise will serve as a talent bureau for the Crosley and other stations and handle bookings of its artists for theatre engagements, screen work and club and convention dates.

Operation starts this week, with headquarters in the Union Central Annex, which houses the recently opened downtown auxiliary studios of the Crosley stations. Branch offices are to be established soon in New York, Chicago and Hollywood.

GPS also will maintain its own electrical transcription plant manufacture wax to sell to advertising agencies, sponsors or stations.

Bureau's initial task is contracting all vocal and dramatic people now on WLW and WSAI. Edgar . Wegert, on the WLW exec staff for the past three years, transfers as general manager of the bureau.

Service of any GPS artist is available to stations other than WLW and WSAI, provided the salary offer is higher.

New Cincinnati Agency

Entire Crosley lo Corp. advertising account has shifted to Douglass Allen & Leland Davis, a new agency recently opened here in the Enquirer Shift involves station WLW, Crosley household appliances—refrigerators, radios, and washing machines.

Principals in the new agency are Douglass M. Allen, heretofore president of Procter & Collier (which previously had the Crosley biz); and Leland Davis, erstwhile Pittsburgh newspaper man. Other accounts on the agency's roster are: Ault & Wiborg Corp., Kenrad Corp., Kentucky Electric Lamp Co., American Oak Leather Co., and Baldwin piano.

WNEW's Newark Plant

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 28.

Dean R. Upson, of Schenectady, N. Y., is new program director of WMBD, Peoria, succeeding Clair Hull, who left to manage a small station at Toluca, Ill., now under WMBD management.

Upson is a 10-year radio veteran formerly with The Vagabonds for three years at WSM, Nashville, before his more recent association with WGY.

Construction has started on a new transmitter plant for WMBD, Peoria. New plant will be six miles outside the city limits.

FCC's Washington Docket

Grants and Applications

Washington, Jan. 28.

Extension of special experimental authority to operate with 500 kw. last week was granted by the Federal Communications Commission to WLW, Cincinnati, O. . Powerful station, which employs directional antenna system, nights, will use transmitter of W8XO.

Broadcast division also okayed a license renewal for KCRJ, Jerome, Ariz., smallie operating on 1310 kc, days.

Juice-jump for WBNX, New York, was denied, commish upsetting recommendation of Examiner Ralph H. Bramhall. Station had asked to move transmitter and increase power from 250 watts to 1 kw.

Frequency change from 1420 to 1350 kc, and power increase from 100 to 250 watts for WEED, Rocky Mount, N. C., was nixed, commish sustaining Examiner Bramhall's views. North Carolina smallie also asked to change hours of operation from unlimited day, sharing with WEHC, Charlottesville, W. Va., to unlimited.

Hopes of St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce, St. Petersburg, Fla., for a new smallie to operate on 1310 kc, were dashed when Bramhall's report recommending a denial was given commish approval.

Power boost for KARK, Little Rock, Ark., was granted by the broadcast division, sustaining Examiner P. W. Seward. Station which operates on 890 kc will increase power from 250 watts nights, 500 watts days, to 500 watts nights, 1 kw days.

The following applications were referred to the examiners:

M. M. Oppegard, Grand Forks, N. D., new station to operate on 1310 kc with 100 watts nights, 250 watts days; Ted R. Woodward, Kingsport, Tenn., new station to operate on 1210 kc, 100 watts, days; Marysville-Yuba City Publishers, Inc., Marysville, Calif., now station to be operated on 1140 kc with 250 watts, days; Memphis Commercial Appeal, Inc., Mobile, Ala., new station to be operated on 630 kc with 1 kw nights (using directional antenna), 5 kw days, unlimited; Wilton Harvey Poilard, Huntsville, Ala., new station to be operated on 1200 ks with 100 watts; WMFF, Plattsburg, N. Y., change hours of operation from days only to include 100 watts nights, until 7 p. m.; WROK, Rockford, Ill., transfer of control of Rockford Broadcasters, Inc. (licensee of WROK) from Lloyd C. Thomas, as trustee for individual stockholders to Rockford Consolidated Newspapers, Inc.; KMPC, Beverly Hills, Calif., license renewal to operate on 710 kc with 500 watts, limited, and granted temporary license pending hearing; KFEQ, St. Joseph, Mo., increase power from 2½ to 5 kw days.

CAB CALLOWAY ORCHESTRA
10 Mins.
SHELL OIL
Saturday, 9 P. M. EST.
WEAF, New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

Familiarly known for his peculiar type of playing and hi-de-hooing, the typical Cab Calloway material was considerably restrained for this Shell Oil airer. Instead, the negro maestro depended on instrumentation, and a nice balance between straight ork playing, soloing and choral work. Certainly makes for better radio entertainment because no matter how colorful, the usual idiosyncrasies of his group demands the eye's attention as well as the ear.

Given smart build-up by Al Jolson, band went into ragging of 'Some of These Days,' with two balladists before mike. Banjo and then flute solo used on this for contrast. Concluded it with characteristic hijinks. 'Cotton,' second to be played, done in slow tempo with straight song renditions proving that Calloway organization has some real voices. This one also provided opportunity to demonstrate what a well-rounded orchestra Cab has developed. 'Chiving' was typical hot colored orchestration done in true Calloway fashion. Varied talents displayed on this broadcast makes Cab Calloway loom as future ether bet.

This is one of very few instances of negro orchestra booked on big coast-to-coast commercial. Wear.

MUSICAL REVERIES
Ken Wood's Orchestra, Stuart Churchill, Orson Welles Band, Songs, Talk
15 Mins.
CORN PRODUCTS
M-W-F-Sa, 12:15 P. M.
WABC, New York
(E. W. Hellwig)

Neat musical for early afternoon. Designed, of course, to catch housewife, Corn Products boosts different one of its products each of four days weekly, starting with Linit and including Karo, Mazola and Kre-Me). By incorporating family 'tall story,' based on historical facts, plenty of variety is accorded ad copy.

Tip-top is the music of Ken Wood band. This lad formerly known as Lou Raderman. Uses large string section topped by his own violin. In contrast, Wood builds up reed section with harp standing out at proper junctures. Combination enables development of fine tone effects, whether playing as unit or for background to vocals.

Stuart Churchill, tenor voice, contributes two numbers, first 'Sylvia' and other, 'If I Should Lose You,' Holds attention. Orson Welles, poetic reader, is spotted for a reading on each broadcast. Did 'Indian Serenade' on program caught. Wood's music providing imaginative setting for word picture. Brief enough to get by.

Program neat showmanship idea in introducing 'tall stories,' because of possibilities in creating listening audience interest. Employs brief family sketch to present them, with question as to what historical event, etc., and with answer presented on same broadcast following extremely brief commercial.

New high reached in brevity of actual sponsor's copy, with advertising matter running little more than 60 seconds. Yet, sales message is planted more firmly than programs that run overboard. Wear.

RICE HOPE PLANTATION
With Kenneth Spencer, Dudley Brothers
Negro Spirituals
15 Mins.
BREWSTER GORDON CO.
WHAM, Rochester

This has quickly taken its place as an outstanding local program well in keeping with high standard of quality set by WHAM (Stromberg-Carlson).

Setting as described by announcer Jack Lee is a small Negro church on the Rice Hope plantation where the colored folk gather weekly to sing the beloved Southern spirituals under direction of 'Deacon' Kenneth Spencer and the Dudley Brothers quartet.

Spencer is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music and a talented concert artist. Dudley brothers were on radio in Detroit before coming to Rochester.

Quartet opens with 'Deep River' as theme melody and after description of setting swings into 'I Know the Lord will Lay His Hands on Me.' Spencer then gives a sermon 'When the Great Day Comes' in a spiritual chant, his deep, rich speaking voice giving it an unusual quality. Quartet then sings 'There is a great Camp-meeting in the Promised Land.'

Advertising interlude provides a skit by Jack Lee and Clara Nowack in which the husband exclaims over fresh asparagus tips and strawberries in January and the wife explains they are Birdseye frosted foods.

Quartet sings 'My God is a Rock in this Weary Land.' Spencer solos 'I's Away from Home' and closing hymn is 'Good Lord I'se Done What You Told Me to Do.' Final plug stresses Birdseye food feature of the week and directs listeners to neighborhood stores carrying the products. Brewster Gordon is upstate wholesaler for frozen delicacies handled by General Foods Corp. Birdseye has been regionally advertised on radio in New England but has not been an extensive patron of radio thus far.

No advertising agency involved. Cord.

MERRY MACS
Quintet
STANDARD OIL OF IND.
Sundays; 9:30-10:30 C.S.T.
WBBM, Chicago
(McCann-Erickson)

Here is a splendid quintet guesting on the Jack Hylton orchestra show on Columbia. Three men and a girl with neat vocal arrangements. Do comedy and rhythm stuff with a fine flair for movement and color, and can even tackle the soft type of ballad and really sell it. Gold.

Radio Follow-Up

Frank Fay continues on the Rudy Vallee Fleischmann program and suggests that he may be the next stage comedian to step into stellar radio importance. His delivery is unlike any thus far heard. Its an easy-going, unpunched but accumulatively effective style. In his first two or three minutes he may even seem rather meandering and aimless. Indeed in his contempt—seemingly—for the clock and in making little attempt to wham over gags or points, he is daring enough to rely upon a form of underplayed comedy that may be precisely ripe for harvesting.

There is evidence that some of the belly-laugh radio comics are decidedly shrinking in popularity. Situational comedy is, in any event, very much in the saddle and Fay is situational in a deceptive, indirect manner. Apart from the talking, Fay also shows himself able to take a ballad over the bumps.

Gladys Swarthout was heard recently on the Palmolive operetta series in a radio version of Paramount's film 'Rose of the Rancho.' This program has recently skipped from NBC to CBS, but remains in essentially the same pattern. Miss Swarthout has been a standby with Palmolive for a couple of years.

'Rancho' was a pretty noisy program. Story, an ancient rigamarole about vigilantes and landgrabbers, and a government agent who is saved from a necktie party by a handsome senorita, offered only so-so radio plot material. But the chief weakness was musical, with an operatic range voice forced to sing down to kindergarden jingles.

Paul Lukas and Peggy Conklin excerpted 'The Pursuit of Happiness' for Fleischmann's, but in the purifying-for-radio process the antique but delectable practice of bundling was entirely omitted. Insofar as a full evening stage's entertainmnen can be boiled down into nine minutes flat, the playlet offered Lukas and Conklin effective opportunities to toss romantic dialog.

Empire Gold Buying Service on WEAF Sundays at 11.15 a. m. has the good sense to keep its ad bally to a reasonable minimum. The spiel is full enough but not fulsome, and Rudd and Rogers, with their engaging songs and pianologs, get their vocal pops over with enough entertainment appeal.

NAZI JAZZ
With Robert Garden's Orchestra
30 Mins.
International Broadcast
Sunday 11:30 a.m. EST
WJZ, New York

This Berlin dance session propagandized over NBC-WJZ on Nazi ideas of music. It was political ballyhoo with a thin veneer. In music as in matters of home, babies, women's place, amusements, morals, racial purity, etc., the Nazis have 'theories.'

An Oxford-English announcer started off by denying that Germany was 'putting back the clock' in dance music. Said the new regime (Brown Shirts) depreoated 'the inconceivable lengths in the quest of novelty' to which modern dance arrangers have gone in syncopating the classics. Then followed a contrasting of original classic themes and the ultra-modern dansapation versions of the same compositions.

NBC-WJZ announcer first preluded this short-wave pickup by stating 'turn about is fair play,' as quasi-apology for this Berlin jazz program; that Germany, having heard the Anglo-American dansapations in past, now wanted to demonstrate its own standards of dance music.

Then follows a sort of Sigmund Spaeth routine of first playing Wagner's 'Pilgrims Chorus' from 'Thanhausser' in its original, followed by a dance arrangement; Beethoven's 'Sonata Pathetique,' straight, and then syncopated; and an excerpt from Tschaikowsky's 'Nutcracker Suite,' in its original classic strain, then jazzed by Garden's dance combo.

Results in each instance defeated the purpose of the spiel that 'every healthy-minded nation will refuse to countenance such defilement of the classics' and the intent to evidence how 'musical culture has disintegrated by such decadent influences'—all direct quotes from the Berlin announcer.

Apart from the fact that Garden's combo is a corny, over-stringed orchestra, about fourth-rate according to American standards, the synced classics sounded much more palatable under the rhythmic arrangements than in the 'pure' rendition.

Berlin spieler pleaded his cause as if the fate of the world depended on whether or not a Wagner, Beethoven or Tschaikowsky aria were jazzed. The inclusion of the great Russian's work was in line with the pledge that foreign masters as well as Aryans would likewise be 'protected, at least on German soil.'

Voicing the Nazi's pledge to 'repudiate such vulgarisms,' the announcer scored an anonymous music publisher who seemingly had been making the German jazz-beaus conscious of 'master arrangements' of the classics. Yet in America the Arthur Lange, Ernst Klaphoitz, W. C. Polla, Frank Skinner and kindred arrangements of classics have done much to familiarize the masses with excerpts from the masters, because the radio has retailed them in palatable synced form.

Garden's orchestra was presented as 'not waging any war against any particular instrument'—this in refutation of the taboo on the saxophone. Said the spieler, even Wagner and Bizet have endorsed Mr. Sax's famed reed instrument, but that under the new German jazz scheme of things the strings are pushed to the fore.

To illustrate—first was played an 'English Waltz' (so titled) which, being a waltz, perforce put the strings to the fore. Thence a slow foxtrot (it was parenthetically explained at this point that the slow foxes are equally as popular in Germany as the ordinary fox), which again likewise made the strings and woodwinds most prominent in the arrangements. Apologizing for lack of time in which to play a tango, a paso doble was then performed, which is, of course, of Spanish vintage so that any exposition of German jazz shaped up as an emasculated hybrid of everything that wasn't German, ranging from the graceful English waltz to the Spanish dance. Abel.

DOC SCHNEIDER'S COWBOYS
Hillbilly
15 Mins.
Sustaining
Daily; 12 noon
WGY, Schenectady

This troupe, which NBC's booking branch brought North last spring from a Mexican border station, played a six months' engagement at WGY, then broadcast for a brief period over WBZ, Boston, and recently returned to Schenectady.

Schneider's breezy, we're-all-in-a-big happy family emceeing is effective. One of those every-dayers that build, particularly with older folks and listeners in small town rural areas. Loyal fans' names are mentioned with request numbers, they are birthday-greeted, etc.

Schneider paces the proceedings in leisurely, open-hand Western style. Works without a script; he kids with and about the musicians and they return the banter. Regular dialers presumably like this stuff. That ad libbing has dangers was evident in two bad-taste remarks made by leader on programs heard. Did not sound well on the air, although perhaps inoffensive in private conversation.

Schneider takes plenty of time to plug p.a.'s and to book himself over the air. Juco.

LIFE SAVER'S RENDEZVOUS
Clyde Lucas' orchestra, Irene Beasley, Phil Duey, Charlie Leland, Men About Town Songs, Talk, Band
30 Mins.
LIFE SAVERS
Wednesday, 8 P. M.
WJZ, New York
(Topping & Lloyd)

Addition of Irene Beasley, Men About Town and Three Symphonettes, together with better placing of varied material, has improved this rendezvous broadcast since it first hit air. Clyde Lucas' band (the second program has had) is still in but clever shifting from vocal to instrumental numbers has enhanced its effectiveness. Entire proceedings supposed to be in N. Y.'s smartest night club. Baliading and dance tunes carry out this atmosphere. 'Story' went into the ash can.

Two tunes done by Miss Beasley —'Alone' and 'If I Had Rhythm.' Gifted with ability to put over conversational type of pop numbers, this singer did better job on this program than on previous appearances. She adds to her clear enunciation, certain lilt that appeal. First time out 'Men About Town' put over elaborate arrangement of 'Old Man Harlem,' warbling way over their heads.

Symphonettes gave good interpretation of 'Ennie Meenie.' Highly satisfactory, and indicating promise as new addition to ever-increasing number of gal harmony teams. This trio came back to finale with male combo and soloists, a neat musical climax that really put program across.

Phil Duey is a pleasing holdover from original effort. Fave baritone, he went far to maintain high standard of program's singing with 'Without a Song.' Unannounced comic who's billed as Charlie Leland is employed to build up night club scene. Handicapped by material.

Questionable whether it was wise to run big stick of commercial immediately after theme number. Might have gone better in middle. Cigarette girl offering tobaccos and life savers comes in twice, but briefness tempers this. Ward Wilson is master of ceremonies, doing glib job throughout. Wear.

CROSLEY FOLLI
Revue
30 Mins.
CROSLEY PRODUCTS
WLW, Cincinnati

Program, for long a fixture on WLW now extends to the Mutual web. It's a commercial for all outlets concerned, with the 'nation's station' collecting from its parent Crosley Radio Corp. Plugs, brief and neatly spotted, are for Crosley radio receiving sets and Crosley Shelvador electric refrigerators.

Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable, hopping over from the nearby RKO Shubert, were added names for this stanza. Pop solos by Mary Woods and Mary Oicott, vocaling by the Virginians, male foursome, and close harmonizing of the three Devore gals are sprinkled okay betwixt the band's separate offerings.

Special arrangements and choice of selections attuned to class of talent and combine for an okie dokie late-night period.

Announcing done by Tom Slater. Koll.

Vote Showdown for N. Y. Musicians' Share-the-Work Plan; Execs Opposed

Spread-the-work movement which has been agitating members of the New York 'musicians' union for weeks, will be brought to a showdown today (Wednesday) through the ballot. Resolution, which the membership has been asked to vote on, favors restricting bandmen holding down regular hotel, cafe, restaurant or theatre jobs from doing any commercial radio or outside work, while freelance musicians would under the terms of this rule be allowed to play only three radio shows per week, or three transcription jobs, or three society engagements.

Administration in current command of the local has expressed itself as strongly opposed to this limitation of work idea, but, after it had the resolution pigeonholed for month, it was forced to yield to increasing pressure and bring the issue out for a referendum. Resolution has stirred those who have steady jobs and extra calls on their services to bitter protest, and a 100% turnout at the polls is expected from this source, but indications are the final count of the votes will find the advocates of the spread-the-work measure in the saddle, since the unemployed members of the union outnumber the employed by three to one.

Band-Name Idea For Late Night Hours on Radio

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Music Corporation of America has hit upon a system by which it can secure national radio exploitation for dance and song names during the late evening hours when the air is devoted almost exclusively to dance band pick-ups. MCA turned the trick with Veloz and Yolanda team by giving them the Shep Fields orchestra and plugging it over the air as the Veloz and Yolanda orchestra.

MCA is now taking a new step by putting an orchestra behind Sophie Tucker. It is assembling a suitable aggregation of musicians and will book the combo in theatres, ballrooms and nite clubs. MCA is lining up dates to follow Miss Tucker's engagement in Miami.

MCA also made the same arrangement with the DeMarcos giving these dancers the Al Kavelin orchestra, now at the Blackstone hotel here.

Receiver Gets Town Casino, Philly; Lanin Steps Out

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Town Casino, one of Philly's smarter niteries, went into receivership last week and Howard Lanin, bandleader heading venture, stepped out.

His place (as bandmaster only) is being taken by Barney Zeeman, who brings his crew from 20th Century Tavern.

Tobias-Fain Want 'Boy' Song Back from W. B. (Remicks) and May Sue

Songwriters' Protective Association may finance a test suit by Charles Tobias and Sammy Fain, authors of the song 'Boy Meets Girl,' placed with Remicks, a Warner Bros. subsid. Songsmiths now want the song back, in order to place it with a music house that's a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers.

Tobias and Fain have consulted J. T. Abeles, attorney, to test the proposition that Remicks, having limited radio outlets, is therefore limited is its hit-making potentialities; also that the non-ASCAP restrictions of the Remick firm are substantially reducing the number of their radio performances, and thus hurting their future standing in the Society.

'Boy Meets Girl' was 'inspired' by the current Broadway (George Abbott) legit production, which is WB-financed, thus motivating the song into a WB song affiliate.

Eddie Cantor wanted to use the number on his air program and wired Jack L. Warner for a 'courtesy' okay on its usage, but was advised that since Herman Starr, WB v.p., is handling the music situation, the studio regrets the non-radio licensing restrictions curtail Cantor's use of the song.

PETRILLO ASKS $3 HR. SCALE FOR CHI HOTELS

Chicago, Jan.

Musicians' Union now in confab with the local hotels over new contract. Jimmy Petrillo of the Union is asking for a 50% increase in scale for musicians working in the cafes and rooms of the hostelries, a boost from the present scale of $2 per hour to $3 per hour.

Next meeting between hotel men's organization and Union will be held tomorrow (Wednesday).

Publishers Consulted on Unionization

Music publishing industry last week interceded in the campaign of the printing and engraving trades to unionize the sheet music printing industry. Representatives of the various union groups met with John G. Paine and publishers' delegates at the offices of the Music Publishers Protective Association to discuss the unions' demands, with a view to making clear what the drive to put the union label on all printed music would have on the interests of the publishing business.

Another union angle that provided a meeting in Paine's office last week was the new wage scale for arrangers, copyists and proofreaders which has been established by Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians. This scale was to go into effect Jan. 1, but the union has agreed to defer action pending further conferences with Paine and representative publishers.

Following the meeting with spokesmen for the printing and engraving unions, it was decided to lay their demands before the industry as a whole. In the case of the meeting with the delegation from the New York musicians' union, the discussions ended with the understanding that the latter would reduce to writing all details of the new scale, plus info on conditions pertaining to arrangers, copyists and proofreaders that exist in other key cities, such as Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Representing the musicians' union were William Feinberg, James Tommasi, Russell Wooding and Arthur Gutman, while the printing trades meeting had in attendance, Irving Penn, of Carl Fischer, Inc.; Frank Connor, of G. Schirmer; Art Schwartz, of M. Witmar ; Gordon McGary, National Association of Music Printers; Michael Flynn, American Federation of Labor; Leonard Kay and Michael Morris, N. Y. Press Assistants Union; Vincent Ferris, Allied Printing Trades Council; Edward J. Voltes, Photo Engravers Union, and James P. Redmond, Typographical Union No. 6. Gene Buck was a sitter-inner at this gathering.

COVERT'S CRACKUP

Rochester, Jan. 28.

Michael Covert, band leader at Hotel Seneca, took a bad air spill on a trip to Lake Placid. He planed to the resort with Ralph D. Barton, pilot, while rest of orchestra went by auto. After playing at the figure skating carnival at the Olympic arena, they were taking off from Mirror Lake when the plane struck a hidden wire and flipped over.

Both Covert and Barton were badly shaken and the plane was smashed.

Publishers Set Up Credit Bureau for Phonograph Co.'s; Delinquents on Spot

Music publishing industry taken steps to control, through a central source, the credit granted the manufacturers of phonograph records. Major move in that direction occurred last week when, at a meeting of leading members of the Music Publishers Protective Association, John G. Paine was authorized to set up a bureau devoted exclusively to the licensing of phonograph rights. Functions of this bureau will be similar to that of Copyrights, Ltd., of England.

Publishers will not only do all their clearing of numbers through the new bureau but leave it to the latter to obtain accountings of sale and make collections from the phonograph record manufacturers. Primary purpose of the bureau is to tighten up on the disc companies that have been delinquent in their royalty accountings and payments. It will place all manufacturers on an equal basis, with each either paying within 30 days after the required accounting date or becoming subject to the provision in the copyright law which arbitrarily sets the royalty at 2c. per pressing and limits credit to within 10 days after each monthly distributing period.

No Price Fixing

New bureau will avoid any vestige of price fixing. It will be up to the individual publisher to set his own price, but all other angles will be taken care of by the bureau.

Idea of putting all recorders on an equal credit basis has been urged by a member of its own ranks, Herbert Yates. Latter, who controls Brunswick, American Record, Columbia and other labels, has also declared himself as favoring a minimum 2c. royalty, arguing that with everybody forced to operate along the same business restrictions and to establish 50c. as the lowest price level for phonograph records there would be a chance of his companies turning out a profit. It is Yates' contention that no money can be made from recordings retailing at 35c.

Yates claims that his phonograph record manufacturing investments last year accounted for a lost of $110,000.

Church Squawk Closes Buffalo Ami on Appeal

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

Chez Ami, Delaware avenue nitery, lost its liquor license this week by decision of the Court of Appeals.

When the spot was opened over a year ago the Calvary Presbyterian Church brought action to revoke its license on the ground that the law forbids licensing a restaurant within 200 feet from a building used for church purposes.

Brit. Publishers Find Outside Source of Coin For Radio Music Use

London,

With the signing of agreements with the owners and operators of certain Continental European radio stations set up mainly for the purpose of providing commercial programs, English publishers now see a chance of drawing down some coin for the use of their catalogs on these stations.

British Broadcasting Co., under its charter from the British government, is not allowed to advertise anything or anyone (except itself), and is supposed to be free from any political ties. Also, the strict prejudices of the chief officials will not allow the broadcasting of anything in the nature of light entertainment on Sundays, in case the British public should become too cheerful, and nothing lighter than a Sunday concert is provided.

By the erection of high powered stations at Luxembourg and other places on the Continent, promoters have found a way of providing lighter entertainment, with profit to themselves derived from commercial advertising supplied by English national advertisers, and as about 80% of the British public listen in, the promoters are receiving substantial payment for the time sold.

Programs are built in England, either electrical transcription of the whole program, or by the use of ordinary phonograph discs which are shipped to the station, and practically everything used in the Luxembourg programs consists of English or American songs. English publishers have for some time been demanding payment not only on the special recordings, but on the commercial phonograph discs.

This has now been met by the promoters and advertisers agreeing to pay to the publishers 5% of the revenue received from the sale of time, with certain fixed minima per item; phonograph discs to receive two-thirds of these amounts.

As the income from these stations is estimated at between $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 per annum, the publishers are likely to benefit, at a conservative estimate, to the tune of $75,000 per annum, with the prospect this will in time increase. This is in addition to anything they may receive through the French Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers for the right to perform the works.

One of the snags up to the present time has been the question of divided ownership; the rights of certain works sometimes being in the hands of a French publisher for the Continent, where the works are performed, and from whom permission must be obtained to import the actual mechanical contrivances. But after months of patient negotiations these troubles are now being overcome.

Whiteman, Sr., East

J. Wilberforce Whiteman, 80-year-old father of Paul Whiteman, arrives in New York shortly from Denver, prior to starting on a nation-wide tour contacting music centers, schools and universities, gathering research data for the Paul Whiteman Museum which is to be erected soon at Williams College.

Much of the preliminary detail to be incorporated as a part of the U. S. music collection has been gathered by the elderly man during his 60 years of activity in musical life. He's former head of music department in Denver schools.

Attendance Too Slim, Postpone ASCAP Election

Board of directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers voted to postpone the annual election of officers until the last Thursday in March. It's first time in over 10 years that it has put off this event for a period of two months.

Sentiment that prompted the postponement was that there were too many members absent at last Thursday's (23) meeting and that the chances were a gathering in March would find a 100% attendance. Besides the election of officers the board in March will be faced with the designation of directors to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of Herman Starr, Warner Bros. v.-p., and Max Dreyfus, one of ASCAP's oldest members.

Brito Returning

On his return to U. S., Alfredo Brito, Cuban orchestra pilot, will make application for citizenship papers, if immigration authorities will permit his re-entry.

Brito, in the U. S. on a temporary visa, went to Havana two weeks ago for a vacation. In his absence his band continues at the Versailles, N. Y.

MANNONE AT HICKORY

Wingy Mannone goes back into the Hickory House, New York, Feb. 4 for 12 weeks, succeeding Red Norvo's swing sextet. Latter goes into Jack Dempsey's restaurant, N. Y.

Night Club Reviews

CONNIE'S INN
(NEW YORK)

Main item in the new edition of 'Hot Chocolates of 1936,' which opened Sunday (19) at Connie's Inn, is the U. S. debut of Evelyne Dove, who's reported to have followed in the footsteps of Josephine Baker on the continent. Management here is ahead of the 'Ziegfeld Follies' by a good week, when Miss Baker is slated to arrive.

Miss Dove is a tall, light complexioned singer who dresses in calm taste and chants sophisticated balladry. First number is in French, with the second in English. Her next appearance is coupled with James Anderson for 'What's On Your Mind?' which is plugged as the No. 1 tune of the new revue. Customers might expect something flashier in the newcomer.

Rest of the show combines some holdover material from the early fall edition. Kaloah is still present, spotted near closing for her specialty, which is undiluted cooching. Bessie Smith, buxom singer, and Eddie Green are paired for 'Topics of the Day,' and Harold Reed handles most of the heftier singing stretches.

Maxie Armstrong and the Palmer Brothers disport fast footwork, and the Three Giants of Rhythm, decked out in white tails, maintain the dancing speed. Paul White, youngster, sings 'Round and Around' a la Harlemese, and also leads the 'Truckin' bit, which is now a standard Harlem step. A jungle production number, with line in feathers and little else, has a girl jerking out a dance to tom-toms, and much yelping from the rest of the cast. This number is the liveliest ensemble sequence in the offering, which contains more high hat flourishes than Lenox avenue stuff.

Last is 'Satchelmouth' Armstrong, who swings melodious clamor out of his trumpet, with the patronage loving it. Chorus is fast per usual, and trucks most of the routines on and off the floor. Little new in the way of closing such entertainment, as it's either bandanmas or feathered hips. Teddy Blackman staged the dances, and Cahn and Chaplin responsible for the music end. Show runs nearly two hours. ral.

PALLADIUM
(NEW YORK)

With the Ritz Bros. and Andrea Marsh out after one week, Palladium added three new acts, retained its first week's production bits and apparently stepped into a hole which may prove too deep. Venture is already in financial difficulties, with the girls and holdover principals taking a cut in salaries even before they received the first week's wages, which they hadn't up to opening night (Thursday) of the second show.

New additions are Mills, Kirk and Howard, rough and tumble comedy trio, and all the Pat Rooneys, including Senior, Marion Bent, Junior and Mrs. Jr., Janet Reade. It almost looked like a transplanting of the Beau Rivage (Rooney's own restaurant-nitery venture at Sheepshead Bay last summer) to 54th street and Eighth avenue. Aside from the Rooneys and M.K.&H., the show has not been changed, not even the songs. At it stands, it cannot hope to draw the yokels, despite the $1.50 dinner (minimum) evenings and the $2 top after 10 p.m.

Spotting of the Rooneys and the trio into the holdover production is haphazard and makes the show generally appear even slower than it is. The Rooneys are too quiet for a cabaret-theatre as large as the former Casino de Paree, while Mills, Kirk and Howard, who show strong promise as nitery comedy act, were hampered opening night by both the spotting and mike trouble. Their bits, especially the opening, 'Hitler, Mussolini and Selassie' routine, and the hat-switch business, should land with proper presentation. At this catching, though, nobody in the show could have expected to click in a near-empty house. When the last show went on at midnight there weren't more than 50 customers in the spot.

Janet Reade works solo for a couple of torch numbers, registering but mildly, while the remainder of the Rooney family is grouped in one spot. Miss Bent does extremely little. Rest of the act comprises the Rooneys dancing, which is slow in comparison to the preceding fast hoofing routine of Alozie and Tanner backed by the chorines.

Arno and Arnette, satirically modernistic in their dancing, Arthur Ball, tenor, Helen Reynolds and Co., eight skating girls, Adrienne Andre, singer, and Billy Branch and Co. (4), apache turn, are the rest of the holdover acts along with the show and chorus girls and two bands led by Teddy King and Jimmy Carr. Latter plays the show and then alternates with King on the dance music, though King plays most of that. Wednesday night also inaugurated a thrice-weekly WMCA wire in the spot, with King's band playing the half-hour. Both aggregations are excellent.

Angelo Palange is operating the Palladium, with Joe Sullivan as booker and Wallace Miam as stager. Each show is supposed to stay two weeks, but the Ritz Bros. because of a previous commitment could remain for only one.

First week's show cost in the neighborhood of $7,300, with Palange intending to cut after the premiere to $5,000. The slice is too obvious. Scho.

FROLICS CLUB
(MIAMI)

Miami, Jan. 17.

Frolics Club, long one of Miami's ace spots, is clicking nicely during what appears to be an off season for niteries. Hugh McKay, manager, also does p.a. work and his promotional efforts are responsible for much of the club's success. Newly redecorated this semester, spot offers night addicts a smooth setting for round and rounding.

Noel Sherman and Billy Arnold's 'Too Hot for Broadway' show is a fast moving piece. There are 24 femmes in support of a cast of talented principals. Mozelle, billed as the 'most daring of all creative dancers,' does a nude number. Three Sophisticates, trio of girl acrobatic dancers, who appeared here last season, almost steal the show with their rough-housing. Act patterned after old Clayton, Jackson and Durante theme, with girls proves new and pleasing. Lulu Bates, rotund and jovial, warbles blues.

Production progresses well without the aid of an m.c., announcements being made by one of the chorus boys. But Buddy Walker will take up m.c. duties this week.

Show is presented thrice nightly, with Cafe's Vagabonds providing dance rhythms in between. Thom.

Rooneys and Mills, Kirk and Howard Bow Out of Palladium, N. Y.

Mills, Kirk and Howard, comedy trio who opened at the Palladium, cabaret-music hall, New York, last Thursday (23), walked out of the show Monday night (27). Trio were in on an agreement which called for their salary nightly. They packed up after failing to collect Sunday and Monday nights' wages on time.

Another change in the show was made Saturday, when Pat Rooney, Marion Bent, Rooney, 3d and Janet Reade (latter's wife) dropped out of the production.

Angelo Palange, radio sports announcer, operates the cabaret-theatre. Frances Williams is being discussed to go into the Palladium tomorrow (Thursday) night. Palange expects a fresh bankroll to keep the former Casino de Paree open.

Swing Stuff

Dempsey Swings

Red Norvo's swing band, augmented by drummer Maurice Purtill, opens at Jack Dempsey's Feb. 4. Six Spirits of Rhythm are leaving the Kit Kat Club to alternate with Norvo at the opening. Dorothy Williams will vocalize. Combined efforts of these genuine jamsters should make the audience fall out. Graduating from 52d street niteries, Norvo indicates the trend toward making swing respectable. Arrangements of Eddie Sauter prove that swing can be commercial occasionally, and bear out the parallel between Norvo among small jam outfits, and Goodman among the large swing bands. They both feature standout swing with smooth arranging and subtle tone effects, demonstrating that speed and volume have nothing to do with swing.

Personals

Bessie Smith joining the floor show at Connie's Inn, N. Y... Clarinetist Sid Stoneburn has left Tommy Dorsey for Bob Crosby, replaced by Tommy Macy from Isham Jones ...Jone Marsala turned down the job with Dorsey, feeling he needed more experience...Marsala has been practicing clarinet with Bud Freeman in his room, and they both play plenty new licks as a result... Wingy Mannone moves back into the Hickory House...Fletcher Henderson has left for Chicago to play at the Grand Terrace...This automatically cancelled Teddy Wilson's Brunswick recording date at which he was using Chu Berry, Roy Eldredge, and John Kirby, all with Henderson;...Dusky warbler Billie Halliday forced to leave Connie's Inn,, N. Y., because of illness... Willie Bryant may go into the Ubangi Club in Harlem...Cotton Club reported looking for a new band, with an eye fixed on Teddy Hill.

Onyx Breakdown

On the Air

NBC can't make up its mind about Ella Logan's accompaniment except that it's got to swing. Having used Riley-Farley, Wingy Mannone, and Phil Napoleon, last week's program offered a great bunch of unknowns under the direction of Irving Miller. With okay brass arranging and heavy drums which sounded like Ray's Beaduc's work on the cowbells, this gang really got in the groove. On 'The Day I Let You Get Away,' they had a little trouble deciding who should take the solos, but the last chorus on 'Bugle Call' was the nearest thing to the famous Chicago rhythm that has hit the air lanes recently. On 'How About Me,' this gang revived the lost art of backing up a vocalist with ace fillins by trumpet, trombone, and clarinet. For working with Ella Logan team is a standout.

Disc Dictums

On Brunswick, Teddy Wilson has waxed two solo sides, 'I Feel Like a Feather in the Breeze' and 'Breaking in a New Pair of Shoes.' Wingy Mannone's last four sides on Vocalion were cut under the personal supervision of Herb Allen, sales manager for Brunswick, and called a halt to the ill effects of over-recording. Titles included 'Round and Around,' which ranks second to Riley-Farley's version among a dozen waxings of that omnibus. Mannone has just made four new titles, 'Old Man Mose,' 'Rhythm in My Nursery Rimes,' 'Broken Record' and 'Please Believe Me.'

On Decca, Red Norvo cut 'Polly Wolly Doodle,' 'The Wedding of Jack and Jill,' 'Gramercy Square' and 'Decca Cards.' 'Gramercy Square' is a waltz arranged for 4-4 time by Eddie Sauter, and surprisingly successful. The only number that Red could cut loose on is 'Decca Cards,' which reminds of 'Honeysuckle Rose' and 'Lady Be Good,' and should be labeled 'Honeysuckle Lady.' Bob White from Madriguera's band was used on drums. Some great race records are due for release by Decca, headlining Georgia White in 'River Blues' and 'Can't Read, Can't Write.' The accompaniment includes Dave Barber on guitar and Pete Peterson on bass.

Victor has released some real swing discs on Blue Bird by Bernard Addison. Best title is 'Toledo Shuffle,' which features Addison's ace guitar work. Nucleus of the group taken from Adrian Rollini's gang, including Kirby Walker on the keys, A Freddie Jenkins waxing on the same label rates high. The Little Ramblers stuff on Blue Bird is getting more and more commercial, with Rollini again headlined on the vibraphone. With a little rope, this bunch could hit the high swing spots.

Chameleon Nitery

Paris, Jan.

Nitery known variously as 'Canal-boat' (La Patache) and 'Barge' (Le Chaland) but unofficially as the Submarine, has taken its second dive in as many weeks.

Opened before Christmas and closed three days later. Reopened under second name before New Year's, with Joan Warner, and closed again right after.

Said it will open again in March, but name is unannounced. In former years this spot was called Florida, Montmartre and Epoque, among others.

College Rhythm

The third of a series of articles on collegiate likes and dislikes as regards modern dance music and dance bands.

The writers, staff members of publications at their respective schools, have been asked by VARIETY to give the opinion of the student body as a whole rather than pass personal judgment. Neither has VARIETY given further instruction as to what was to be said or how. These articles appear as the undergraduates have written them, with the expressed opinions being their own.

VARIETY publishes the series to give music men and band leaders a cross-section of current undergraduate opinion on dance music and bands with the hope that it will be both informative and instructive. For what the college group has to say about dance music is deemed important in the trade.

DARTMOUTH

By Walter J. Dodd, Jr., '37
(Dartmouth 'Jack O' Lantern')

Since Dartmouth is isolated in the woods over 200 miles from New York, the student body has a good chance to listen to dance music of leading bands on the radio and on records, there being nothing much else to do for entertainment. Thus they come to be quite prejudiced on the subject.

There is no doubt but that Benny Goodman and Hal Kemp are the reigning favorites up here. Goodman especially because of his swing music, and he is this season's leading swinger. The excellence of his arrangements by Fletcher Henderson and Spud Murphy, and the swell treatment his musicians give them make him tops. His rhythm section, especially Gene Krupa at the drums, his trumpet and sax ride men, and his own inimitable clarinet playing give a distinctive touch to his music, the most danceable being played this winter. And Hal Kemp is superb for dancing also. His staccato brass section and smooth saxes, as well as the vocalizing by Skinny Ennis, are the features which distinguish his band. Goodman has the edge because of his ability to swing as well as play slow numbers.

Group of Six

Slightly below these two could be named a group of six bands who fail to make top ranking at Hanover only because of some minor drawbacks. There's Isham Jones, who is consistently good, with two fine vocalists, Eddy Stone and Woody Herman. And Ozzie Nelson, also always good, who has perfect rhythm, as well as Harriet Hilliard (he had Billie Trask while Miss Hilliard was in Hollywood) to sing for him. These two bands miss only because they do not have the originality of style of Goodman and Kemp. Ray Noble is handicapped by the type of numbers he plays continually, although lately he has been mixing up his selections more instead of playing one slow number after another. His band is fully as good as either of the top two, and it is only the uninspired quality of his music which the boys seem to have against him.

The Casa Loma orchestra has worn out its welcome and needs to regain its former pep and consequent popularity. A year and a half ago they were far better than any other band; now, with their trite and overcomplicated arrangements, they have dropped in the estimation of all but a few up here. Tommy Dorsey seems to be best known through his recordings, but it's a swell band which struggles along with such mediocre songs as 'Treasure Island' and 'Boots and Saddle.' His record of 'Weary Blues,' however, shows him only a little bit too stompy. The last of these six bands is Jimmie Lunceford, the ace colored band of the day. Among colored bands he is certainly the favorite of Dartmouth.

Beneath these bands, there are hosts of well known ones who fail to impress particularly. They're pretty good, but that's about all that can be said. For instance, Eddy Duchin is always good but he features his piano too much; Jimmie Dorsey's band is too corny on fast numbers, and too small to be effective on slow ones; Duke Ellington's weird discords have grown stale, and the bands of both Cab Calloway and Louis Armstrong are saved only by the personalities of their respective leaders.

As entertainers, Fred Waring and Paul Whiteman are supreme, but as dance orchestras they don't rate very high. Waring especially is poor for dancing because he does not maintain a steady tempo throughout an entire number. Whiteman's record of 'Farewell Blues' and 'Darktown Strutter's Ball' are over-orchestrated and show Goodman influences, but they are still two of the best numbers he has turned out in some time.

Controversial

The last group is one which may arouse quite some controversy. There is Clyde McCoy, who has mostly a squalling trumpet; Freddy Martin, Joe Moss, Al Donahue and other so-called 'society' dance bands, who don't cut much ice in this locale. Guy Lombardo and Jan Garber are a dreary gang, but Louis Prima could be good, like Mezz Mezzrow, Wingy Mannone, Mike Reilly, and the rest of those small swing bands if he would only take care to hit the rights notes with that trumpet of his instead of only coming within a couple of notes of the right ones.

Incidentally, there is an English band, Bert Ambrose, which can out-Goodman Goodman, but he probably won't be allowed to bring his own band over here—American musicians are pretty smart.

So these are Dartmouth opinions backed up by record sales, with Goodman leading, followed by Hal Kemp, Ambrose and Ray Noble, then by a group of Isham Jones, Jimmie Lunceford and Casa Loma, all about equal.

It seems to be quite clear that Dartmouth men go in for the swing bands.

(Next week: Pittsburgh)

In the Niteries

New vodka entertainment into the snooty Maisonette Russe in the basement of the Hotel St. Regis, N. Y., comprises George Oda, baritone; Jasha Nazarenko and Boris Belostozky, tenors; and Nadia Kortez, soprano, featuring some new and fetching Russian folk tunes. They're away from the now overdone 'O Chi Chorni' and 'Two Guitars,' and yet offer authentic steppe tunes, only difference being that the men are in impeccable white ties and tails and Mme. Kortez in a fashionable decolette.

Jack Lord and Ann Pritchard into the Royal Frolics, Chicago, for six weeks, after four weeks at the Paradise on Broadway. The latter wanted to hold the dancers over, but forgot to advise of the intended additional extension. They accommodated the N. Y. nitery by holding over a few extra days until another dance team was spotted to succeed them.

Newest socialite songstress at Hector's Club New Yorker, N. Y., is Lisa Potter, who follows Alice Hathaway Burrage of the Boston Back Bay Burrages; Timmie Dobbins, of Baltimore, the fashionable Foxcroft schoolmarm; Lois Elliman, et al. Miss Potter, like her predecessors, warbles pops in intimate manner and seemingly has no small influence on the b.o.

Professional pianologists like Jimmy Rogers, with his saucy pianologs, and Jack Meyers' tiptop dance combo, comprise the bulwark of the entertainment.

Dave Van Horn orchestra, currently at the Cafe Granada, Wilmington, doubled at the Queen theatre there, taking over the entire floor show as a unit. Included were Alma and Roland, Montez and Maria, Jack Young, Fay Moss, Costello Sisters and Nyla Taylor. Jack Beekman m.c.'ed.

BBB (Bobby Burns Berman) has departed his old stamping grounds, Hollywood, for six weeks as emcee of Art Young's Gangplank, Miami. Follows into Dallas before returning to the Coast.

Al Lyons combo in L. A. Paramount for six weeks stretch ending Feb. 12.

Palsey-Walsey

Chicago, Jan. 28.

What professional diplomatists term the 'entente cordiale' isn't so hot—not even warm—among the accredited authors of 'Music Goes Round and Around.' Red Hodgson, playing here, went to meet Mike Riley and Ed Farley at the train on their stopover en route New York to Hollywood. They shook hands, and then stood diffidently abcut for the news cameras, but refused to do an entwined-arms group.

Reporters tried to make 'em talk about the song and their respective parts therein, but Riley and Farley backed up and said no conversation unless a lawyer were present. So Red went to his theatre and Mike and Ed to a hotel to rest until train time.

French Casino Show Break-in in Paris Prior to N. Y. Opening

Paris, Jan.

Cliff Fischer's new French Casino show, which he's taking to New York, was tried out for four nights at St. Germain-en-Laye, Paris suburo, in a tiny theatre.

Done on strict q.t., as far as Paris is concerned, tryout not only gave Jean Le Seyeux, Frenchman who put show together, a chance to iron it out, but also made it possible to prove to U. S. customs officials that the costumes and sets have been used.

Show opens in New York tonight (29).

They Ask Izzy to Sing at Bowery Joint (Hollywood Version) on Berlin's 25th

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

He started at Mike's Bowery joint and he celebrated the 25th anniversary of his client that paved the way to fame in Mike's.

But the Mike's, wherein he celebrated the 25th anniversary of the writing of 'Alexander's Rag Time Band' was just a Hollywood replica. Everyone knows what that is. But regardless, when Irving Berlin walked into the foyer of the Ambassador hotel one night last week and was led through the swinging doors into the sawdust covered floors of Mike's in Hollywood instead of Chatham Square, New York, the little fellow whom they called Izzy in these lean days of his career, turned on the tear duct and little beads of emotion crept down his cheeks as he gulped in amazement at the duplication of scenes that were so dear to him.

There was the bar with the sign, 'Ask Izzy to Sing Sweet Marie from Sunny Italy.' The three bartenders made up like the hard boiled fellers that maced the coin for Mike. Then there was the old broken down, upright piano, with the kitty on top, and all around the room at the tables sat the tops in the song writing field as well as pic execs and Al Piantadosi, another graduate of the Chinatown terrain.

Irving was flabbergasted. He gasped for words which were lost in the tightness of his esophagus, then he came out of it and was 'Little Izzy' again.

Trots Out the Oldsters

He went to the piano and ground out 'Sweet Marie,' 'Alexander' and a number of his early tunes, while the boys with the sound newsreels ground and ground film which will some day reach the archives of posterity. He was a happy fellow and when he asked what it was all about he was told that the Song Writers Protective Association, strictly local, had appointed L. Wolfe Gilbert and Dave Dreyer as co-chairmen of a little shindig which was to celebrate the anniversary of 'Alexander's Rag Time Band' on the eve of the release of his latest pic endeavor, 'Follow the Fleet.'

After the boys had the spirit of the occasion imbued into their system by the spiritual cheer in Mike's, they moved into the Fiesta Room where the banquet and strictly Irving Berlin musical program took place. There were 155 of them there, and all in formal dinner clothes, dignified and sincere in paying a tribute to Berlin that would be impressive and everlasting.

When the boys had consumed some of their victuals and began to relax, Wolfe Gilbert introduced Jerome Kern as the toastmaster. Kern solemnly read various passages from the biography of Berlin by Alexander Woollcott, with numerous instances of it being interrupted by the introduction of the personalities who figured and associated with Berlin during his climb to fame. Piantadosi, the ragtime king of his day, was first chosen for greeting, then Joe Schenck, the fellow who worked in a drug store where they sold opium to Chinamen openly, with the customers, as Schenck explained it, selecting their wares in as discreet a way as women do marketing for grapefruit.

Bert Hanlon Reaches Back

Next came Bert Hanlon, who was a Chinatown habitue in the days of Berlin, and who gave a light touch to the evening goings on and told various anecdotes regarding the early days of Izzy the Singing Waiter.'

Of course, the Silver King, Max Winslow, who was described as Berlin's severest critic, was introduced with Kern telling what an essential power Winslow was in the progress of Berlin and his music company of which Max was the general manager for many years before he decided on a picture career.

Then came that musical festival. It started off with Ted Lewis and his bunch, who are playing in the Cocoanut Grove at the Ambassador, giving a modern rendition of their arangement of 'Alexander's Rag Time Band,' which shook the rafters of the room and on its completion was received with thunderous applause that lasted for almost two minutes. The song writers who were there did not squabble with each other; none of them tried to induce Johnny Green and the orchestra to play their tunes.

Down Through the Years

It was strictly a Berlin night and then 25 of the composers, everyone of them a topnotcher from Jerome Kern, who clicked off his arrangement with variations of 'Alexander's Rag Time Band,' down to the playing of Berlin's 1935 composition, 'Cheek to Cheek,' by Green and an RKO studio orchestra. They also played the score of 'Follow the Fleet,' the 1936 Berlin contribution for good measure. It was just a great night for the boys who create and dish out musical material.

Berlin made a short speech, something that he is unaccustomed to doing. He choked up, finally got words past his Adams apple, told the boys he was having a 'hell of a time,' spoke of a dinner the Friars slipped over on him in 1913 and then was rustled off to the piano. All of the 25 composers who had preceded him at the keys stood by as Arthur Johnson worked over them while 'Izzy' reincarnated the strains of 'Sweet Marie' and 'Remember.'

Inside Stuff—Music

Played everywhere now by every type of a band, on the air, in niteries and theatres, 'Music Goes 'Round and 'Round' is beginning to wear on some people. Tommy Rockwell (Rockwell-O'Keefe), agent for Riley and Farley, musician-writers of the novelty click, has also been affected. Rockwell-O'Keefe subsid, Santly-Joy, publishes the song.

He took Sid Piermont, Loew's booking head, to the Paramount, New York, to see the writers and their Onyx Club swing band. When they went into their key number, Rockwell grabbed his hat and dashed out of the theatre, yelling to Piermont:

'I can't stand that song.'

Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra, which was on national network program about a year ago, is set for a CBS series (Zotos waveset) which may cash in on unit's flash personal appearance capabilities. Would follow general outlines of recent Kate Smith radio broadcasts in different cities each week and previous tour of Guy Lombardo in connection with commercially sponsored program.

Spitalny's girl band at present is on vaudeville tour, but expected back in N. Y. before end of this month for auditions. Plan probably would call for making key spots throughout the nation traveling by motor bus. Roger White Productions is handling details of setting organization for new program.

Vincent Travers, opening at French Casino, New York, tomorrow (29) to baton show, almost lost the job last week when the Philly musicians' union heaved a wrench in contract machinery. Although leader was okay for playing local jobs, union threatened complaint to New York union unless he settled claim hanging fire against him from couple of seasons ago. It was over matter of week's wages to men in his band and had not been ironed out. Matter was finally dropped when Manny Sacks, head of Universal Artist Bureau, booking Travers, put up the dough.

Manifestation, to the professionals who are on the board of the Pictorial Review's contest for musical compositions from femmes, that there is great interest in American music, outside of ASCAP and similar ranks, is borne out by the 10,218 manuscripts so far admitted. The prospect of wading through over 10,000 compositions—and more to come, as the contest isn't over—is staggering Deems Taylor, Paul Whiteman, Rudy Vallee and Nat Shilkret, who have agreed to serve on the judging committee.

Song pluggers, being creatures of habit, the Warner Bros. group of hit exploiteers have been doing a mild chafing-at-the-bit of recent weeks, with many a former surefire plug getting the go-by because of radio and other restrictions. On the other hand, the WB elimination has been a windfall for ASCAP-member publishers who find their outlets 25-40% increased automatically, with the WB firms out of the immediate competitive field—at least until the major networks take out Warner licenses.

Seven years ago, while abroad, Frederick Hollander wrote two tunes for Marlene Dietrich for 'The Blue Angel.' She selected 'Falling in Love Again.' Hollander, now at Paramount Coast studios, was selected to clef a tune for 'Desire,' Miss Dietrich's pic. Actress, remembering after seven years, asked him to elaborate on the other tune. With Leo Robin he has written 'Awaken and Dream' which she will sing in the picture.

Oklahoma rangers have been the kiss-off for several Hollywood orchestras making the cow belt lately. They have been taking the state's liquor closing laws in their hands. Nick Stuart and his band are among several who have treked out of Oklahoma during last several months because closing of niteries has terminated engagements. Stuart did one week of a three weeks' spotting.

Canning music instead of doing it in sheet form in order to hasten Pioneer's 'Dancing Pirate' is the innovation of Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart. Jock Whitney and John Speaks listen to it in projection room.

Bock Sells Out

Cleveland, Jan.

Joe Bock, co-owner of Mayfair Casino, has split with Harry Propper and other backers of the local theatre-cabaret after a four-year partnership.

He sold his interest to Max Marmorstein, real estate and theatre operator.

Berlin, Inc., boasts that the only popular song Pres. Roosevelt requested to be played on his Birthday Ball Broadcast, Jan. 30, is 'Moon Over Miami.'

NEW ACTS

WAYNE KING ORCH. (14)
Music
80. Mins.; Full. (Special)
Palace, Chicago

After having turned down bids for three years Wayne King finally took the vaude leap. It's a leap he took too late, but having taken should have been fortified with some rousing publicity and exploitation. Here, without that advance thumping,there was just a handful when caught, But that handful was vociferous in its enjoyment of the 'waltz king's' music. King does turn in 30 minutes of ear-soothing melodies. There is no question about King's ability to handle an orchestra, nor his arrangements and style.

Bulk of the act is composed of waltz tunes, but King breaks up this tempo with some dives into 'Goofus,' 'Some of These Days' and a clarinet novelty number.

All played beautifully. And it's nice to see a band on a vaude stage with the music all memorized.

King himself grabs a saxophone and leads the orchestra through a couple of numbers, and he can really handle the instrument.

King is a bit too stiff on the stage. In the dancehall business he is recognized as an orchestra leader with ability to play to a ballroom mob. He has a sweeping, arm-waving style in a hoofery. King is evidently approaching his vaude tour on the mistaken basis that the variety audience is different. That's not so. Gold.

RITA DEL GARDE
Magician
11 Mins.; Full
G. O. H., N. Y.

Spotted as opener on a four-act bill, this femme Houdini offering lacks selling power in the chatter department and consequently garnered only a lukewarm reception from a setup house. Tricks in themselves are passable, though generally familiar. A sag develops when the periphery of hoke fails to generate adequate buildup.

Miss Del Garde, together with a couple of assistants, warms up by cutting a knot in a ribbon without cutting the ribbon, and tearing a folded newspaper which, when unfolded, is again intact. Progressing to more intricate stuff, she next unreels the disappearing dove trick, and then swallows needles and thread with the needles emerging threaded. Flash finale has a girl appear from an apparently empty chest. Props used only to a very limited extent. Magician is gowned in black to suit her Spanish billing and makes an okay appearance.

No previous mention of this one in the files though the patter sounds well-grooved and the props show signs of knocking around.

KAZANOVA and Her Tziganes
Gypsy Orch.
20 Mins.; Full
Fox, Wash., D. C.

Gypsy orchestra led by a lady fiddler from the French Casino, New York, with a punch. Music has beauty and zip.

Curtain goes up on band seated in semi-circle and Kazanova, in black velvet dress, whooping it up on violin. Sixteen male instrumentalists, mostly strings, clad in red and blue Gypsy outfits. Act is straight playing of 'Blue Danube,' 'Dark Eyes,' etc., with baritone stepping out for vocal interludes. No business or supplemental acts. Only tricks are in exaggerated fiddling and Kazanova's rushing from player to player and muttering orders in stage whispers.

Conductress isn't the type to mean anything from an s.a. standpoint, but audiences will get kick out of way she handles the band.

EMERSON'S MOUNTAINEERS (6)
Hillbillies
14 Mins.;
G. O. H., . .

Moonshine country menage closed here as the only turn rating an encore. Mat audience cheered heartily. Typical stuff has been worn thin around here, but it would never be guessed by the reception accorded this one.

Five of septet stick to regulation instruments, comic supplies kitchen utensil improvisations, all of which are well done.

Majority of numbers are familiar to Ozark homeground. 'Red River Valley,' 'Wreck of Old 97,' etc. There's an accordion solo that hits the spot. Break away from type with 'Round and Round' vocalized by comedian.

LUCKY SISTERS
Dancing
7 Mins.; One
G. O. H., N. Y.

Good fortune name provides might turn to grief if girls don't jazz up their entry. Dusky duo have little in the first half of the act spoken; song entrance and trite tapping give a slow start.

Costumes of red and black satin briefs are fresh. Dancing lacks this quality until near the finish. Last portion of tapping and twisting is much better than first effort. Heavy girl does best work of two.

ADA and MARGE REVUE (5)
Dancing, Acrobatics
8 Mins.; Full
G. O. H., N. Y.

In vaude's halcyon days, this act, after some polishing, could have been turned into a snappy tumbling and acrobatic turn. As is, the four youngsters and their pappy (who makes a brief appearance in the finale) evidently won't risk buying costumes and props. Instead they've attempted to direct their talents partially to terpsing, but the formula lacks coherence. Where their acrobatic training is given a chance they do okay. Dancing, however, serves to put a brake on things.

Two fellows and one of the girls open with a tap routine, followed by solo exhibitions. Stepping is not impressive, but the girl's neat grooming and the agility of all three makes up for a lot. At this point there is a distinct cleavage and the act henceforth becomes pure tumbling with a second girl joining in. Foursome goes through a dizzy series of flips, cartwheels, etc., plus a few snatches of control stuff that clearly exhibits expert tutoring.

For a close the family introduces the aged pater who struts a few stunts and makes a clipped curtain speech. Big supper audience here stuck with it to the end and was receptive. Act occupied No. 4 (the close) on the bill.

CHARLES and LILLIAN GERARD
Songs, Piano
9 Mins.; One
G. O. H., N. Y.

One-armed piano player and femme partner in a mixture of vocal duets and solo piano playing, latter being the magnet for the audience. Act evidently had its inception in some small radio station (there is a casual mention to this effect), and the pair is as yet not familiar with the mechanics of catering to a flesh-and-blood audience. Costuming, especially on the part of the femme, is not destined to cause any neck craning.

Vocal work centers around stock arrangements of pop tunes, and is chiefly interlude fodder leading up to the piano player's exhibition on the ivories. Does his keyboard massage with a fair wallop, banging out Rachmaninoff's 'Prelude,' 'Sextet' from Lucia, and later a pop medley. Fact that he uses only his left hand, together with the natural sympathy for one working under physical obstacles, brought forth a nice reception for this division. Allotted the deuce, and over.

THREE O'HEA SISTERS
Songs
5 Mins.; One
G. O. H., N. Y.

Audience at viewing paid more attention to the flashy curves and satin gowns of the vocal trio, than the singing. Girls are young and lookers, bearing down on the s.a. appearance. They use a microphone and swing into their numbers swiftly. But this steady speed tends toward monotony after a few samples.

For a closer trio offers its 'own conception' of a classic swing tune, with interludes devoted to radio and screen take-offs. Deuced in second groove and fair enough. Byal.

Unit Reviews

Passing Parade of '36

(ORPHEUM, LINCOLN)

Lincoln, Jan. 25.

In two weeks Ed Gardner has done an about face. A fortnight ago he was in this house with his 'Fads and Fancies,' which was as good a show as Wilbur Cushman has on his time, but he's back with 'Passing Parade' and it's n.s.g. Looks like Ed's been preached at so much about variety bills, he's gone in for variety production. Every other show he's put out in the last two seasons has been a doll show, with femme emphasis, and 'Parade' is the other way, there being but four girls in the unit and their offerings slight.

Show has but four weeks under its belt, and the need of comedy is evident. Gardner is bringing on a laugh act, although it's not expected for this date. Show has one first class novelty, and another acrobatic turn which will excite, but other than that there are those who will accuse Ed of trying to make money with this opera.

Bert Dexter, in the position of m. c., busts into the spot with a short intro by Mick Reynolds' band, augmented here with the house boys. Dexter announces acts as if calling an order of ham and eggs in a lunchroom with a bowling alley annex. The Chan Knoll trio waltzes on first. Knoll's principal routine is adagio farther down in the bill, and his bid for the original is flipping two girls at the same time, which isn't bad.

Brada Boys, next, would have a genuine act if they'd learn pantomime. Their talk detracts from an otherwise good offering, which is a gob of acrobatic clowning. Smallest of the two has some beauties in butterflies and spotting flips. All their stuff could be sold twice as good without a line of chatter, just biz.

D Sisters, who are not sisters, but answer to the names of Dingman and Dale, are the sole femmes to stand by themselves. They have good costumes and an initial terp offering which calls for an agile mid-section. Half of their sale is the ballet from the male background, although they're very fair lookers. They have a ballet bit later.

Four Bars of Harmony, depicting the barber shop as it once was, is unique for just an old-fashioned quartet—unique because it's the first one around in many a season. 'Music Goes Round' they sing, and also the perennial 'Tiger Rag.' The local raccoon coats were very unappreciative. Dexter and Bud George out of the quartet fool around before the band, the latter showing how to blow the trumpet, too. Then Carl Lynn sheds his sax to sing 'Alone,' a very poor song choice for his voice.

Great Koban, Jap head hopper, said to be the only man able to climb 11 stairs steps on his conk, is saved for the finish. He juggles in a head stand, too. Fine material and a swell feature to leave off with. Finale has everybody out in an applauding gesture. Time was 41 minutes this show. Comedy will help, but Ed was better in his girlier days. Barney.

FOLIES DES FEMMES

(PALACE, CLEVELAND)

Cleveland, Jan. 17.

Palace's booking of 'Folles Des Femmes,' a Cleveland-produced nitery revue that ran about six weeks at the Mayfair Casino, almost sets an unparalleled precedent for the RKO house. Only time done before was LeRoy Smith's local 'Cotton Club Revue,' penciled in by same house a year ago to fill in a holiday week, but there's no comparison.

Though lacking in big names, it's a fairly elaborate girl-and-dance show with plenty of flash, about six good standard vaude acts, a French atmosphere and a cast of around 60. Net price asked by Mike Speciale, booker and producer, is $5,500. Addition of three more acts for its vaude bow, to give it more variety, brings cost to $7,500. Bill Howard of New York flew in to give the opening a once-over for RKO. Tentatively set for Fox in Detroit Jan. 24, followed by Chicago Palace Feb. 1, Cincinnati and other dates.

Parisian flavor is due to Earl Leslie, who directed it at Harry Propper's theatre-cabaret. He used to stage Mistinguett's revues and goes to Buenos Aires next month. Sets for couple of nude numbers are reminiscent, but eye-appealing. While far from being an Albertina Rasch chorus, the 20 girls are lookers with lots of pep. Best number is a nude on a big papier-mache elephant, with five more on a revolving magazine stand in a Parisian number.

The Briants, pantomimists, highlight for best comedy relief. Drunk with dummy head does a corking bit of clowning. Maurice Colleano and family do their usual flip-flops as an added act, a good one that needles the pace of show. Paul Sydell brings out Spotty for a swell dog turn, making the pup balance on his thumb for two encores. Musical hoke worth several laughs is shanked up by 'Prof.' Lamberti on his xylophone. The chief stand-out is really the 'Human Ford,' put in at last minute, which goes through some uncanny tricks without a driver.

Plenty of okay dance bits, ranging from Lee Purdy, blond eccentric tapper who looks like Ann Pennington in her earlier days, to Rosemary Dearing, toe-twirler with looks; Karen Jardine, in a flashy semi-nude with hoops, although she has more figger than talent; Zita and Anis, who have a snappy Cossack number made impressive by smart production; Jay Seiler, whose slithery dance on barrel-hoops still clicks after many seasons; Harvey Bell, who tenors during choruses.

'Folles' ran nearly 85 minutes at first performance, but quicker routining and a few cuts brought it down to about 70. Considering its two carloads of talent and ballyhoo possibilities, show looks as it might have an above-average chance on tour. Pullen.

JOE COOK UNIT

('Topsy Turvy Revue')
(KEITH'S, PROVIDENCE)

Providence, Jan. 23.

Joe Cook's new 'Topsy Turvy Revue' needs plenty of bolstering. Granting the usual opening circumstances, the show is still far from good. A good flash number, some comedy by Cook and an average line of chorus girls sums up the show. Very little dough in sight. Scenery so-so and costumes for the chorus nothing unusual.

At the second show the axe had begun to fall. Cook sent an SOS to New York for more talent.

Cook of course works hard and seldom is off the stage. He does a bit on tightwire, boxes a 'chimpanzee,' displays his usual contraptions and gadgets, tells a baseball story which is lost on the audience, and mixes in with a quintet of acrobats with good effect. He's the whole show.

Aside from three numbers Cook gets no help. A good 20 minutes pass slowly and tediously before the audience really gets something. Miacahua, the Brazilian tightwire walker, unloosens well earned applause for originality of her performance. Prior to this four or five numbers have been staged in confusion. Then Cook comes on with a bit he calls 'Indian Lecture.' Some mildly amusing chatter. Next follows Columbus and Caperton, dance team, take-off on Astaire-Rogers doing the 'Piccolino.'

Following is what has the promise of being a good number, but somehow misses. Pat Walshe, midget billed as 'Tarzan,' comes out on the stage dressed as a chimpanzee. The disguise is clever. Walshe is put through his paces and Cook breaks in for what is supposed to be the 'uncover' bit, but the whole thing doesn't jell.

Three Deweys, jugglers, go through an average routine with Cook. Next number spots Kay Hamilton, singer, the chorus and Columbus and Caperton. This is the only dressy number in the show.

Cook comes on again with Henry Scott for a bit of wacky prose reading, and then an excellent piano act with Scott at the keyboards. Scott's novelty is playing with mittens.

The Jansleys, acrobats, provide the flash, putting on an interesting show. Cook mixes in with the quintet, and does one or two difficult numbers. Not much of a finale.

Sixteen in the chorus, and 43 people altogether in the unit. Only original musical number is 'Dancing In a Dream.' Marc.

V.&Y. Hit New High for Dance Acts; $8,000 Net Wkly. Deal Set with B&K

Chicago, Jan. 28.

After having collected $7.000 net for one week's engagement at the Balaban & Katz Chicago for an all-time high salary for a dance team, Veloz & Yolanda crack that mark by the okaying of a new contract with B. & K. for a repeat appearance within the year at the rate of $8,000 net weekly on a two-week guarantee.

Deal, negotiated last week by W. H. Stein of Music Corporation of America, calls for Veloz and Yolanda to play the date for B. & K. sometime between August 1936 and June 1937, with the dates to be at the option of the dancers themselves. According to the contract, B. & K. must clear booking time for the team on six-weeks notice of their availability with the exception of three weeks before Christmas and two weeks before Easter.

New contract calls for 36 performances weekly with only three days of the week playable on a six-performance schedule. Should more than 36 shows be played, the team will receive $300 per extra performance.

RKO'S 30% CUTS IN UPSTATE N. Y.

RKO has increased the acts' salary cuts already in effect in its upstate New York vaude houses, now deducting 30% instead of 25% in Rochster, Schenectady, Troy and Albany. All are split-week houses playing five acts each half.

RKO is also operating the Jefferson, New York, with the lowest stage budget ever for a circuit-owned house in the city, with the possible exception of its own Tilyou, Coney Island. Jeff's budget is $650 for five acts on three-day first halves. Last halves the house plays double features.

Circuit's plans to resume vaude at some of its other nabe spots, like the Madison, Brooklyn; Coliseum, N. Y., and Fordham, Bronx, are still in the talking stage.

LOEW'S TESTS STAGE SHOWS IN AKRON

Akron, Jan. 28.

Loew's theatre here, after more than a year of straight pictures, switches to unit shows Friday (31), with 'Hollywood Cabaret Revue' as the initial stage attraction. If biz warrants, other units will follow regularly.

First unit is headed by Lew Parker. Others are Ames and Arno, Ben Yost's Hollywood Octet, Edna Janis, Mildred Fenton, Jack Starr, Estes Jones and the Five International Dancers.

Palace, opposition house, Carroll's 'Vanities' for four starting same day.

BENNY UNIT'S 9 WEEKS AT $12,500

Jack Benny and Mary Livingston (Mrs. Benny), in a unit whose remaining personnel is yet to be set, have been booked for nine weeks in Total cost of the show will be $12,500 net, with the Lyons office setting the deals.

Unit opens at the State, Cleveland, week of Feb. 21, Loew's assuming stage shows at the house just for the one week. Show then goes to the Stanley, Pittsburgh; State, New York; Fox, Washington; Century, Baltimore; Earle, Philadelphia; Metropolitan, Boston; Fox, Detroit, and winds up its tour at the Chicago, Chicago, week of May 15. Five of the nine weeks are for Loew.

Benny's Sunday night broadcasts over the NBC network will be aired from each town he plays on the p.a. route.

What Started as an Am. Show Becomes Vaude Presentation

Amateur craze has taken a unique turn here at Shea's Buffalo. Show was originated as broadcast over WBEN from stage of theatre in tieup with Buffalo Evening News.

Vocal and instrumental talent pretty fair at first, but then singers began getting worse and few instrumentalists showed up. A tap dancer was thrown in occasionally to bolster show's appearance on stage but this didn't provide much in the way of entertainment for stay-at-home listeners.

So now what started out as a ra- amateur show isn't broadcast at all, but is continued every Thursday, 7:30 to 8 p.m., as a regular stage presentation in the theatre. And since acrobats and jugglers are no longer barred, it's strictly a vaude show.

Only other house in town presenting amateurs regularly is Palace, burley house.

Dill on Frisco WPA

San Francisco, Jan. 28.

Max Dill, former coast trouper and partner of Clarence Kolb, went into San Francisco WPA work Monday (27) in charge of the vaudeville division. Dill has been running a gas station here, which he owns, but will devote his entire time to WPA activities henceforth.

Kolb is in retirement on Hayward ranch.

WOR FOLDS NEW YORK BARN DANCE ATTEMPT

WOR, New York, folded its Saturday night vaude presentation in the small-seater atop the New Amsterdam in Times Square. Station had announced an experimental period of four weeks, but decided to give it up after the second show, which was Saturday night (25).

Show, which included a hillbilly troupe, was booked by the station's artists bureau. Half hour of the two and a half hours which each show consumed was devoted to the broadcasting of a hillbilly program from the stage. Admission was 85c.

Jail Sentence Given Pianist Betty Sheridan

leine McKinley, 33, ho also claims to have been in one of the was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of six months Judge Owen W. Bohan in General Sessions, N. Y., last Thursday (23). She had pleaded guilty to grand larceny in two indictments.

Mrs. McKinley, who was known professionally as Betty Sheridan, admitted stealing $433 from Siegrid Kanari, a masseuse and gym instructor at Mack Levy's Gymnasium in the Chanin Building, Lexington avenue and 43rd street, last October. The defendant had become chummy with Miss Kanari while undergoing reducing treatments at the gym.

Complainant said she invited Mrs. McKinley to her home on Washington square. There the pianist said she was the owner of a combination night club and gymnasium for women in South America. She offered Miss Kanari a job for $20 a week and expenses. hey even made out a formal contract and were to sail on Nov. 1. The defendant continued to delay the sailing date, but in the meantime was obtaining sums of money from Miss Kanari supposedly to purchase a suitable wardrobe for the masseuse. When she had obtained a total of $433, the pianist disappeared. She was arrested two weeks later.

Second indictment charged the woman with getting $840 from Miss Annie Cullen, manager of the Lourdes Book shop, 138 East 32nd street. Mrs. McKinley claims she worked from 1923 to 1926 as pianist under Frank Jaques of the Strand Theatre Corp., Boston, and also for Nate Fenton at the Palais Royal hotel, Buffalo, in 1927.

Units Getting More Time in Carolinas

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 28.

Units are finding somewhat better booking in the Carolinas since the first of the year, with several houses changing policy to include stage shows with pictures. Two Charlotte theatres have added vaudeville since Jan. 1, the Imperial and the Criterion.

In this territory now are: Paul Garden's 'Mixed Nuts,' Bell's 'Hawaiian Follies,' Uncle Ezra's 'Barnyard Frolics,' Harry Clark's 'Stars of Mirth,' Halton Powell's 'Scrapbook,' ige and Crider', 'Capers of Mirth,' and Seabee Hayworth and Marion Andrews and Happy in a smaller unit. Captain Little Sampson' Anderson is working along through this area. El Wyn is making a circuit of the larger cities with a midnight ghost show.

Harlem Invades Pitt.

He will continue his office in N. Y.

Babe Egan's Redheads Breaking In on Coast

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Seeking eastern vaude dates, Babe Egan and Her Redheads have reorganized and are rehearsing currently.

Combo will play several break-in dates locally.

MOSQUE FOLDS, $42,000 IN RED

Mosque Newark, N. J., after three weeks of a vaudeville-picture-dancing policy at 40c. top, failed to open Wednesday (22). Theatre lost $42,000 in the three week with Henry (NVA) Chesterfield and his two brothers going for $17,000. Balance was lost by Ernest W. Mandeville, who also backed the one-show legiter 'Truly Valiant' on Broadway recently and had a 50% interest in the operation of the Mosque.

Nominal operators of the house were Chesterfield and J. L. McCurdy, as the Chesterfield Theatres Corp. According to Chesterfield, he and his brothers were forced out, with McCurdy supposedly digging up a fresh bankroll. New backers, Max Tishler, who is in the electrical equipment business in Newark, and H. R. Pausin, of the Pausin Engineering Co., stepped out of the picture at the last minute and McCurdy closed the doors. Theatre in the third and final week had been given to the operators rent-free by the Prudential Life Insurance Co., in order to keep it open.

So far as is known, all the acts in last week's show were paid off in full. Only act known to have a claim against the house is El Brendel, who received $500 on his $1,500 contract for the second week, and through the American Federation of Actors, is trying to collect from Chesterfield for the balance.

McCurdy is taking over supervision of the Major Bowes amateur units for the southern territory.

To stave off the early threat of the Mosque, Loew's planned to revert to stage shows at its Newark house. This is now cold, though, with the Mosque's closing.

Det. Children's Society Seeks Vode Team that Left Infant Daughter

Children's Aid Society of Detroit is seeking the whereabouts of a vaudeville couple known as Jack and Margaret Shore. They left their infant daughter at a private nursing home in that city, according to the Society.

The infant, Jacqueline Shore, is at present in a Detroit hospital. She is eight months old. Claimed that her parents placed her at the boarding home last September, promising to return for her shortly.

According to the Society, the couple have appeared with the Shorty Sutton company and the W. G. Wade shows. The mother is also known as Peggy O'Neille.

LOSES $52,000 SUIT FOR BACKSTAGE SOCK

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Howard Kane, vaude actor, lost his suit for $52,000 damages against Harry McFeely, stage manager of Warners Downtown theatre, in which he alleged McFeeley beat him up. Alleged socking took place when McFeely dropped curtain between Kane and his partner in 1934.

Plaintiff said he had been making $200 weekly, but that he had been unable to work since asserted assault.

TWO TO ENGLAND

Roy Tracy, former protege of Ben Bernie, set for 16 weeks in England starting Feb. 24, singer-hoofer opening in Glasgow, Scotland.

Jack Douglas, now with Buddy Rogers at the Roney Plaza in Miami, also goes to England week later, March 2. He opens in Liverpool for eight-weeks' tour. Herman Bernie office agented.

Example of Vaude Unit's Experiences On Tour, and How They Strand 'Em

Baltimore, Jan. 26.

Editor, VARIETY:

On Wednesday, ices of Paris' finished its engagement at the Imperial theatre, Zanesville, O., and in accordance with instructions from the Gus Sun Agency, Inc., of Springfield, travelled to Parkersburg, W. Va., to lay off for three days and open the Broadway theatre on Sunday, Jan. 12, for a run of four days. We accepted the date solely on the strength of legitimate correspondence, with confirmations by Western Union, from the Gus Sun Agency and signed by Bob Shaw, general mgr. and our representative. This correspondence carried the following information:

1. We were the show booked into the Broadway theatre for the 'gala' opening of the house.

2. The theatre was in the hands of one Eugene Devoe and F. G. Duncan, who had written to Bob Shaw requesting a show to open their house.

3. The terms of the agreement were; a minimum guarantee of $100 per day for four days; or 50% of the gross over and above the guarantee. In other words, by this peculiar arrangement handed to us by Shaw, we were assured of no less than $400 for the company's share.

With complete faith in our agent, the company arrived in Parkersburg, and we got off to a great start by not being able to find the theatre. We then checked into the Monroe hotel, and after its manager, Mr. Spates, had examined our Broadway theatre agreements, he advanced us credit in both the dining room and hotel. I then went out, with directions, and found the theatre to be three miles off to the south-side of town, and across a 10c. toll bridge. The theatre itself was in such a disgraceful condition that it defies description. Regardless, we were bound to an agreement, and still not doubting our agent, receded to fulfill it.

After investigating, found that Devoe and Duncan, lessees had not deposited a bond with any bank to guarantee the show's salary of at least $400.

Unit On Its Own

In addition to that, I later learned that the Gus Sun Agency, which, incidently I (and the entire company) am holding to blame for the whole affair, had made no investigation of the responsibility of Duncan and Devoe; had not tried to get a report on the condition of the theatre, or its location; had given us every reason to believe that we'd probably do a tremendous business, etc., etc., Duncan and Devoe had put us in without a picture, newsreel, or short, and expected a one hour and 45 minutes show, which we gave them, at 40c. for adults, 25c. for children. In four days the house grossed $130).

After the last show Sunday night, a 100-word night letter was sent to Bob Shaw in Springfield explaining in full conditions, including the day's business. An answer came back not to worry, that we had a $400 guarantee for four days. From that time on, Gus Sun, Inc., practically dropped us cold. And we had been playing for them since the last week in November.

On Tuesday night, Eugene Devoe left town, and through a Mr. Hichle, owner of the Hiehie theatre, we were recommended to a lawyer, Walter Crofton. To him we took all letters, wires, agreements, etc., leaving the case in his hands. We were told to finish the last show Sunday night under any conditions. We played to 12 people. Eugene Devoe, to all appearances, had skipped town, so we entered suit and attached the box office, implicating Duncan. Our attorney discovered that Duncan didn't have a cent and was thoroughly irresponsible, so our attorney fixed the suit to cover our bills. In plain words, every single member of 'Spices of Paris,' 22 people in all, was stranded, practically penniless, with a $217 hotel bill to pay, and a chance to work in Detroit given to us by Lew Kane, Detroit agent. (I might add that our unit was considered by house managers to be one of the finest of its size.)

To come to the point, the hotel stood fast for its bill and refused to let anybody budge. After much wrangling it agreed to keep the baggage, including musicians' instruments, and let us go. Mr. Hichie lent us gasoline money. We were 600 miles from New York, nd we started on the long trek home. No sooner had we crossed the Ohio state line than the police stopped us, took our two drivers into custody, and back we went to Parkersburg. They had left insufficient baggage (they couldn't have left any more) and were thrown in jail, facing a one year maximum sentence, innocent victims of the entire situation.

Excursion Fares—No Meals

One by one the people managed to wire relatives, families, and friends, and by the grace of God there happened to be a $7 excursion to New York (normal fare is $21). Most of them were naturally forced to leave all belongings behind with the Hotel Monroe and were lucky to get out with a tooth brush; besides, a 16-hour ride with no meals in view. Thus ends the story to date.

I might add that we had about 20 weeks of southern time booked beginning Feb. 20, which is now, of course, lost.

Very truly yours,

Bill Kent.

Walter Crofton, Jr., informed VARIETY by telegram that Devoe and Duncan, operators of the theatre, are financially unreliable. He added that the 'slightest investigation' by the Gus Sun agency would have prevented what he terms a 'lamentable situation.'

Crofton is entering suit against the Sun office in Parkersburg for the unit, claiming it is liable for sending the company to a financially irresponsible house.

Claim Relief Acts Solicited by AFA For Membership

Inside reports concerning the circus and vaudeville units in the Works Progress Administration theatre project are to the effect that relief actors were solicited to join the American Federation of Actors. Charles Mosconi has been in charge of those units, with Ralph Whitehead more recently in the picture. Both are officers in the A.F.A.

Walter Diggs is manager of the circus units, two others also connected having been transferred after disputes with Diggs, it is alleged.

At least one protest meeting of relief actors in the units was held, when racial discrimination charges were aired.

Cantor's $12,500 Week In Philadelphia; 2-a-Day Roadshow Maybe Later

Plans for Eddie Cantor to tour a two-a-day variety show at $2 top, under auspices of himself and the William Morris agency, are off for the time being. Cantor goes into Warners' Earle, Philadelphia, with a unit the week of Feb. 14.

In Philly, the Cantor show will get a guarantee of $12,500 net for six days (no Sunday shows) against a 50-50 split of the gross.

Cantor will own the unit, cast of which is still under discussion by the comedian and Morris office, but the Cantor air cast will be in. The two-a-day roadshow plans, if materializing, will follow the Earle booking.

Mills Bros. As Is

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

The Mills Bros. will continue despite death Friday (24) of John Mills, basso of the quartet. Father of the boys, who has been working in act for past two months during John's illness, will become regular member of the turn. illing will not be altered.

Act plays the vaudfilm Hippodrome here starting Friday (31).

Inside Stuff—Vaude

Music Corp. of America in spotting sundry attractions has been more or less making it a rule to alternate between RKO and Balaban & Katz on booking its attractions in the midwest. Last year, MCA spotted Veloz and Yolanda with RKO; this year the dancers with their Shep Fields orchestra were spoted into the B&K Chicago, while next year it is unofficially agreed, RKO's Palace, Chi, will again get 'em.

As regards Wayne King's orchestra, also via MCA, there was spirited bidding among the circuits, particularly between Paramount and RKO; and between RKO and B&K in Chicago. Bids were boosted accordingly and RKO finally guaranteed 11 weeks at $8,500 net. King doesn't do the entire show but holds down just one spot with either three or four additional acts. Extra acts have been the Craddocks (French acro quartet out of the French Casino, N. Y.) at $600; Arren and Broderick at $750; and Bliss, Lewis and Ash at $400. Besides the $8,500 net, King splits 50-50 over certain figures. In Chicago the break is $25,000.

King turned to the personals in the theatres only after many years of hesitating, feeling that his orchestra did not belong in theatres. King turned to theatres after playing a series of one-night stands in dancehalls, with business reported as being pretty spotty. In most of these dates King asked for $1,000 guarantee for a night's dansapation against a split. In one town in Iowa business was so bad that King himself made an adjustment with the dancehall.

Millard's, Oakland, Cal., Burly Try Ends After 2d Day's $52 Gross

San Francisco, Jan. 28.

Surrounded by Sheriff's deputies, labor commissioner's representatives and bill collectors, Sint Millard, San Francisco's 'King of Burlesque,' finally mustered a troupe together for the Oakland opening of the Great Millard Show—65 People—etc. Advance sale for first night said to have been $1,100, but second night receipts, about $52, called for sudden ending of Oakland run.

Back to Frisco went the show, set to reopen the closed Columbia, recently housing the Minsky show, on Monday night (20). But this had to be postponed due to insistence of landlord, lighting company and other's demands for cash in hand before turning over keys. Dailies ran ads on intermittent sked, cash being required with copy.

Show finally opened here Wednesday (22), with town flooded with paper. At count-up time, box-office looked like snow-storm scene in a Hollywood studio. Ducat holders paid 25c tax charge. Union help reported to be receiving pay a day in advance of actual work, else no soap.

BURBANK, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.

Burlesque here, with twin-bill picture competition, has gone dualer itself. Here at the Burbank for 25c., 50c. and 75c., the patrons get a feature picture, 50 minutes of burlesque from a white troupe and another 50 minutes from a colored aggregation. On the night caught, the program ran too long for a good turnover so the management took the third reel out of 'Glass Key' (Par).

Burbank is operated by the Popkin and Ringer Bros. Former pair started out with one theatre, now operate 22 nabe houses in the county. Latter pair, like burley and have so far made it pay, causing a few pangs of jealousy in the bosoms of the Dalton Bros. (all local burlesque is a family affair), who have been the Kings of Burlesque on the Coast for a dozen years. Burbank is three blocks from the Dalton's Follies. Both are on Main street.

Burbank white troupe is the typecal stock burley assortment playing in a scratch house. They're no better or worse than others similar in type and policy. Their bits are standard, 'Water in the Pants,' 'Move Over,' 'Bridal Night' and the other pieces known by heart by every burley comic and his straight man. Burbank productions are staged by Billy Mack, who now and then slips in a class bit of clean pantomine to keep in trim. Others in the cast are Joe Maloney, singing juve; Billy Pitzer, straight; Charlie Fritcher and James Hewett, both putty-nosed comics strictly from Dixie.

Strippers are Ermain Taylor, Onyna Lead and Bee Rogers and can't sell their routines. Lack class. All are heavy hip-swingers and well-coached Los Angeles burley patrons expect little more. As would seem to be the rule with strip dancers, all are gravel-throated warblers.

Line of 18 girls are slew footed gals who have managed to master a time step and little more. Producer of the numbers always manages to get one challenge number out of the line. It's pretty bad, with the entire line doing bumps as their individual specialties.

For the colored end of the evening there's 10 girls in the line, two comics, two femme singers, both overweight, and a pair of dancers. They manage to give the locals the impression of what happens on the good old levee mixed up with some blue gags. L.A. is a pushover for colored entertainment, so this locally recruited band of sepia thesps please the Main street patrons, but could do little for any other audience. Colored band of 12, all faking, are on the stage; for the white troup, they switch to the pit.

Whole thing has been an experiment with the producers who have been doing good business. Figuring they have established a new burlesque, they tripped to New York where they have corraled, several comics and a producer who will journey west shortly. Jack Diamond and Jack Greenman, both recently here with Minsky's show, are prospects, also Russell Trent. Producer will try and establish another house in San Francisco and give 16-week contracts, which they figure should be an attraction for better performers.

Undoubtedly their business is good. House at its scale can do around $5,000 weekly and has come near that figure several times recently. Going in for heavy baliy on stands, newspapers and trucks. Midnight shows on Saturday are those slumming affairs but are always capacity. House seats around 1,400. Call.

15 YEARS AGO

(From VARIETY and Clipper)

J. Stuart Blackton had just hired Lady Diana Manners for films. Predicted that within five years society stars would push the old-time actors into the background. Now he knows he was wrong. Lady Diana brodied.

New prohibition liquor raising such havoc among actors that E. F. Albee issued an official warning.

Producer warning his associates that a New York rep was not so good on the road. Pointed to Laurette Taylor, who ran two years in New York and opened in Phila. to $700. Marjorie Rambeau, after two seasons in town, did $1,600 on the week in Syracuse.

With Hollywood on the downbeat, salaries were being slashed. Non-contract actors were cut 10 to 40%. They came back.

Keith and Loew circuits agreed to split Paramount product, each taking half.

Producers trying to get together on film rights to literature. With $70,000 for 'Four Horsemen' and 'Lightnin'' at $350,000 bid, they were getting scared.

Labor expert cheering producers with assurance unemployment would be over in the spring. Things did improve for about eight years.

Wall Street stirred by the prediction, that Famous Players would show $25-$30 net per share, after taxes. Stock was around 59.

Few weeks before about 50 actors appeared at police benefits at New Rochelle and Mt. Vernon, playing both towns the same day. Cops gave them a luncheon and gold-plated police whistles with their names engraved on 'em.

Keith circuit started a drive against blue material. Not successful until lately, when blueness was suppressed by cutting out vaudeville.

'Beggars Opera' revival floppo and English company went to Canada. Had made a stir in London, but not so hot here. Arthur Hopkins and Sam H. Harris brought it over.

No. 2 'Mary' co. squabbling in Omaha, so George M. Cohan closed 'em up. Reopened later with other players.

Mercedes, mentalist, carried a plant to ask a question to cue in a patriotic speech. Manager of the Empire, Fall River, thought it was on the level and fired him for talking back to the customers.

50 YEARS AGO

(From Clipper)

Lillian Russell was looking for a job in the middle of the season.

Some of the first patients treated at the Pasteur Institute in Paris were being offered at a dime museum. Hydrophobia cure was a novelty then.

Modjeska opened in New York to rather poor business, but produced 'Donna Diana,' a play from the Spanish, and saved the day.

Augustin Daly revived 'Merry Wives of Windsor' with John Drew as Ford. Cast also included Ada Rehan, Otis Skinner, Fred Bond, James Lewis, Willie Collier and Edith Kingdon.

London theatre was on fire but a dog barked and woke the night watchman. Dog got pats.

Robert Hilliard, who had been managing a Brooklyn theatre, made his professional debut. For once the Clipper was right in predicting his success.

Dominick Murray's troupe crossed the St. Lawrence river at Prescott, Can., on foot because the ferry was frozen in and the ice would not bear horses. Trucks broke through the ice and costumes could not be dried in time for the evening show at Syracuse.

St. Paul was building an Ice Palace. Constructed entirely of ice blocks and used for a carnival. Montreal ice palace was usually the topper.

John L. Sullivan split with Lester & Allen's minstrels and took over the show. A consistent loser in spite of Sullivan's posings in the performances.

A. M. Palmer, Lester Wallack and Augustin Daly staged three benefits for the Actors fund in their three theatres. Each company played an hour in its home theatre and then moved on to the next house, each appearing before all three audiences.

What the Clipper described as an 'electric light tank' fell from the flies at the Academy of Music during a performance of 'Lohengrin.' Beaned Emma Juch, the star, but she finished the opera.

Lydia Thompson, responsible for the British blonde craze, was back in the states. Some talk of building a house for her in Boston. Didn't go through.

In Schenectady, two acts of a play had been given by the Ethel Tucker co. when the leading man demanded $10 then and there. Held the curtain 40 minutes.

Radio Chatter

the job two days later. Only slightly mussed up.

Stan Hubbard back at his desk after two weeks east.

Willard E. Neville, organist, pianist and vocalist, now drawing pay checks from KROC, KSTP's Rochester offspring.

Buddy Fisher's ork coming into the Casino, St. Paul, Sunday (26), as Bernie Cummins leaves. Casino airs nightly over KSTP.

Cops are checking WCCO's log for Dec. 9 to determine what time a certain melody was being broadcast on a CBS program. Woman witness in the Walter Liggett assassination case says she heard the shots at the same time her radio was emitting the musical number. Since WCCO doesn't keep a log of chain program material, it must be checked back to CBS headquarters. Cops want the dope to fix the exact time of the killing.

Probably setting a new high for group coincidence: Kenneth M. Hance, asst. gen. mgr. of KSTP, lives next door to Kenneth G. Brill, judge of district court. Mrs. Hance's given name is Laura; so is Mrs. Brill's. And there's one child in each family, a boy, Richard is the name.

Anne Henry, formerly with General Mills, in as Earl Gammon's sec, replacing Edna Puphal.

Milt Hoffman out at WDGY, in at Nick Kahler's publicity emporium.

Cleiland Card at the mike for WCCO's cooking school broadcasts.

Walt Hadlich in, Paul Presbrey out, as Hotel St. Paul's p.a.

WCCO's new short-wave experimental transmitter, W9XHW, skeded to start operating Feb. 15.

Carlton Coon's orchestra at the Lowry, and airing over WTCN; Bernie Cummins at the Casino and on KSTP; Charles Boulanger, Chicago NBC baton waver, in at the Radisson.

Polly (the Shopper) Shedlov, KSTP, back from her first vacation in four years. Spent two weeks gadding about the Coast studios, appearing as guest artist on KSFO, San Francisco.

When WCCO broke down during last week's 24 below zero weather, KSTP announced, 'A large radio station is out of commission due to the cold.'

Tim Rankin, who plays a role in the 'Gloria Dale' show on WCCO five times weekly, is asst. prof. of speech at the U of Minn.

Frank Rand, director, CBS western division pub. dept., in at WCCO for three days.

'Hap' Bliss, B. B. D. & C. production man, doing the Hormel show continuities for the current show now airing on CBS midwest web out of WCCO.

Ivan Flanery, WTCN announcer, doubling in General Mills' 'Gloria Dale' show on WCCO.

Jake Heidrick batoning the Americanos Marimba band of 12 pieces in at Radisson's Flame room Sunday (26) for indef stay, replacing Charley Boulanger and ork.

Twin City Foursome, now doing four sustainers a week over NBC in New York (two each on the blue and the red), and is the former WCCO Feis Naptha Foursome.

Governor Floyd B. Olson, only Farmer-Labor gov. in the U. S., who attributed his last (third term) election unequivocally to radio, announced last week that he's planning to concentrate his campaigning for U. S. Senator on radio talks.

Six women's faculty groups from U of Minnesota are studying modern radio technique in WCCO's Nicollet hotel studios this month. All are U prof's' wives.

Ontario

Maurice (CKCL, Toronto) Rapkin's new auto license is MR-1.

The Brown Twins doing a duo-piano series over CRCW, Windsor.

Jon (ex-CRCT, Toronto) Farrell now station director of CKSO, Sudbury.

Kathleen (ex-Shea's) Stokes starts a new organ series over CFRB, Toronto.

Jack Evans and his Saturday Nighters land a new dance series on CKCL, Toronto.

Pearl McCarthy of the Toronto 'Mail & Empire' to the 'For You, Madame' series over CRCT, Toronto.

Templeton Moore's 'Surprise Box' series, over CRCW, Windsor, clicking with the Canadian Radio Commission.

Canadian Radio Commission's short-wave transmitter, CRCX, being moved from Bowmanville to Toronto, shortly.

Billy Regula launching his 'A Quarter to Eight' series over CRCW, Windsor, with Deil Adams as featured warbler.

Geoffrey Waddington resigns as musical director of CRCT, Toronto, and moves his band to the Royal York Roof, replacing the Billy Bissett tunesters who are Monte Carlo bound.

California

Elsie Horner out as KMTR production manager.

CBS recalled Irving Reis from L. A., sending on in his place Harry Spear, who'll oversee the technical end of KHJ.

Burns and Allen to broadcast from the coast after Feb. 12.

Flipped Jerry King, KFWB manager, 'I signed a Warner music contract under protest.'

Columbia's W. B. Lewis looking in on Charlie Vanda's auditions.

Judy Starr, KHJ's half-pint chanter, hauled off to the hosp after auto crackup but out again in three days.

New Johnny Green number, 'Night Is Beginning,' warbled for first time by Kenny Baker on Jello program.

Al Lyons taking rest at Arrowhead before starting Pickford broadcast.

Jimmy Bittick's KHJ remote ork has June Marlowe in the solo spot.

It's grandpa Charlie Pyle now.

Jack Joy unveiled his tune child, 'Walking Along a Country Road,' over KFWB.

Kenny Carpenter will announce the Fidler Tangee airer after Don Wilson swings east with Jack Benny Feb. 2.

Debut of Don Allen's Dog House Revue on KFWB postponed. Station production aide also wrote the incidental music.

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

Under the new all-night permits being issued by local authorities, a number of nite clubs have gone in for all night sessions. Savourin is open all night Thursdays with a 'milkman's matinee' featured, and the Club Padlo and a number of other spots are playing all night programs with the last show scheduled for 2:30 a.m.

ELMER RICE RESIGNATION FROM WPA CAUSES TURMOIL; CENSORSHIP ISSUE

Hallie Flanagan Favors Playwright-Director, but Stays On—'Living Newspaper' Sticks, but Sketch Which Started Issue, Dropped—Authors League Protest

Turmoil within the Works Progress Administration theatre project in New York was created last Thursday (23), when Elmer Rice withdrew as regional director.

Coming on the eve of the opening of several show units, there was keen disappointment among those working on the project. That includes Hallie Flanagan who, although favoring Rice in a controversy with Jacob Baker, national administrator of the WPA arts, theatre and music division under Harry L. Hopkins, will remain as the theatre project's director.

Clash between the men came when Baker ordered that no foreign ruler, minister or cabinet member be impersonated on the project's stages, such as was proposed in the 'Living Newspaper,' slated to open tonight at the Biltmore theatre, N. Y. Under supervision of the Newspaper Guild short sketches of news events were to be presented in dramatic form. One such, 'Ethiopia,' had Premier Mussolini and Emperor Haile Salassie among the characters.

Baker ruled that such characterizations in a governmental presentation might cause foreign entanglements. Rice protested and declared Baker's order to be that of a censor. He stated than when he took the assignment it was expressly agreed there should be no censoring of the project plays.

Caustic Baker

Rice, always militant against censorship in any form, threatened to resign. Baker somewhat caustically replied that Rice had several times offered to withdraw over delays and conflicting ideas and, this time, his resignation would be accepted.

Friday morning Rice asked newspapermen to go to the Biltmore. There, a rehearsal of the 'Newspaper' sketches was given and the director addressed the scribes.

Rice charged that Baker's censorship was in reality an attack on free speech.

'The implied charge that a carefully documented factual presentation of public events could conceivably affect our international relations is absurd on its face and doubly ludicrous to anyone who has read the script or seen a rehearsal of the production. Mr. Baker is merely trying to raise a smoke-screen to conceal the real issue.

'Free Speech'

'That issue clearly is free speech. When I took this job last fall, I did so upon Mr. Harry Hopkins' emphatic and explicit assurance that Washington would not attempt in any way to censor the productions of the Federal Theatre Project. At my first interview in October, I informed the reporters that any attempt at censorship would be followed by immediate resignation. Washington has broken its word; I have kept mine.

'The final decision to censor the Living Newspaper and thereby force my resignation did not come until after I had outlined to Mr. Baker some of the other productions which were being planned. These include a play called 'Class of '29,' which deals realistically with unemployment and the handling of relief; and a second issue of the Living Newspaper on the situation in the Southern states, touching on such vital subjects as lynching, discrimination against negroes and the plight of the share-croppers (in other words, hitting the Democratic party). Mr. Baker has already called off one Federal Theatre Project play in Chicago, because in the opinion of Mayor Kelly it was uncomplimentary to the administration and to the Democratic party.

'In short, we are confronted here not, only with an evidence of the growth of Fascism, which always uses censorship as one of its most effective weapons, but with the resolute determination of the Democratic party to be re-elected at all costs. In the face of that stern necessity, the fostering of the arts, the rehabilitation of unemployed professional men and women and the constitutional guarantees of freedom of expression go by the boards.

'I am sorry to be obliged to resign at a time when so many of the carefully-laid plans of the Federal Theatre Project are nearing fruition. And it is difficult for me to sever my friendly association with Hallie Flanagan, Philip Barber and the hundreds of fine earnest theatre workers who have given me their co-operation and support. But I am a member of the board of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union, the vice-chairman of the National Council on Freedom from Censorship and the chairman of the Authors' League Censorship Committee. For 15 years and more I have been actively engaged in fighting censorship in every form. The issue of free speech and the preservation of the bill of rights seem to me of greater moment today then they have ever been.'

Reply

Baker, in accepting Rice's resignation, wrote: 'I do so with regret, and I wish to express my very great appreciation of the energy, enthusiasm, imagination and the hard work that you have put into this project.'

Early this week the whole 'newspaper' idea was dropped, figured impossible to operate with the federal restrictions placed upon it. Carl Randau, head of the sponsoring Newspaper Guild said: 'It was assumed that news events could be presented with the same freedom enjoyed by the newspapers, and we still believe the project should be allowed to continue unhampered and uncensored.'

Morris Watson, in charge of the 'newspaper' presentation, said: 'The order that we cannot impersonate the head of any state or cabinet official on the stage definitely kills any dramatization of the Italo-Ethiopian war. It also rules out dramatization of any foreign news.'

He felt that, as the purpose of the 'newspaper' was approved by Washington, 'it is my feeling that the order from Baker controverts it.'

New Skit

Watson added that the next show will be placed in rehearsal at once, unless the Baker order is countermanded. 'It will be objective,' he said, 'without bias of any kind and carefully authenticated. If then any governmental official decides that truthful representation of news events is embarrassing, I shall have to follow Elmer Rice in what I consider his splendid stand against censorship.'

Next dramatization will be based on the agriculture situation. Script is being written and, on the basis of production pace heretofore, that unit, in which there are 400 persons occupied, will not be open for public presentation for at least six weeks.

In the meantime the rent on the Biltmore, where rehearsals were held, goes on at $700 weekly. Actual cost of scrapping 'Ethiopia' was stated to be $133, principally for costumes and uniforms which may be used for other shows.

Mrs. Flanagan stated this week that there was no policy set by Washington in the matter of overlooking the type of plays to be presented and there has been no order to submit scripts to the administrator prior to production. Baker action was more or less accidental. It followed a request for permission to use the president's voice by recording in 'Ethiopia.'

Revi

Rehearsal of the skit in question, without scenery, props and but a few costumes, given by white and colored players, so impressed Brooks Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times, that he reviewed and commented on it at some length. He thought: 'Let this correspondent say at once that he felt proud of the newspaperman who had written it and the actors and directors who put it on the stage; and he shares with them the desolate feeling that comes when good work is denied its logical reward.' lay, which ran 45 minutes, had Baldwin, Laval, Hoare, Eden and Litvinoff as characters, in addition to Mussolini and Selassie.

About the playlet the reviewer wrote:

thiopia' is no masterpiece. But as a living newspaper account of a breach of peace that is happening under our nose it is sobering and impressive—even frightening. . . . Staging showed that in the large ranks of the jobless there is an abundance of first rate talent. To sit in the audience before a bare rehearsal was to realize how much energy has gone into this plain production. All questions of policy and wastefulness aside, 'Ethiopia' proves that the human principle of the WPA's art projects is sound. The keenest privation of the unemployed artist is the lack of professional expression.'

Critic's opinion was that the playlet was an unbiased dramatic account. In his opinion, however, its censoring means that 'the theatre is reduced to innocuous commonplaces when it has to conform to diplomatic manners. . . . It shows how futile it is to expect the theatre to be anything but a sideshow under government supervision.'

Authors

Telegram of bitter protest was sent to Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, by Elmer Davis, Vice President the Authors' League of America:

'In view of the vital issues of censorship and free speech involved, the Authors League of America requests a specific answer from you as to whether or not you approved the action taken regarding the WPA Theatre Project in New York by Jacob Baker, your first assistant.

'We ask whether you have endorsed the policy that only such plays as your administration approves are to be presented.

'This situation is of urgent interest to American authors. We believe that the fundamental rights of authors are threatened by any attempt of Washington to institute irresponsible censorship of the written or spoken word by Government officials. Such an attempt is un-American.

'The WPA administration is presuming to use taxpayer's money to prevent the circulation of ideas merely because it does not agree with them. This money comes from American citizens of every possible shade of political conviction. The Democratic party has repeatedly attested its devotion to free speech.

'We have full confidence that you, as administration of the WPA, find censorship wholly abhorrent. We therefore request an immediate answer to the following questions:

'Did you authorize and do you not endorse the suppression of 'Ethiopia?'

'What is your position in regard to further interference with the 'living newspaper' and other WPA Theatre Projects, as indicated in Mr. Rice's statement?

'Do you propose to permit Mr. Baker, who by his action in this case has disqualified himself from further usefulness, to continue as the dictator of what shall or shall not be said in future productions?

'The Authors League of America does not regard these as theoretical questions. As the representative organization of writers of the United States we are faced with the responsibility of giving reassurance to our members at the earliest possible moment.'

City Projects Council, composed of workers in the various WPA divisions in New York, also voiced objection to Rice's 'enforced resignation.'

John Askling, one of Rice's assistants, is out of the theatre project indefinitely. Because of illness he was given a month's leave, but at the project office it was stated that he resigned.

St. Louis Set-Up

St. Louis, Jan.

American theatre, dark since the first of the month, reopens Feb. 3 with Alla Nazimova's revival of Ibsen's 'Ghosts' for one week's run. This will be followed by a three-day engagement beginning Feb. 10 of Cornelia Otis Skinner.

Walter Hampden in 'Cyrano de Bergerac' and Walter Huston in 'Dodsworth' are set for March.

Vassar and Yale

Philip Barber, appointed acting regional director of the Federal theatre project in New York on the resignation of Elmer Rice last week, got his first knowledge of the stage as a student aid to Professor Baker when the latter conducted his theatre 'workshop' at Yale.

Understood he was also technical adviser to the Group Theatre in New York. He came into the WPA relief show administration when Hallie Flanagan, Vassarite, received the appointment as National Director. He was Rice's production aide.

WPA on Coast Busy on Plays; Spent $100,000

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

The art, theatre, music and writing groups of the WPA here are planning numerous plays and concerts. Theatre project has 'The Bishop's Candlesticks' ready for high schools, using about 25 people.

'Knight of the Burning Pestle,' directed by Jerome Coray, with 30 in the cast, was presented last week at the University of Southern California.

Theatre group, since last Nov. 8, has spent around $100,000, of which only 10% was for operating expenses, balance going to pay salaries.

Outfit will present 'Uriel Acosta,' by Karl Gutzkow, Jan. 31 and Feb. 1, at the Federal Music Art Theatre. Two performances will be given in Yiddish, and group will rtage the same play Feb. 7 and 8 in English at the same spot.

Play, directed by Adolph Freeman, will have a cast of 50. Admish will be 55c. top.

WPA'S 1ST SHOW, 'MEN FIGHT,' IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Jan. 19.

WPA theatre project unit number one lifted its first curtain here Wed. (22) with 'Men Must Fight.' Audience was as much like a political rally as a theatrical first-night, with state senator Matthew Daly (WPA state administrator) chattering between the acts. Small crowd present, probably due to weather, but production was well received.

Project will take care of salaries, with the income at the boxoffice estimated to handle rental ($40 weekly, 286 seats), heat, light, royalties, etc. Project is on probation and must show reasonable cause for continuance after its tryout period. Policy now is six shows weekly (Wed.-Sat., plus two mats) with fortnightly changes. Next production, 'The Tavern,' is set for Feb. 5. New plays will be tried out as soon as feasible.

Present setup follows: Hiram Motherwell, regional director; Gertrude DonDero, state director. Cast: Stephan Dennis, Eleanor Vishno Evans, Helen Shea, Mary Hone, William Whitehead, Ellen Love, Charles Atkin, Marshall Rourke, Helen Bolton, George Petrie, John Haggett. Staff: Mary Hone, general supervisor; Walter Bradley Klavun, production director; Charles Atkin, technical director; L. L. Goldwasser, designer; Joseph Mara, asst. designer; Charles E. Blaney, house manager; William D. Fitzgerald, asst. house manager; Fred W. Ledger, stage manager; Frank R. Lesneski and Charles Mahoney, publicity directors; Frank Kelley, construction; E. B. Wallace, John Grinold, Robert Hitchcock, Joseph Dietle, technicians.

Akron's 2d

Akron, Jan. 28.

Colonial, major downtown film house, will interrupt its pic program for one night Feb. 3 to show the legit 'Personal Appearance.'

It will be Akron's second legit of the season, first being 'The Old Maid' several weeks ago.

READY TWO CHI THEATRES FOR WPA

Jan. 28.

WPA actors are not working, but are eating, have shelter and heat, plus official information that performances will start soon. Thomas Wood Stevens, regional director of stage projects, now says he will be under way at the Great Northern, Feb. 10, and is waiting for Hallie Flanagan to decide which of three plays he is to start with. Meanwhile actors are getting paid, as ar members of the huge executive and supervisory staff.

Unit organized for 'modern American plays' also expects to get going Feb. 10 at the Star and Garter with Hoyt's 'A Texas Steer,' followed in a week by Gillette's 'Secret Service,' and, later, Herne's 'Shore-Acres.' Harry Minturn, director of this unit, says he will not act.

Both theatres go 50-50 with the WPA on gate, with a guarantee of $275 a month to the theatre and both sides having the right to cancel on 30 days' notice. Persons on relief may have passes, but only up to 10% of capacity.

Robert Digges, representing Washington headquarters of WPA, here to straighten out leases, says both theatres were taken on bids. Shubert office here says bids were invited by the WPA for Grand, Harris and Selwyn, too, but no attention was paid to the request.

Star and Garter terms are much like the Great Northern's, with the house and Digges tied in a dispute over cost of taking down and replacing the steel runway used when theatre had burlesque and Digges holding that an 'all facilities' clause in the deal includes a clear center-aisle.

WPA LOSES THREE TO PROFESH JOBS

Three persons employed in the WPA theatre project in New York have received indefinite leaves of absence to accept professional jobs. Most recent withdrawal is Ralph Chambers, who was to have toured in 'Jefferson Davis,' but instead will be in the company of 'Three Men On a Horse,' which is soon going to London.

Chandos Sweet, who handled the units formerly booked into the CCC camps, is with the mid-western 'Horse' company. Frank Wilson, who was with the WPA colored theatre unit, has gone to Hollywood to appear in the film version of 'The Green Pastures.' He was on the stage.

London 'Horse' company, which will have a virtually all American cast, is due to sail from New York Feb. 5 and open there Feb. 17. Those rehearsing: Romney Brent, Bernard Medell, Edmund Royan, David Burns, Chambers, Jack Arnold, Maurice Freeman, Claire Carlton, Walter Scott, Alex Clark and Tucker McGuire.

The Davis drama has been held up and the script is being rewritten. It is proposed to send it through the South. Additional WPA relief shows are slated to tour in other small stand territory.

Woods' 'Poison' Off

'Name Your Poison,' which A. H. Woods withdreiv after one tryout week in Newark, is being rewritten. Part originally assigned to Lenore Ulric will be built up.

Night after the Jersey debut the Newark vice squad sat in at rehearsal, cops then ordering out a lot of words.

Coast Bookings

Los Angeles, Jan.

Nazimova opens in 'Ghosts' at th Biltmore March 17. Stays four day. Theatre is also handling other Coast bookings for the Ibsen revival.

Walter Huston in 'Dodsworth' opens the Biltmore season Feb. 3, coming down from San Francisco.

B'WAY'S CYCLE OF WEEPS

Admish Tax Applicable to WPA Shows; All Units to Use Ducats

admission to Works rogress Administration propect shows in New York will range from 15c to $1, but admision tax will apply on all tickets over 40c, despite the fact that they are relief shows financed by the government. Ruling on the tax emanates from Washington.

Stated this week that admission of some kind will apply not only to the new theatre units but to the which have been going on in school auditoriums, halls and churches. None of the latter have box offices and how tickets are to be sold is yet to be worked out. Admissions for such attractions, however, will be at less than 40c and, therefore, tax will not apply.

Change in the rules for free admissions to those displaying home relief cards has been made. Instead of certain sections being set aside for all performances, cuffo admission to be limited to Monday night shows.

With the 'living newspaper,' which was to charge 25c admission, off indefinitely, first of the new WPA units in N. Y. is slated to be the Negro Theatre, Lafayette, Harlem, dated for Friday (31) with 'Walk Together, Chillun.' Prices announced are 15, 25, 40 and 72c, latter including tax. Reported, however, that the opening may be set back because needed repairs of the seats have not been completed. Those in charge have had since October to accomplish that task.

Negro admission prices are higher than the rates for the managers' tryout theatres (Willis, Bronx, and Symphony, the former Shubert-Teller, Brooklyn) which will have two prices—25 and 55c. Same scale will go for the popular price theatre housed in the Manhattan and the experimental theatre, Daly's 63d street. Just what attractions are to charge the maximum of $1, has not been decided. Where there is no gallery the minimum charge will be 25c for all the federal relief shows. However, for vaudeville and circus performances, the price will be 15 and 25c, with a 10c charge for children. Social and charitable organizations may book in the shows, takings to be split 50-50.

Managers' first show, 'Woman of Destiny,' is dated to open next Monday (Feb. 3), while the Manhattan with 'American Holiday' has set Feb. 7 for debut.

Mary Boland Leaving 'Jubilee,' Mitzi Mayfair In Eleanor Powell Spot

Mary Boland is due back on the Paramount lot for the film 'Where Am I?' She is currently starring in 'Jubilee' at the Imperial, N. Y., and Laura Hope Crews is mentioned her probable successor. Show was backed by Metro.

Eleanor Powell is out of 'At Home Abroad' (Majestic) through illness, with Marjorie Gale replacing temporarily. Mitzi Mayfair comes in today (Wed). Despite the management's insistance that Miss Powell has a run of the play contract, the engagement of Miss Mayfair for the part indicates the former will not return to the show. Her name has been dropped from feature billing and Reginald Gardiner's inserted.

Aldrich-De Liagre Split

Young legit managerial firm of Richard Aldrich and Alfred de Liagre will split after presenting 'Fresh Fields' at the Empire, N. Y., early next month. De Liagre may continue on his own, Aldrich entering the eastern office of Columbia Pictures.

Aldrich is slated to produce legit plays for Columbia on Broadway.

'Frome's' Ad Deal

Max Gendel (Goldsmith & Gendel), Max Gordon's publicist, put over an unusual deal for 'Ethan Frome' in connection with the 175 inch ad on three cols. which ran in nine New York dailies last week. Placed through Donahue-Coe, it normally would have been billed for the current week, an item of $4,000, extraordinary for a legit. It's the largest legit ad in years.

Gendel arranged with the agency to split the cost over a period of 15 weeks, dividing it between the house (National) and the attraction, and thus brin ing it down considerably.

Tait Back in Sydney With 'Anything' Leads; Other Plans for Legit

Sydney, Jan. 8.

J. Tait has returned here following his trip abroad on behalf of Williamson-Tait. Harry Langdon and Elsie Pertka came with him to play in 'Anything Goes,' first of the 1936 attractions he has lined up.

Following 'Goes' will come 'Three Men on a Horse' and other American and English successes.

W-T opened 'Yes, Madame,' in Melbourne last week and show appears to have clicked. 'White Horse Inn' is currently touring New Zealand, and Gilbert-Sullivan revivals are set in Sydney until about February.

At present the organization is only operating one theatre in Sydney, but there is a possibility of a new theatre being erected towards the end of the year. Depends on the biz legit does this season.

DETROIT GETS DEBUT OF K. CORNELL'S 'JOAN'

Detroit, Jan. 28.

For the second time in her career, Katharine Cornell will make her debut in a new play here, George Bernard Shaw's 'Saint Joan' being slated for the Cass Theatre Feb. 12. Show will run through Saturday (15), with a matinee that day, at $2.75 top.

Eleven years ago Miss Cornell came here to appear for the first time on any stage as Iris March in 'The Green Hat.'

'Saint Joan' also marks the first premiere at the Cass.

Following the five performances in Detroit, 'Saint Joan' will move on to Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Buffalo before its N. Y. premiere at the Martin Beck theatre on March 3.

White Cuts Cast

Cast of George White's 'Scandals,' which opened at the New Amsterdam Christmas Day, took a cut in salaries last week.

Understood the only one who refused to take the slice was Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards.

Hardy Angles for Chi Hold-Over of 'Ghosts'

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Guy Hardy, operating the legit Blackstone, is now in the midst of negotiations to move 'Ghosts' into that house after it completes its fortnight at the Erlanger under American Theatre Society auspices.

Nazimova show is doing well and is going out of the Erlanger next week only because of previous booking of the Lunt-Fontanne 'Taming of the Shrew' for Feb. 3.

MISERY PLAYS BY THE DOZEN

One-third of Current Season Shows Have Bitter Themes —Most of Them Not So Hot at B. O., However

DEPRESH REACTION?

A wave of trouble plays has been rolling over Broadway from the start of the season and the proportion to the total number of attractions already presented is surprisingly large.

New bitter trend in dramaturgy is probably a reaction of the depression. Fact that many of the prospective customers have been sorely troubled since 1929 appears to have created the impression that tragedy is the fashion. However, the regularity with which plays of that type have flopped would seem to prove the opposite.

Of the 72 new productions presented in New York this season, up to and including last week, almost one-third had themes motivated by woe. Aside from the purely melodramatic plays, such as 'Dead End,' the laugh shows so far have been much more successful than the dramas with the weeps.

One exception is likely in 'Ethan Frome,' which opened last week and was accorded rave notices. Despite difference of opinion among first nighters outside the press, the 'Frome' tragedy built to excellent business during the week. There have been several other such exceptions. Despite which, it is the opinion of showmen that such plays will be far outrun by the leading comedies and ticket men are certain that class patrons prefer to laugh.

Another trend this season has been the presentation of many-scened plays, a la Hollywood. In some cases it was discovered that too many settings gummed up the plays. There have been several outstanding examples of the scenic designer's art this season which failed to put the shows across, proving once again that the play's the thing.

Three dramas calculated to give audiences the jitters are current in addition to 'Frome' but they are low-grossers and all in the red. This season's misery plays, most of which opened and closed quickly, include: 'Life's Too Short,' 'Few Are Chosen,' 'Paths of Glory,' 'Achilles Had a Heel,' 'Bright Star,' 'Let Freedom Ring,' 'If This Be Treason,' 'Mother Sings,' 'Mother,' 'Abide With Me,' 'The Ragged Edge,' 'How Beautiful With Shoes,' 'Weep For the Virgins,' 'Paradise Lost,' 'This Our House,' 'Hell Freezes Over,' 'Tapestry in Gray,' 'Truly Valiant,' 'O Evening Star,' 'A Room in Red and White,' 'Mid-West,' 'The Puritan.' Revivals of 'Ghosts,' 'Macbeth' and 'Othello' did not add to the theatre's gaiety, either.

'HOUR' LEGIT TO BUCK SELF IN PIC VERSION

Before going to Boston early this week to press proceedings almed to enjoy the Hub mayor's banning of his 'The Children's Hour,' Herman Shumlin disclosed plans to run the original show on Broadway through the spring, at which time the film version is due to be released.

Manager proposes to buck the picture with the play because of the reputed story difference.

'Hour' has been so consistenly strong at matinees that Monday ni hts will be dropped and Thursday afternoons added. Both matinees sold out last week.

Equity Orders Stop of Rehearsals On 'Eternal Road'; Reinhardt Spec May Reorganize, $279,530 in Hole

Second Time

Jamming of 'The Eternal Road' at the Manhattan Opera House is not the first venture to have come a cropper in the same spot. It happened there around 25 years ago with a piece called 'An Aztec Romance,' elaborately presented but quickly withdrawn with the loss set at $175,000.

A visitor from Salt Lake City came to New York, announcing himself to be O. U. Bean, author and producer of 'Romance.' Shortly after the opening Bean vamped to the wide open spaces.

Strong Given 2 Wks. To Decide Whether He Married May Yohe

Putnam Bradlee Strong, son of a former N. Y. mayor, must decide within the next two weeks whether he ever was legally married to the former May Yohe, who was an actress three decades ago. Unless Strong can prove to the satisfaction of N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLaughlin that the ceremony he admits he went through with Miss Yohe in Buenos Aires in 1902 was invalid, a $2,000,000 trust fund established by Strong's father may eventually fall into the hands of Robert E. Thomas, a Hollywood actor, who is suing to prove he is the legitimate son of Miss Yohe and Strong.

Recently Strong filed an answer to Thomas' action, admitting he went through a marriage ceremony with Miss Yohe, but was doubtful the wedding was legal owing to the fact that marriage between divorced parties was not recognized in Argentina. The court threw out this answer and directed Strong to admit or deny the marriage and to let the court decide whether the ceremony was legal.

Thomas' claim is that he was deserted by Strong and Miss Yohe when he was a baby. He was later adopted, he claims, by Mrs. Edward R. Thomas, whose surname he took. Following a divorce from Strong, Miss Yohe married Capt. John Smuts, with whom she now lives at Gloucester, Mass.

KING'S DEATH CUTS LINES FROM 3 LEGITS

Following the death of England's King George V, lines were dropped out of at least three Broadway shows. Two laughs were cut from 'Jubilee' (Imperial), several lines went out of 'Libel' (Miller) and also 'Victoria Regina' (Broadhurst). Latter two plays are British in theme and the deletions were gesture of respect.

'Jubilee's' locale is stated to be in a mythical European kingdom, not England, but there are number of incidents and terms in the show which suggest the British royal family. Lines which previously won laughs fell flat during performances following the king's passing. Management figured the audience resented the frivolous lines and ordered them out.

Deleted material may go back into the show later.

Group's Future

'Paradise Lost,' latest of the Group's Odet opuses, closes on Feb. 8.

Undecided what will replace on the Group's sked but it may be the Piscator version of ' erican Tragedy,' which Milton Shubert was thinking of doing. He may do it with the Group now.

Equity ordered rehearsals of 'Th Eternal Road,' slated for the Manhattan Opera House, N. Y., stopped Monday (27) after the chorus was not paid rehearsal money the previous Saturday. Action follows the virtual admission of Meyer W. Weigal and Fanchon and Marco, who promoted 'Eternal,' that had run out of coin. Cast sustenance money is due today.

Spectacle drama was in rehearsal six weeks under the direction of Max Reinhardt and aides, the noted stager getting no compensation thus far, being in a royalty contract. Additional rehearsal time conceded by Equity has been used up, and from now on Equity rules call for cast and chorus to receive full wages. Management has already asked the players to take a salary cut but they huddled and refused to entertain such an idea. There are more than 320 people concerned with 'Road,' around 150 being extras.

Up to last week-end the expenditure on the show was $279,530. A considerable portion of the coin has gone into construction, but right now the interior of the Manhattan looks like a wreck.

All the seats on the lower floor are out and half the concrete floor has been battered apart, so that the stage can be extended as far as where the 12th row previously was. Proscenium has been extended almost to the roof, the show to be played on five different levels. All levels must be specially lighted and the interior of the house must be completely rewired. To secure the necessary electric power the pavement in front of the house has been opened so that conduits can be laid.

$250,000 More Needed

Estimated that over $250,000 more is needed before the show can open. Most of the money can be secured, it is claimed, but the new backers do not wish to be involved in paying off prior commitments. Efforts are being made to effect reduced settlements with sub-contractors in order to satisfy the new persons interested. In addition the Equity situation must be cleared.

'One of those desirous of seeing the completion of 'Eternal Road' is Norman-Bel Geddes, who designed the setting. Geddes rates the play as exceptional and may invest some of the needed cash in addition to his scenic efforts.

On the Equity end, association's officers say the solution would be for the original promoters to be supplanted by a new managerial set-up. Cast would receive two weeks' salary and sign new contracts with the new management. In that way another four or five weeks' rehearsal period could be granted. There is $13,000 on deposit with Equity guaranteeing salaries. That does not fully cover the players, some of whom have not yet joined Equity. Weekly payroll for the playcrs (plus chorus) is $7,500.

Herman Shumlin was asked to handle the spec but, after being informed of the financial condition of the production, he ducked.

TIMONY'S 'LADIES' HELD INOFFENSIVE

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Jury gave Jim Timony's 'Ladies by Request' a clean bill after police closed it at the Hollytown, Hollywood little theatre, and raked the cast of 16 into court on charges of appearing in an indecent show. Entire show was enacted in court.

Timony was undecided Saturday (25) whether he would reopen the play in Hollywood or take it on to New York.

Syracuse University In Jam with Union On House Operation

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 28.

Demand by William Cushing, business agent of Local 9 of the IATSE, that Syracuse University unionize the Civic theatre for all performances, whether the performing troupe is professional or undergraduate, has brought the situation responsible for a showless Syracuse this season out into the open.

Cushing forced the showdown as the University prepared to present the Columbia Opera company in 'Carmen' and 'Rigoletto' at the Civic. Contract, signed by Prof. Sawyer Falk on behalf of the university, sought to avoid a direct clash with the union by specifying that the opera company would engage necessary union technicians and musicians.

First intimation to the university that trouble was in prospect came in the form of a telegram from the troupe's management advising that it could not fill the engagement due to 'weather conditions.' University, investigating, claims to have learned that union pressure was responsible and immediately notified the troupe that failure to fulfill the contract would mean legal action.

Cushing thereupon stepped into the picture with the announcement that he would order the Columbia's union orchestra of 25 and its union age crew to keep out of the Civic Thursday night on the grounds that the house was 'scab.'

Cushing takes the position that the university, by operating the Civic, has entered into the commercial field and is competing with commercial houses. There can be no discrimination between professional and undergraduate productions in a commercial house, he contends.

Prof. Falk, head of the university's dramatic department, insists that the university is agreeable to employment of union stage hands for touring attractions, but student help is necessary for the undergraduate shows. He explains that such work comes under the head of instruction and practice for those taking drama courses. Another factor is the university's admitted financial inability to employ union crews.

NO SHUBERT BILLING ON 'ZIEGFELD FOLLIES'

'Ziegfeld Follies,' which opens at the Winter Garden, N. Y., Thursday (30), is billed as being presented by Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld (Billie Burke). Same arrangement was made with the late revue producer's widow when the Shuberts secured the 'Follies' label from her about two years ago. Shubert name does not appear at all. Use of the Ziegfeld name calls for 7% of the gross as royalty, that being divided between the widow and the A. L. Erlanger estate.

Was first planned to charge $11 top for the premiere, but the price now has been pegged at $8.80, regular night scale being $4.40. Only show this season opening at $11 was 'Scandals.' Fact that $7.70 was charged for the first night of 'The Illustrators Show' last week irritated the first-nighters. It was a fast flop. Administrator of the Ziegfeld estate sought recovery of 'Follies' royalties from Miss Burke last year. Matter was settled, widow paying the estate $5,000.

Isola Bros. Bankrupt

Paris, Jan. 28.

Isola Bros., legit producers and operators here, have gone bankrupt.

Isolas produced 'Rose-Marie' and 'No, No, Nannette' here, among others. Also operated the Mogador theatre for a number of years.

'Hour' Starts Curran

Hollywood, Jan.

'Children's Hour' is the first show for Homer Curran under the producing agreement with the Biltmore theatre here. Herman Shumlin is coming on to stage it, and will bring cast leads from the east, using locals for support.

Curran is negotiating for Tallulah Bankhead and Gladys George for 'Personal Appearance.'

'Postman Always Rings Twice'—Jack Curtis.

RICE MUST PAY ADDED $3,231 N. Y. STATE TAX

Albany, Jan. 28.

Elmer L. Rice must pay New York state an additional income tax of $3,231.85 for 1929-1931, inclusive, on his net income from U. S. copyrights. The State Court of Appeals yesterday (27) affirmed an Appellate Division ruling, holding that the playwright's royalties were taxable.

The State Tax Commission contended it had a right to collect the levies on royalties amounting to $121,818.38 received by Rice in the three years. This claim was based on a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court to that effect, handed down in May, 1932. Rice, however, argued that the decision was not retroactive and that up to May, 1932, royalties on copyright articles were subject only to federal tax.

SYRACUSE STYMIES

No Theatre and No Girls Available For WPA Project

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan.

Syracuse's WPA theatre project encountered two sizeable stumbling blocks this week which left the proposed Federally financed activities up in the air.

First was the failure of the WPA setup to induce either Morris Fitzer, lessee of the Empire, or Syracuse University, operating the Civic, to house the proposed stock company. WPA executives' plan called for a rental deal making either house available for the stock productions three nights a week. Fitzer met the overtures with the contention that this would confuse his clientele. Empire is now a grind film house, with vaude acts on week-ends.

University demurred, explaining that the Civic was required for dramatic department laboratory purposes.

Second stumbling block was the dearth of chorus girls for the proposed vaudeville-revue troupe which the WPA planned to send on tour through the State. WPA anticipated no difficulty in obtaining a minimum of 20, but repeated calls netted only six steppers.

GUEST DIRECTORS

Fort Wayne, Jan. 28.

Guest director policy is to be used for the rest of the season of the Old Fort Players, following exit of Herbert Butterfield, director for the past four years. He goes to Chicago to join the Lord & Thomas agency.

PLAYS OUT OF TOWN

THIRSTY SOIL

Beverly Hills, Jan. 5.

Drama in three acts (four scenes) by Raymond Bond. Directed by Harry Hayden. Cast: Raymond Bond, Maude Allen, Eugene Garrick, Virginia Carroll, Helen McGowan, Walter McGowan, Walter Murray, Norman Crawford. Presented by the Bliss-Hayden Little Theatre, Beverly Hills, Cal., Jan. 6.

Though his work so far has been confined to little theatres, Raymond Bond, actor-writer, indicates that one of these days a good commercial play will come from his pen.

His first play, 'Kitty Dooley of Times Square,' was a smart-crackling theatrical effort that had a four week run at the Hollywood Playhouse after it was shown at this little theatre. Now he comes in with the direct antithesis, a character study of an Iowa farm family of the 80's.

It's down-to-earth writing of the modern school and excellent. Play, however, is a character study fitting a character actress. For Broadway it has a chance, but the casting would be a problem.

Story is woven around a farmer and his wife as earthly as their property. The husband is deeply religious and borders on insanity. The wife, a hard-working, plodding woman with implicit faith in the happy future, sees the husband gradually lose his mind; her oldest son become a wastrel; her youngest son, an idealistic, earnest lad doomed to remain on the farm; her adopted daughter, raped by her oldest son.

The husband is killed when a cyclone hits the farm and the younger lad loses his girl through the family disgrace. Through it all the woman tries to guide them, attempts to set them right, sees everything go wrong but continues to feel that some day the sun will shine, the cyclones disappear and the world turn right.

As played here, Bond, the father, dominates the first two acts. Second act curtain is splendid theatre, written in a tempo that gives it gasping thrills. Though the entire cyclone is generated by a wind machine, the reaction of the four people in the farm kitchen is tops in thrills. Slight rewriting is necessary to give the mother the dominant part throughout.

Bond does a good job as the father but Maude Allen cops the honors as the plodding mother. Eugene Garrick, as the young son, also turns in an excellent performance, as does Virginia Carroll as the adopted daughter. Norman Crawford could play the older brother with more restraint. Others are bits.

Perhaps this won't be the play that brings Bond to Broadway but it's further indication that he'll get there. Call.

THREE SHOWS OUT

Three attractions, two of which opened last week, were quickly withdrawn from Broadway Saturday, and at least one is announced to fold this week. 'The Illustrators Show' closed at the 48th Street after four days.

'THE ILLUSTRATORS SHOW'

Opened Jan. 22. Tom Weatherly's attempt to put the artists' annual show on Broadway took it on the chin from the playviewers. Atkinson (Times) said 'it may be that illustrators are easily entertained . . . it's as flat as a taxpayer's purse.' Brown (Post) declared 'there are no words strong enough in my vocabulary to suggest how tiresome the present version is.'

'Mid-West' closed at the Booth after three weeks. Got little at the box office after mixed press reception.

'MID-WEST'

Opened Jan. Gabriel (American) summed it up for practically all the reviewers by saying 'Mid-West' is 'sprouting much dust literally as well as figuratively into its audience's eyes, and no help at all to man or beast in time of many troubles.' Variety (Ibee) sai ular drama it doubtful.'

'The Puritan' drew divided opinion, and, after three days, stopped at the Belmont. House had just been reclaimed from long darkness.

'THE PURITAN'

Opened Jan. 23. Chester Erskin's dramatization of Liam O'Flaherty's novel was cooly received by the first-stringers. Anderson (Journal) called it 'overwrought and overdone.' Garland (Telegram) said the 'dramatization is a messy mixture of introversion, mysti ism and murder melodrama.'

'Parnell' will close at the Barrymore at the end of the week after 12 weeks of moderate business. As a first presentation by new managers it was above the average.

'PARNELL'

Opened Nov. 12, 1935. Play based on the life of the Irish patriot was generally acclaimed by the top-line critics. Hammond (Tribune) declared 'the theatre and historical romance come hospitably together' and Atkinson (Times) called it 'a passionate drama.' Variety (Ibee) sai 'Should do reasonably well.'

Inside Stuff—Legit

Since the large splash made in newspapers last autumn by the 'mercy killing' question, several occurences of the practice and the subsequent debates on subject throughout medical circles, pix have been reported priming a couple of releases on the matter. Understood several companies have stories in the mill dealing directly with the subject.

Hailed as a beater-to-the-punch is 'The Light Behind the Shadow,' legit which debuted in Baltimore on Monday (20) under the guidance of Ed Wynn. Play deals with the subject, and so has the jump on films.

Overlooked in 'mercy killings sweepstakes' till now is Ibsen's 'GHosts,' revival of which just concluded an engagement on Broadway and hit the road again with Nazimova in the starring spot. In past productions, and as usually translated into English, character played by Nazimova (Mrs. Alving) leaves the audiences in doubt as the final curtain falls, whether or not she administers morphia to her afflicted son, which it is understood will end his life. As Nazimova plays the part, 'mercy killing' is definitely carried Picture version of 'Sorrell and Son' would also fall in this category.

Malcolm Sumner, New York corporation attorney who died Jan. 20 was an intimate of the late Martin Herman, brother and associate of A. H. Woods. Pair frequently pulled practical jokes on each other. At one time, when Herman was abroad, Sumner inserted an ad in the Paris edition of the New York Herald offering a reward for the manager's whereabouts. That brought the French gendarmes to Herman's hotel quarters.

During the break-in run of 'Julie the Great' at the National, Washington, trailers plugging the legit show were not only shown in downtown Warner Bros. houses in Washington, but in Baltimore as well. Trailers ran like wordage raves houses run on films. Alex Yokel is presenting 'Julie,' with Warner Bros. backing understood. Yokel's smash of last season, still running, 'Three Men on Horse,' was bankrolled by WB.

Radio looks set for important dough from legit theatres in Philadelphia from now on as result of success of Max Gordon's spot campaign for his 'Ethan Frome' show. It was first time air had been used, producer using series over WCAU. 'Follies' followed suit and also clicked with advance sale. Legit managers express surprise at effectiveness of radio as ad medium and plan steady use in future.

Elaine Ellis, 18-year-old daughter of Harry Oshrin, theatrical attorney, has entered the cast of 'Tobacco Road,' Forrest, New York. he had appeared in one of the road companies.

Oshrin is interested in 'Road,' along with Sam Grisman and Jack Kirkland, latter having made the adaptation from the novel of the same title by Erskine Caldwell.

Recent story mentioning that there are only two stock companies operating in the United States forgot to mention the Guy Palmerton players at the Capitol, Albany, which opened on Sept. 23 and has been there continuously since. Equity, it seems, forgot about Albany still being in the U. S.

George M. Cohan in 'Dear Old Darling' recently opened at the Cass, Detroit, with a $900 house and closed the week with takings of $2,800 for the final night.

Gross on the week was $13,533, opening.

William McBride, Broadway ticket broker, was a casualty as the result of the blizzard last week. He helped men shovel the snow away from his door in Pelham and the next day his back was out of shape. Quit the agency early and went to the hay for several days.

William Fields, who agented 'The Green Pastures' last season and was p.a. for Harry Moses' 'The Old Maid' road tour, was divorced by his wife Ara in Texas.

Fields has resigned from the Moses office.

A young producer is toying with the idea of forming a Broadway stock company. If consummated he will install a permanent troupe, offering a new play each week, with guest stars. Will be done next season, if at all.

Sylvia Smith is the new dramatic editor for the Newark Ledger. She also conducts a daily column for the paper under the title 'Much Ado.' Miss Smith for a time was in Metro's foreign publicity department.

Laguna Beach, Cal., Jan. 28.

'Whistling in the Dark,' starring R. Jacques Welch and Thomasina Mix, will be presented Jan. 31 by Community Players.

Mrs. Marjorie Williamson, former supervising director of Pasadena Community Players, is directing.

Detroit 'New' Theatre

Detroit, Jan. 28.

First of a series of full-length plays dealing with current social problems, 'Peace on Earth' will be given its local premiere by the New Theatre Union at Art Institute, Friday (31), Saturday and Sunday.

Show is under irection of Edwin Gramercy.

'Follies' Big $56,000 2 Wks., Philly; Gillette Revival Okay at $10,500

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Two openings, both of them winning considerable attention, plus one hold-over, combine to give a little more life and gayety to Philly's legit field this week.

Crix had something of a problem for their first night, choosing between the Theatre Guild's highly ballyhooed 'Porgy and Bess' at the Forrest, where it is to play two weeks on ATS subscription, and George M. Cohan's new play, 'Dear Old Darling' at the Garrick. There was a division, with 'Porgy' getting a slight edge. Cohan ads are careful not to specify length of engagement, but it is understood that if trade is okay this week show will hold. Outside of subscription money at the Forrest, there wasn't a great deal of advance for either show.

Maybe Philly is getting its breath after the 'Follies' farewell splash. Big revue overrode handicap of a heavy snowstorm and coldest spell in 22 years to soar to another $28,000 in its second and final week at the Forrest, same figure as first. Starting Thursday virtual capacity ruled, with plenty of turnaways at the last performances. Plenty of work was done here and at the end of the stay 'Follies' looked ready for New York or anywhere.

William Gillette in the revival of 'Three Wise Fools' had a good first week at the Chestnut without getting into the smash class. First two performances were sold to the Philadelphia Forum, which backed up the public sale and helped week's gross. Two matinees were very big for 'Fools' and week's gross went to $10,500. May beat that this week.

Nothing opens next Monday, but on Thursday the Chestnut gets a new try-out, 'The Postman Always Rings Twice' for a nine-day run. The Broad, which has been dark for a number of weeks, relights on Feb. 10 with another try-out, 'Danger—Men Working,' announced for a single week. On the same date, Walter Hampden's revival of 'Cyrano de Bergerac' is skedded for the Garrick.

Estimates for Last Week

'Follies' (Forrest, 2d week). Big revue in real money, despite heavy snow and severe cold. Near $28,000 on both sessions. 'Porgy and Bess' this week for a fortnight on subscription.

'Three Wise Fools' (Chestnut, 1st week). Philly Forum bought house first two nights. That, plus big matinees, raised gross to $10,500. Another week.

'Fortune Teller' (Garrick). Local amateur opera company giving its third offering at this house in past two years. George Cohan's 'Dear Old Darling' current.

'ROAD' $14,000, 2D WK. PITTS., HOLDS OVER

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

'Tobacco Road' continued its sensational business at the Nixon last week, getting close to $14,500 in its second week on top of the $22,300 opening session. Nothing like it was ever encountered before in legit here and the takings are even more imposing than appears on the surface because of sub-zero weather.

Expected to take a nosedive as a result of bad weather, 'Road' more than held its own and on the coldest night of the century here got close to $2,000, even bigger than a lot of high-priced musicals have done locally this season. Show stays for a third week, first time within recent memory that a straight play has remained that long.

House will follow up 'Road's' three-week stay with a solid month of bookings during February. Cornelia Otis Skinner is pencilled in to open next Monday (3), with 'Porgy and Bess,' 'Cyrano de Bergerac' and Katharine Cornell's 'Saint Joan' to follows in the order named.

Estimates for Last Week

'Tobacco Road' (Nixon; 2,100; $2.28). Second week for the saga of the Lesters and continues to do sensational trade. Around $14,000, remarkable on top of $22,300 opening session. Remains a third week.

'Maid' $7,500, Mpls.

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

Considering the 35 below zero weather, 'The Old Maid' showed remarkable box-office power at the Metropolitan last week. It grossed a splendid approximate $7,500 for three nights and a matinee.

Current offering at the same house is 'Three Men on a Horse,' in for a full week. 'Blossom Time' is underlined.

'P. A.' $8,000, Detroit

Detroit, Jan. 28.

With no home players, 'Personal Appearance' didn't drag in very much coin at the Cass last week, gross hitting around $8,000, not too bad for nine performances at $2.20 top. 'Anything Goes,' which opened a six-day stand Monday (27) at $3.30 top, received the better play in daily press during the past two weeks, so legit followers evidently got the idea 'Appearance' was just a breather.

Advance ticket sales for 'Goes' indicate nifty b. o. for the Vinton Freedley musical this week. Next show in line for the Cass is Katharine Cornell's premiere in 'Saint Joan,' starting Feb. 12 for four days. Top price will be $2.75.

Estimates for Last Week

'Personal Appearance' (Cass; 1,400; $2.20 top). No names in the cast and 'Anything Goes' copping all the free advertising, so 'Appearance' was fortunate to roll in $8,000, not too bad for nine performances at $2.20 top. 'Goes' opened Monday (27) at $3.30 top and looks like it will get plenty.

'LETTY' STRONG AT 9G, 5TH WK. H'WOOD

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Charlotte Greenwood and Taylor Holmes in 'Leaning on Letty' ('Post Road') at the El Capitan in Hollywood, town's only legit, garnered excellent biz in its fifth week. Show may close in mid February to make way for 'Petrified Forest,' due in from San Francisco with Conrad Nagel in the lead.

Estimate for Last Week

El Capitan (Duffy) (5th week) (C-1,571; 50, 75, $1, $1.50). Greenwood gal again clicked for $9,000 on fifth passm. Draw is plenty at the Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday mats. In five weeks she's taken out around $54,000.

'Day' $11,000, D. C.

Washington, Jan. 28.

"Call It a Day," being both the first Theatre Guild attraction and the first American Theatre Society item of the season here, came through with a good approximate $11,000 at the National last week.

Capital's only legit stage is occupied by Cornelia Otis Skinner this week in her annual visit. William Gillette in 'Three Wise Fools' arrives next Monday.

'Light' $6,100, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Ed Wynn's production of the drama 'Light Behind the Shadow,' which broke in here at Ford's last week at $2.20 top, grossed a weak approximate $6,100. Biz dwindled badly toward the end of the stanza. Play, currently in Newark bearing the tag it used here, will be billed 'Alice Takats' when it bows into N. Y. next Monday (3) at the Golden.

Legit boards are blacked out this week, but the situation brightens next week when Ford's has 'Tobacco Road' (Henry Hull Company) at $2.20 top, and the indie Auditorium relights with a premiere of 'Danger—Men Working' at the same scale.

'TAMING SHREW' BIG $19,500, BOSTON

Boston, Jan. 28.

'Taming of the Shrew,' with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, easily led the field last week, with 'Three Men on a Horse' placing at the Plymouth in its 12th week. Cornelia Otis Skinner showed with a one-week repertoire of monologues at the Shubert. First night club (Shubert cut-rate gag) practically filled houses Monday and Tuesday nights. Wednesday and Saturday matinees were socko.

The Lunts are here one more week. The Copley closed last week for the season, with 'Ceiling Zero' (5th week), after 15 weeks of local producing. Mary Young now plans to open a dramatic school here in the spring and a summer theatre somewhere in New England.

In great seerecy, the Lunts are rehearsing here their new show, 'Idiot's Delight.' Next attraction at the Colonial is Ina Claire in 'End of Summer,' a new play by S. N. Behrman. On Feb. 17 George M. Cohan brings in 'Dear Old Darling.' William Gillette opens soon at the Shubert. Rumors around of a third company invading Boston with 'Boy Meets Girl,' but not until 'Three Men' leave, and that looks like mid-February, at least.

Walter Hampden opened in 'Cyrano' Monday night (27).

Estimates for Last Week

'Taming of the Shrew' (Colonial; 1st week; $2.75). Always welcomed to the Hub, the Lunts are enjoying their usual big business in this Shakespearean cut-up. Very good at $19,500.

'Three Men on a Horse' (Plymouth; 12th week; $2.75). Heavy track this week, skidding to $8,000.

Cornelia Otis Skinner (Shubert; $2.20). Well received to tune of about $6,000.

Bad Weather Doesn't Bother N. Y. Leaders; 'Frome' $13,000 1st Week

Icy streets in New York, the aftermath of a sleet blizzard followed by zero weather, hardly affected the legit leaders. It was the moderate attractions that took the slap. Early this week another frigid spell set in, but there was a determined effort to clear away the ice mantle covering the midtown thoroughfares.

Two out of three shows which entered the list last week were dropped out on Saturday, Survivor is 'Ethan Frome,' which opened at the National to divided opinion. However, the critics contributed rave notices, something of a surprise to Broadway, and the line at the box office formed from then on. First week (seven performances) grossed $13,000, strong, and should improve.

'The Illustrator's Show,' 48th Street, and 'The Puritan,' Belmont, were the casualties. 'Russet Mantle,' which entered late the previous week, got around $8,000, which is profitable, at the Masque, but 'A Room in Red and White' drew only $3,000 its first full week at the large 46th Street. An additional closing last Saturday was 'Mid-West,' Booth, while 'Parnell' will depart from the Barrymore this week.

'Jumbo' was down to around the $40,000 mark, but under the reduced operating schedule can go along to sizable profit at that figure. It is announced as going on tour in the spring.

Two likely entrants this week are the 'Follies,' Winter Garden, and 'Call It a Day,' Morosco. 'Lady Precious Stream,' which debutted Monday at the Booth, was politely received. Next week 'Alice Takat' (opened in Baltimore last week as 'The Light Behind the Shadow') is due at the Golden and 'The Sap Runs High' comes to the Bijou.

Ruth Draper played to turnaway business at the Booth on her second Sunday night.

Estimates for Last Week

'A Room in Red and White,' 46th st. (2nd week) (D-1,375-$3.30). After being panned, attendance light; first full week estimated around $3,000.

'At Home Abroad,' Majestic (20th week) (R-1,776-$3.30 & $4.40). Early musical leader doing well enough in new berth, with the weekly pace approximating $25,000.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Cort (10th week) (C-1,059-$3.85). Adverse weather conditions hardly felt by leaders because of heavy advance sales; laugh leader again around $19,500 at new scale.

'Call It a Day.' Morosco (1st week) (C-961-$3.30). Presented by Theatre Guild in association with Lee Ephraim; written by Dodie Smith; rated a hit in Washington; opened last night.

'Children's Hour,' Elliott (63rd week) (D-957-$3.30). Matinee strength features attendance of holdover drama; paced around $8,600 last week and may last out season.

'Dead End,' Belasco (14th week) (D-1,000-$3.30). One of the good things that varies but slightly; grooved around $17,500 weekly; long run anticipated.

'First Lady,' Music Box (10th week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Another fine grosser; capacity last week except one night, when sub-zero weather arrived; around $19,000.

'Ethan Frome,' National (2nd week) (D-1,164-$3.30). Indicated success as reaction to rave notices; building business and first seven performances $13,000.

'I Want a Policeman,' Lyceum (3rd week) (D-957-$3.30). First full week estimated a bit over $6,000; must do better to break even; may move; 'Postman Always Rings Twice' booked in Feb. 17.

'Illustrator's Show,' 48th St. Panned and yanked Saturday after four days.

'Jubilee,' Imperial (16th week) (M-1,468-$4.40). Weather somewhat affected business here last week but with the takings around $29,000 it was the number one musical grosser ('Jumbo' excluded).

'Jumbo,' Hippodrome (11th week) (M-4,327-$4.40). With operating nut cut down, circus-musical made some profit last week at approximately $40,000.

'Lady Precious Stream,' Booth (1st week) (D-708-$3.30). Presented by Morris Gest; written by Dr. Hish I. Hsiung; Chinese play opened Monday.

'Libel,' Henry Miller (7th week) (D-944-$3.30). Strong lower floor attendance indicates class patronage; better than $10,000.

'May Wine,' St. James (9th week) (M-1,520-$3.85). Deal with ticket agencies will take this one through the winter; chorusless operetta around $13,000 weekly.

'Mid-West,' Booth. Taken Saturday after three light weeks.

'Moon Over Mulberry St.,' 44th Street (21st week) (D-1,325-$3.30). After being closed one week resumed with cut rate arrangement and claimed profitable; around $3,500.

'Mulatto,' Vanderbilt (15th week) (D-804-$3.30). One of the shows supported by cut rates; business estimated around $2,500 also claimed better than even break.

'Night of Jan. 16,' Ambassador (20th week) (D-1,156-$2.75). A. H. Woods' melodramatic success running along to weekly profit; grooved around $9,500 mark.

'One Good Year,' Fulton (10th week) (C-913-$3.30). Small operating cost permits profit at modest pace; last week slightly under previous going; around $3,500.

'Parnell,' Barrymore (12th week) (D-1,096-$3.30). Final week definitely announced; takings dipped to $7,500 but strong windup pace indicated.

'Paradise Lost,' Longacre (8th week) (D-1,019-$3.30). Also slated off but announced to continue, with business claimed to have bettered; estimated around $5,000 mark.

'Pride and Prejudice,' Plymouth (13th week) (D-1,046-$3.30). Holds to excellent business, although under pace of front runners; best atendance at matinees; $16,000 last week.

'Russet Mantle,' Masque (3rd week) (C-900-$3.30). Strong at week-end and figured to make a stay of it; business first full week estimated around $8,000.

'Scandals,' New Amsterdam (6th week) (R-1,717-$4.40). Much better than first indicated, but not capacity; strongest on lower floor; last week around $27,000.

'The Puritan,' Belmont. Withdrawn Saturday after three days; got weak press.

'Three Men on a Horse,' Playhouse (53rd week) (C-869-$3.30). Starting second year and still turning a goodly profit; grooved around $11,000 lately.

'Tobacco Road,' Forrest (113th week) (C-1,017-$1.65). Long stayer very big on road and making money here, with the pace around $8,500 at low scale.

'Victoria Regina,' Broadhurst (6th week) (CD-1,118-$3.30). Dramatic leader figured to clean up until warm weather arrives; paced at $23,500, which is capacity all performances.

'Winterset,' Beck (19th week) (D-1,214-$3.30). Slipped downward, but matinees particularly strong; last week approximated $8,000.

'ziegfeld Follies,' Winter Garden (1st week) (R-1,425-$4.40). resented in name of Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld (Billie Burke) but produced by Lee Shubert; rated best revue in years from Philadelphia reports; opens Thursday (30)

Other Attractions

'Let Freedom Ring,' Civic Rep theatre; 14th street.

'Murder in the Old Red Barn,' American Music Hall; old melller in former East Side church; with beer; opens Saturday (1).

Ruth Draper, Booth; Sunday night; one weekly.

Advance Sales Buoy Chi Despite Sub-Zero Wave; 'Boy' Opener, $10,000

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Headlines in the local dailies throughout the major portion of last week told the reason for the depleted box-offices in the loop. Worst sub-zero spell in 35 years swept the street bare of people: the home fires burned bright and the radio revelled in its biggest listening audience in years.

There were five shows in town and what business they did came mainly in the form of advance sales; people who had already bought and paid for their duets and who had to face the nipped ears and frozen schnozzes so as not to lose their investments. That the theatres did as well as they did speaks well, since the box-office sales hit new lows.

Two entrants to the legit field last week, 'Ghosts' and 'Boy Meets Girl' did well in the face of this sub-zero thermometer. 'Ghosts' had the backing of the American Theatre Society subscription rolls, while 'Boy' had to go it alone. 'Boy' indicates a good stay. Management has exhibited a readiness to spend freely on exploitation; house now doling out around $2,000 weekly for bill-posting, and started off with an expenditure of $4,000 for billboards and sniping.

'Anything Goes' scrammed after five flabby sessions. Hit for Detroit and will try to get back to Boston for a while.

Departure of 'Goes' leaves the Grand Opera House in a bad way. Has only Cornelia Otis Skinner booked for one week in February, and a tentative date for revival of 'Cyrano de Bergerac' with Walter Hampden in March. Otherwise nothing until 'At Home Abroad' in the spring. Sam Gerson of the Shubert office jumped to New York last week to try to rustle up some shows for the house.

Estimates for Last Week

'Anything Goes,' Grand (1,200; $3.30). Closed local run of five weeks (Saturday (25) to generally disappointing take. Around $18,000 for final stanza, weak. Off to Detroit and heading east. Was the first musical comedy of the season for Chicago and its chill reception was a disappointment.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Selwyn (1,000; $2.75) (2nd week). Opened to good notices and comment. Despite brutal weather managed $10,000 on first session. Word-of-mouth excellent.

'Ghosts,' Erlanger (1,200; $2.75) (second week). Subscriptions and advance sale fine for Ibsen revival. Touched close to $11,000 last week and should do even better currently. May shift into the Blackstone for a holdover. 'Taming of Shrew' with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne replaces at this house next Monday (Feb. 3) as third of American Theatre Society season.

'Great Waltz,' Auditorium ($3,700; $2.75) (fifth weeks). Extravaganza musical holding to strong pace on small operation. Will stick a while at present pace. Clean cut $26,000 last week.

'Personal Appearance,' Harris ($1,000; $2.75) (sixth week). Looks like the long-run winner of the loop. Prancing down the lane to excellent profits week after week. Around $2,500 last week, splendid. Capable of going on into March on this strength and advance sales.

Plays on Broadway

ETHAN FROME

Tragedy in three acts presented at the National, N. Y., Jan. 21, '36, by Max Gordon; adapted from Edith Wharton's novel of same title by Owen and Donald Davis and from previous script of Lowell Barrington; Pauline Lord, Ruth Gordon and Raymond Massey starred; staged by Guthrie McClintic; $3.30 top.

Harmon Gow .....John Winthrop
A Young Man .....Oliver Barbor
Ethan Frome .....Raymond Massey
Zenobia From .....Pauline Lord
Dennie Eady .....Tom Ewell
Mattie Silver .....Ruth Gordon
Jotham .....Francis Pierlot
Ed Varnum .....Charles Henderson
Ned Hale .....W. Dana Hardwick
Ruth Varnum .....Sylvia Weld
Mrs. Hale .....Marie Falls

Tragedy in terms of the stage means trouble to the average person, and 'Ethan Frome' is like that from any viewpoint. Yet the weight of first night reception and exceptional histrionics should give the play success. That it will approximate the popularity of the front-running comedies is doubtful, however.

Judged from the attendance records in Philadelphia, 'Frome' was counted a winner before it bowed onto Broadway, but there were first-nighters who were not diverted by the enactment, set in a frozen, backwoods New England farmhouse and nearby snow-clad hills. Other managers considered presenting Edith Wharton's bleak story about a poverty-ridden couple, then Max Gordon decided to do it and gave the play about the best presentation it could have gotten.

But the indicated difference of opinion seems bound to count in the run chances of 'Frome.' Along Broadway the ticket experts say that theatregoers much prefer to laugh than to sprinkle sentimental sympathy upon stage unfortunates. Owen Davis has long been a specialist in dramatizing New England, its snow and its unpleasant people, his best being the Pulitzer prize-winning 'Icebound.' Ever since then he has sought to repeat, and with the collaboration of his son Donald, 'Frome' is the answer.

Ethan's wife, a hypochondriac, has as ugly a name as the surroundings, that of Zenobia. Although Ethan had one year at tech college, he, too, is illiterate. He knows nothing of psychiatry in explanation of Nobi's constant complaints of aches and pains, so he calls her a 'fretter.' Perhaps any woman cooped up for seven years would get the jitters, too.

But the wife creates the triangle in the house by sending for her half cousin Mattie to do the housework. Mattie worked in a mill down Worcester way, but was fired and has no kin to turn to. She is cheerful and, although incompetent, provides an outlet for Ethan. There is a mere suggestion of sex between Mattie and Ethan, but when Nobi senses an affair in the offing she sends the girl away.

On a hilltop they confess their love and they go coasting down, steering into the big tree holding on to each other on the sled. But this plan of double suicide fails. Epilog, 20 years later, has Ethan with a withered arm, Mattie is a hopeless invalid, chattering half insanely in a wheel chair, while the wife ministers to her. That is the cheerless, if not enervating, scene that sends the audience out.

Cast presents a three star line-up. Pauline Lord as the wife, Ruth Gordon as the girl and Raymond Massey as the husband. It is a toss-up which turns in the best performance, with the probable edge to Miss Gordon as the giddy, harmless Mattie.

Guthrie McClintic handled the direction and brought out the dramatic highlights as best he could in such a story. Incident of the broken plate is overdone and that is not Miss Gordon's fault.

Playhouse apparently was attracted to the play because of its colloquialisms, homely terms not in the language of the city. That same feature was present in the same manager's 'The Farmer Takes a Wife' last season, but there the phrases were more comic and helped the play register in the fairly strong fashion in which it did. Ibee.

Lady Precious Stream

Comedy in two parts. Presented at the Booth, N. Y., Jan. 27, '36, by Mona Gest; written by S. I. Hsiung and staged by same; Helen Chandler, Bramwell Fletcher and Clarence Derwent featured; $3.30 top.

Many times has Morris Gest looked over Europe for dramatic novelties to be presented on Broadway. Often he came back with prizes, but he has no illusion about this Chinese fable, which has been running at the Little, London, for a long time. It is comparatively a trifle, but novel, with indications that it will command class patronage for a limited time.

There is a charm to some features of 'Lady Precious Stream,' and outstanding is the delicate Mai-Mai Sze, slender Chinese girl programmed as 'Honorable Reader.' Miss Sze speaks beautiful English, but her voice is so low that it isn't easy to hear her jesting comments on the play.

She concludes with the observation that Chinese plays are not as long as reported; that they are rarely as long as 'Strange Interlude,' and never longer than 'Back to Methuselah,' which won polite giggles the first night. Yet the play does seem long, and it is much too quiet for the average playgoer.

'Precious Stream' is beautifully costumed, most of the trappings being designed by Mei Lan Fang, China's number one actor. There is a single setting, effectively lighted. The audience is asked to imagine various scenes. Two so-called property men are on stage throughout, fetching the various props and chairs as needed and acting bored most of the time.

Story is an interrupted romance between Lady Precious Stream, youngest daughter of the prime minister, and Hsieh Ping-Kuel, the gardener. She chooses to wed him instead of selecting a wealthy prince, so they go to live in a cave. After a month the husband, luckily, is made an officer in a punitive expedition to the Western Regions. He is reported killed in action, but instead he becomes the Emperor, and is beloved by the Princess.

After 18 years he gets word that his deserted wife still awaits him and is in rags. He dashes off, pursued by the Princess, who is permitted to accompany him only if agreeing to be his sister. After a lot of hokus pokus Ping-Kuel and Precious Stream are reunited, and they sit in regal robes in her father's house.

The Chinese idea of comedy-drama is okay in its fashion, but requires an audience that accepts it in the spirit of its rendition. Costuming of titled Chinese is contrasted with the high colors and flashy uniforms along the lines of Cossack full dress (the Western Regions of the play). Those help not a little to discount the caperings of characters supposed to be astride galloping horses, for instance.

Helen Chandler is in the title part, with Bramwell Fletcher as her long-absent mate. Clarence Derwent is the prime minister, all three being featured. Natalie Schafer is the attractive princess, and her final outfit is closest to modern dress, except, of course, that worn by Miss Sze. Ibee.

ILLUSTRATORS' SHOW

Revue presented at the 48th Street theatre, N. Y., Jan. 22, '36, by Tom Weatherly; score, Frank Loesser, Irving Actman, Earl Crooker, Frederick Loewe, Milton Pascal, Edgar Fairchild, Max Liebman, Hi Alexander; sketches by Otto Soglow, Nat and Max Lief, Carl Randall and others; dances staged by Randall; sketches by Allen Delano.

Helen Lynd, Earl Oxford, Niela Goodele, Gomez and Winona featured; others: Otto Soglow, Elizabeth Houston, Fred Cooper, Edward Mowen, Dan Harden, William Houston, Robert Berry, Norm n Lind; $3.85 top.

Cops stopped the private annual show of the Society of Illustrators, which groups the best known cartoonists and sketch artists. That was about two months ago. The raid ended to attract at least one Broadway showman and, that was no favor, as disclosed at the professional premiere. At $7.70 top it certainly was no bargain for first nighters.

What the Illustrators do for comedy in their shows was clearly indicated. They just make the sketches dirty. One or two that made the flatfeet blush are still in the show, but cleaned up, there being but a few points that New Yorkers could rate as off color. Ladies who draw forgot to put in laughs, unless they figured that Otto Soglow would be funny enough on his own. Soglow is a dumpy little guy. As an actor he is a good illustrator. At least he put that line in the show, at the finale, and it fits.

There are some good things in the revue, but nearly all are concentrated in the first part. Second section is on its own and is progressively bad. There are two or three songs however, which brighten the proceedings, topping with 'A Waltz Was Born In Vienna' sung by Niela Goodelle and Earl Oxford. Same team scored with 'If You Didn't Love Me' and 'Bang, The Bell Rang.'

Helen Lynd, commedienne, dominates the show. She starts brightly as a cracker debutante from Waycross, Ga. Her best lyric is 'I Like To Go Strange Places,' while her antics in the sketches are better than the material by far. On the other hand, Elizabeth Houston doesn't do so well as the sombrette, being much too coy when she hoofs with Dan Harden. Late in the first part they toss in O. Z. Whitehead. He impersonates a half-wit monologist and has been in one or two of the small-time intimate revues of the past two seasons. Here he just annoys the customers.

Outstanding is the work of the chorus, a good looking bunch of 12 girls. Evolutions worked out by Carl Randall, while not intricate, are novel and click. Splendid dancing of Gomez and Winona is also worth watching and the class duo con individual applause honors.

If the second part could hold the pace of the first, the revue might have had a chance, but it looks as though the artists couldn't deliver any more worthwhile material. Their alibi is that it was intended for private showing. Ibee.

Starts out like a good murder investigation play but ends like something else, to the disappointment of the auditors. Its a very Irish and incoherent story, given an excellent presentation, but apparently a wasted effort.

Chester Erskin, with this play, brings the Belmont back to the legit list. House is all doled up and, while it has but 515 seats, that is plenty for straight plays. In case of a click a long run is made possible. Erskin has possession of the theatre and intends presenting a number of shows there under his own direction. That should be a

Plays Abroad

TONIGHT AT 8:30

London, Jan. 14.

Two sets of threeone-act plays by Noel Coward, presented by John C. Wilson at the Phoenix theatre, Jan. 9 and Jan. 13, '36. Stars Noel Coward, Gertrude Lawrence; features Allson Leggatt, Moya Nugent, Edward Underdown, Alan Webb, Kenneth Carten, Everley Gregg, Anthony Pelissier. Musical numbers by Noel Coward; dances by Ralph Reader.

Immediate impression of Noel Coward's first set of three one-act plays is that he received his inspiration for them from his visits to America.

Noel Coward writes his own musical shows, composes the music, produces and manages them, of course also starring in them. In this first program his gift for writing, composing and acting is interesting, but not altogether entertaining.

Opening playlet is titled 'Family Album,' and laid in the drawing room of a house, in 1860. Family album idea is suggestive of the old tin-type skits done in America for many years, and the plot recalls the story of the dying man surrounded by his children, whose last words to them are that they are all illegitimate, as he never married their mother.

Coward doesn't go quite that far. It opens with them all solemnly mourning their parent, especially the youngest daughter, who has sacrificed her life to care for the old man in his declining years. After a few drinks, she suddenly bursts forth with the remark: 'To hell with father.'

It is disclosed he spent most of his life with three mistresses, and just before he died had made a will bequeathing the bulk of his estate to them. The girl tells the others that the will was witnessed by the aged family butler, and with his aid she destroyed it. There is 40 minutes of intermediate dialog, with some singing, the costuming and dialog being in the period.

Second one, 'The Astonished Heart,' is in six scenes, all in the same room, and the intervals of time are created through the medium of blackouts. Time is the present, and it is a clinical study of a successful psychiatrist who has been married 12 years when he meets his wife's schoolmate. They have a hectic affair and the story is a scientific dissertation on the subject of the power of body over mind. He loves his wife, but cannot give up the other woman, and when she breaks it off, he jumps out of the window.

An interesting psychological stu

'Circle' Road Try

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Wee and Leventhal are going to revive 'Squaring the Circle' for a few road dates.

Original cast save for one or two members will be reassembled for the road company. Opening will be at the indie Maryland here, with the probable date Feb. 24. Will stay here for a week, then head into Philly with the idea of snuggling down for a run via cut-rate. 'Circle' opened in the Quaker City prior to Broadway and did well there.

Old Debt of $4,000 Haunts Opera Try; Follow-Up Matinee Almost As Bad

first 'grand' opera of season, staged last Tuesday (21), cracked front pages as biggest local story of the day, but not because it was music. It came closer to being a riot.

Trouble arose from fact that local producer tried to pay off musicians at last minute with check instead of cash, as called for in contract. Orchestra refused to go on, stage hands and electricians sat tight and even costumer withheld half the clothes. Result was that show was delayed two hours and finally went on at 10:30 p. m., with house lights and portable organ accompaniment.

First indication of situation came when Mrs. Edouard Albion, wife of the local music teacher producing the opera, appeared on the stage waving a check for $1,500 and exclaiming that the orchestra had fused to accept it. Audience, which had already been seated for nearly an hour, greeted news with hisses.

'This is the most terrible thing that has ever happened in the history of music,' Mrs. Albion continued, tears staining her cheeks. 'Won't some prominent Washingtonian step forward and add his endorsement?'

Nobody stepped up. Mrs. Cabot Stevens, local society matron, strode and down the aisle exclaiming, 'This is an outrage, etc.' Gertrude Lyons, president of D. C. Federation of Music Clubs, located Albert C. Hayden, president of the Musicians' Local Union, on the telephone about 9:30, and begged him to accept the check. Her face was scarlet when she reported he flatly refused.

Home, James!

By this time, half the audience of about 1,000 had left. Trouble arose at the door when bejeweled ladies couldn't find their cars. The chauffeurs were under orders to return at a later hour.

When the musicians, convinced they would never see cash, began to pack up their instruments, Mrs.

Building Bar in Balto For Met Opera's Advent

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Though Maryland is far famed as a likker-lappin' community, there is not throughout length and breadth of state a theatre with bar on premises. In the days before prohibition almost all spots playing flesh had 'em.

Best being done nowadays is the erection of temporary bar in the concert hall Lyric for the three-day stand Met Opera company will make here in April. Drinks will be served in lounge, after the custom which prevails at the Met Opera House in N. Y., wher a bar flourishes during intermishes.

Menuhin's 2-Year Loaf

Yehudi Menuhin, boy violinist, is retiring from public life for a two-year stretch following his Carnegie date on March 22, which winds up his current round-the-world tour. He airs on the General Motor hour on March 29, and immediately after that departs for a ranch in the Santa Cruz mountains, San Francisco.

During the next two years, retirement he's to mature and then resume professionally as an adult. He's now 18.

72-Year-Old Concert Pianist Takes Walk—In Blizzard

Detroit, Jan. 28.

On his way here from Los Angeles for a concert with Detroit Symphony, Isidor Philipp, 72-year-old concert pianist, didn't let a zero Michigan blizzar him last week after he had been misdirected into the section of a train bound for Grand Rapids, Mich. Discovering mistake, Philipp got train to stop and he trudged several miles back through snow and cold to Kalamazoo, Mich., minus his music, luggage and overcoat, and boarded Detroit train.

'Outside I was cold, to be ,' said Philipp, 'but inside I was warm, I was so mad.'

KING'S DEATH SHIFTS DATES

Funeral services for King George V last Tuesday (28) necessitated some changes in Canadian bookings for concert artists appearing un Columbia Concerts banner. Jascha Heifetz first pacted to play in Montreal on Jan. , had his date shoved back to March 27.

Jooss ballet which was scheduled to appear in Toronto on the 28th, had its date canceled altogether, as no advance time was open, and return sailing date had already been made. Alexander Brailowsky ori inally signed for Jan. 23 in Ottawa had his date changed to Jan. 30, so as not to interfere with the official mourning period.

Lotte Lehmann, however, was permitted to sing last week (24) in Ottawa, as it was far enough in advance. Trio Italiano's Montreal date on Feb. 5 okay and left as is. The same for Ruth Slenczynski on the 30th in Toronto. The latter is handled through Charles L. Wagner office.

CITY PAYS $15,000 ON OPERA DEFICIT

Chicago, Jan. 28.

City treasury yesterday (Monday) paid promised $15,000 toward 1935 deficit of Chicago City Opera, following ruling of corporation counsel that, while public money could not legally be used to subsidize shows, it was oke to pay because opera company earned payment by 'advertising city through a broadcast performance.'

Money immediately used in paying $6,000 to musicians, $4,000 to stage-hands and $5,000 to chorus.

Proceeds of special 'Butterfly' performance Jan. 31 will be used to meet current overhead of skeleton staff preparing for 1936 season, starting November. Sidney Rayner replaces Armand Tokatyon as tenor in special show.

$2,000 Advance Sale for Opera In Joliet, Ill.

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Peoria, Springfield and Joliet have joined with Rockford for the Illinois sector of the proposed Middle-West circuit for Baptiste Jean De Keyser's venture under the name of the Chicago Grand Opera Co. The Publix-Great States chain is going into the deal with DeKeyser as a result of the big gate Jan. 8 in the Rockford Coronado with 'Rigoletto.' That is the opera decided on for Feb. 12 in Springfield and 13 in Joliet, and will probably be the first opera for Peoria also, although the date there has not been set. Meanwhile, Feb. 4, Rockford will have 'Carmen,' second item in the proposed accumulation of a repertoire of standard operas.

Joliet, which has always been dependent on Chicago for its opportunities to hear opera at all, is so happy at the prospect of opera on the spot that it had already sent in $2,000 in advance-orders by Jan. 22, three weeks ahead. Louis St. Pierre, manager at Rockford, says the 'Carmen' show will surpass the $3,500 gross for 'Rigoletto.'

Florence Macbeth Okay

Florence Macbeth, soprano, who's been ill for several weeks since singing on a Christmas benefit at a N. Y. hospital, has recovered and will chant again soon.

Diva had to cancel a Chicago date on Jan. 10, due to the sick spell.

Concerts and Opera

'GIANNI SCHICCHI'

(IN ENGLISH)

Metropolitan Opera one-acter. Sung in English by Lawrence Tibbett, Joseph Bentonelli, Hilda Burke. Conducted by Genari Papi. English lyrics by Percy Pitt.

Metropolitan Opera went in for a bit of an experiment (27) and it didn't turn out too bad. Consisted of the revival of a one-act Puccini opera, 'Gianni Schicchi' in English. For years the theory has been that it doesn't make any difference what language opera singers use since nobody could understand operatic diction anyhow.

Another tradition upset! 'Gianni Schicchi' in English is understandable English.

Of course, the Met was especially careful. Didn't just take a flying leap. Two male leads in the short one-acter are handled by Lawrence Tibbett and Joe Benton. Latter is the Oklahoma lad who is programmed as Bentonelli and who is this season's (and many season's) best Metropolitan publicity stunt. But that is not the point. What counts is that he is an Oklahoma boy with a clear American diction. And Tibbett is trained in the must-be-clear diction of films.

Hilda Burke, who plays the femme lead, is a slim blue-eyed Baltimore lass with a Harlow-tinted hairdress and is obviously conversant with the English language. The other parts are small ones. So, with that setup, it's a cinch that the characters are going to know English as she is spoke in these United States. And (as in this case) with the opera a light farce affair with simple lines, anyway, it all becomes pretty much pianola.

Edward Johnson, the Metropolitan's new major domo, has taken things pretty easy so far, which is sensible caution. Now comes this little gesture and it is effective, although dangerous. In France, for instance, all operas are switched to French. And the Paris Opera House is perhaps one of the poorest, artistically, in the world. Which may, or may not, connect up.

In America, obviously a new standard of opera has long been needed. Shelving (mostly) of the 300-pounders has already helped a lot. The simplification of the language, and the bringing of it down to an ordinary man's level will help a lot more—if not overdone, and if showmanly handled. And that, of course, is the rub.

Important thing for opera is new blood, new operas. This gesture looks like a healthy step. It is a clarion call for new audiences. Old guard, perhaps, won't like it. But new customers can be found for opera, and this may be one way of finding them.

As a matter of fact, the whole program last Monday night was a revelation of the Met's new day. 'Schicchi' followed 'La Boheme' (which together makes too long a program). 'Boheme' was sung by Charles Kullman, New Haven's gift to opera by way of Germany, and Elde Norena. Kullman is young, handsome and (comparatively) slim. Miss Norena is brunette and slim, barely tipping the scales at 100 or so. The other important femme part, that of Musetta, was sung by Helen Gleason, another American, another slenderly built lass, another blonde.

It doesn't matter that Miss Norena muffed a couple of her top notes. (Or is it ever admitted that a Met star muffs some top notes? What counts is that the American talent is in the Met now, sprinkled all the way through. The talent end has been brought up to date.

Now if the beef trust can be removed from the chorus and extra ranks (or is that too much to ask?) and the operas themselves chosen a bit more intelligently from a standpoint of modern taste—then, probably, the Met won't have to worry so much about deficits. Kauf.

Jooss Ballet

Jooss Ballet (25) made its second U. S. appearance last Tuesday night (21) at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., under auspices of the Seamen's Church Institute. Attraction drew a good house and got strong notices from the press and on the strength of these Columbia Concerts, started dickering for a Broadway legit house in which to house them for a return engagement before sailing date.

'Ballade' was the only new ballet presented this time, the other three numbers, 'Big City,' 'Ball in Old Vienna' and 'Green Table' having been seen before. Latter piece is the satirical one which pushed the Jooss label into prominence when it won first place at an International

JOE BENTON CAN'T BE SELF

For a time it appeared as if Giuseppi Bentonelli, new tenor at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., was going to change his name to plain Joseph Benton following his overnight click at the opera when he pinch-hitted for Richard Crooks on short notice and scored sensationally. However, friends and concert managers on the inside advised him against such a move, claiming that his European public knows him by the other label and it would muddle his career greatly.

Idea first cropped up when singer thought of falling in line with the growing use of American monickers in the operatic field today. He's a native Oklahoman, but has sung for years with a phoney Italian tag.

Audition at the Met which landed him the sudden attention was his third. He goes back to Europe this summer, and still under the Bentonelli name.

Columbia Concerts Corp. will not book any guest dates on the forthcoming radio series to be sponsored by Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Series starts over NBC on Feb. 27 direct from Pittsburgh and will originate in local concert halls with a free audience angle. Guesters on the 13-week run which will feature the Pittsburgh Symphony under Antonio Modarelli, conductor, are to be supplied entirely through NBC Artists Service and outside bookers.

Pittsburgh concert managers are reported upset over free show thing as it's thought it will menace their own prosperity. Series similar to Ford and General Motors hour.

Both Columbia Concerts and NBC wer said to be against booking class talent for any more free shows thusly, other than the two major programs already etherizing. However, NBC is going ahead in this instance and has already tentatively set Martinelli and Maria Jeritza for the openers.

May Beegle, Pittsburgh concert manager, is most concerned ther and has contacted both N. Y. bureaus to get straight on the deal. There's a possibility that if pacted as planned now, Pittsburgh managers would chill on booking any NBC talent for platform appearances on musicale series, etc. They think the broadcasts should be either closed programs or operated on admission gate.

First programs will probably emanate from Mosque in Pittsburgh, with ensuing broadcasts coming from Carnegie Hall there. B. B. D. & O. agency is handling account.

Columbia Concerts with its five merged bureaus controls the majority of operatic talent on the market, which would presumably keep many of the biggest names off the run.

$300 'JOB' FOR STRAVINSKY AN ISSUE

Paris, Jan. 19.

Candidacy of Igor Stravinsky, Russian-born composer naturalized French 18 months ago, for seat among the immortals in the Institute of France, is raising row between those who like foreigners and those who don't.

Anti-Stravinskites say he isn't eligible on account of a recent law barring naturalized citizens from paid government jobs until 10 years after naturalization. Position of Member of the Institute is called a job because the immortals get $300 a year.

Advocates of the composer reply that a government job means a place in which you work for the government, and particularly one which involves payment of a retirement pension, because the law was devised to prevent payment of pensions to temporary 'citizens.' There's no pension for immortals, because they're elected for life.

NEMTCHINOVA FORMS OWN RUSSIAN BALLET

Paris, Jan. 19.

New Russian ballet of 24 has been formed here, headed by Nera Nemtchinova, which is already booked for Monte Carlo and London, and which has ambitions to cop the name of Monte Carlo Russian Ballet, already used by De Basil.

Troupe made ballet scenes of 'Mayerling' film, set in Viennese opera. With Nemtchinova are Anatol Obaitzoff and Helene Hinsova as leading dancers.

Food for Thought

St. Mary's county Enterprise, country weekly published in Leonardtown, Maryand, last week inserted following notice to delinquent subscribers:

'If you do not have money befor revising our mailing lists, please bring us wood, potatoes, chickens, corn or hay in payment of your subscription.'

Van Gelder Vice Chamberlai

John Chamberlain, who does book review column for New York Times, to become one of the editors of Fortune starting March 1. Chamberlain has been reviewing books on the Times for over two years.

Robert Van Gelder to succeed Chamberlain on Times. Van Gelder will do three columns a week in Feb. and daily thereafter.

Conn. Precedes N.

Contemplated agreement among New York dailies to boost commercial copy carrying amusement plugs to regular amusement rate is nothing new in New Haven, Conn.

For some time, Register and Journal-Courier, under single ownership, have had this rule in force, making it tough in many instances for theatre publicity men to effect advantageous tie-ups due to unwillingness of merchants to stand the considerably jacked-up rate.

Competitors Nix Hellinger Ads

Mark Hellinger' new Sunday (N. Y.) American column was refused ad space by the N. Y. Daily News and the N. Y. Daily Mirror. The News, being wholly competitive, was understandable by the American officials, but the Mirror, although under the same Hearstian affinity, likewise refused to run any ads on Hellinger for the American. Reason for that is Hellinger's triweekly column in the Mirror, which also has Sunday edition, and therefore considers the Sunday American direct competition.

The same situation exists in a number of keys where Hellinger's two columns are syndicated through two different channels. In Chicago, the Sunday Examiner runs Hellinger, but the Chi American uses his other column on week days. In Los Angeles the Herald-Express, also a Hearst paper, Sundays.

Hellinger is probably the sole such newspaper feature thus handled in America.

JOOS BALLET

dancefest a few years ago. Again it proved the most impressive on the evening's program.

'Bade' based on an old French chronicle, is danced in cellophane garb and retarded antics. Highly stylized costuming garnered most comment, as the courtliness of the choreography seemed tame as a starter. Kurt Jooss conceived it, with music by John Colman. Two pianos used, and played expertly by Colman and F. A. Cohen. Duo was allotted the spotlight twice during the performance for duet chores.

Jooss' much talked about style combines the classic with modern ruggedness. Met's large stage proved no hindrance, as the movement was lively enough generally to hold the audience. Company is more or less new with the following stand-outs: Rudolf Pescht ('Death' in the 'Table'); Otto Struller, Noelle de Mosa, Hans Zuellig, Ernst Uthoff and Elsa Kahl. Troupe should fare okay on the road. val.

Humphrey-Weidman

Second series of recital programs this season for Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman with their modern dance group was presented Sunday night (19) at the Guild. Bit entitled 'Theatre Piece' lampoons many of the accepted forms. It boiled down into a less complicated pattern it could stand insertion in some legit musical as recognizable satire.

Best of the eight parts is from Weidman himself, in which with Katherine Manning and Katherine Litz, spoofing of torch singers, applause seekers, curtain calls and other footlight and radio manners is carried out. Only accompaniment is a drum. It's modern stuff, but okay for general consumption.

Costuming and lighting minus any frills. Jose Limon, who appeared in 'As Thousands Cheer,' and more recently a Music Hall production, is also a member of this troupe, and his experience and snap is noticeable. Second half of the program, 'New Dance,' has been done before, but is too intricate to lend itself to any other exploitation. Troupe gives its second and final N. Y. appearance this Sunday night (26) at the same house. val.

Writers In Suicide Pact

Douglas Turney, 55, one time managing editor of Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, and August Benecke, 57, short story writer, died there Jan. 24 in a suicide pact. Their bodies were found in a downtown rooming house, their heads swathed in chloroform-saturated towels. Rejection slips littered the floor. Together two years ago they made a trip to Germany. They had made many fruitless efforts to sell the story of their experiences abroad.

A note left to Benecke's brother requested that he sell 80 acres of land deceased owned to pay for cremation of the bodies. Note added they were sick and had decided to go together.

Fiction and Films

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

Two Current Plays

Random House adds to its growing list of contemporary drama with the publication of two new play scripts, 'Boy Meets Girl' ($2), by Bella and Samuel Spewack, and 'Paradise Lost' ($2), by Clifford Odets.

'Paradise' is one of the most discussed plays of the season, its current run at the Longacre having caused much pro and con argumentation. This should give the book version even more interest than usual. It is one of those plays, which, even in script form, will call for much dissension by its very nature and attitude. Yet it cannot be passed over lightly and forgotten; it clings; it calls for thought. And, in book form, it's, if anything, superior to its acted version on Broadway. It's clearer.

'Boy Meets Girl' in book form is a bit disappointing. The acting must help its current hit rating at the Cort considerably, since, as reading, it is only fair. Much of it is amusing and some of it is very funny, but it doesn't stand up all the way through. Book also contains a minor effort of the Spewacks, 'Spring Song,' which was produced a year ago for a few performances. It is distinctly in a minor key and unworthy of the Spewack brand.

On Baton-Wavers

Taking the quite reasonable view that most people seem to know nothing at all about conducting and conductors, David Ewen sat himself down to write a big book on the subject. Result is 'Man With the Baton' (Crowell; $3.50), an enlightening, though (automatically) limited discussion of the subject. Introduction is by Sergei Koussevitzky and batoneers most thoroughly discussed are Toscanini, Stokowski, Koussevitzky and Weingartner. Much of it is illuminating and a great deal of it is talky, but as a whole it is an honest and thorough study of the subject. Only obvious mistake Ewen makes is showing his personal preference too much.

Toscanini gets a second, and fuller, share of book discussion in 'Toscanini' (Viking; $2.25), by Paul Stefan, with a foreword by Stefan Zweig. Stefan is one of the leading European music critics, and it is quite obvious that he knows his subject, but is pulling his punches. Book is not so much a biography of the maestro as a tribute to him. It contains a lot of biographical information and practically no interpretation. A lot of good action photographs help make it acceptable, but even so it will be restricted to those (and there are, fortunately, many) sold ahead of time. A good biography of Toscanini is still a good hunch for someone to write.

Omnibus of Crime

A wild and woolly yarn is 'The Yellow Robe Murders,' by Melville Burt (Macaulay; $2). A lot of action and plenty of gore plus an overuse of mystification are balanced by some unusually bad English and a complete lack of probability. Oke for circulating libraries; n.g. for films.

When British writers go in for thriller fiction it's liable to be pretty gosh-awful. 'Two Knocks for Death' (Hopkins; $2) is one such. Much excitement, many fights, hundreds of criminals, loads of action—and nothing happens. No hope for films, although in the old days it would have been an okay serial.

By EPES W. SARGENT

New Pattern

Just to prove there was something besides cattle rustling going on in pioneer days, L. W. Emerson chips in with a story of the building of a telephone line across the sagebrush trail.

In his 'Rawhide' (Morrow; $2) he tells of the rivalry of two construction gangs approaching the town which gives the story its name. Whoever first gets the wire into town gets a bonus. Curry Wayne sides with old Geronimo Garland (not to mention his daughter, June), and manages to beat out Moss, coming into town from the other side. Plenty of action along new lines and of sufficient originality to su gest picture chances.

Strong Stuff

Anna Robeson Burr works up to a powerful climax in her 'Golden Quicksand' (Appleton-Century; $2). It's a story of old Santa Fe before the American occupation, which is becoming popular as a story locale since it presents such gorgeous coloring.

The hero is a New England youth who goes to the then Mexican territory in search of his brother. He finds him in a strongly tragic circumstance, but not before much preliminary adventure which keeps the story in constant forward movement.

Not the usual western type story this time, but more in the nature of an historical romance, well handled and skillfully written. Good picture material, though possibly will be avoided because of th Spanish angle.

romising Novice

According to the jacket blurb, 'I'll Mourn You Later' (Houghton, Mifflin, $2) is the work of Chatherine Whitcomb, a newcomer who is offering her first novel at only 22. If this is fact, the young author will command a lot of watching. Her first offering is singularly mature in pattern and style.

There is no hint of the unpractised writer in this story of a family. Perhaps objection might be made that it is overweighted with insanity, but this is handled so well that it becomes plausible. The story opens with the arrival at the old home of a brother and sister who are bearing their mother's ashes to the family plot. Accompanying are the brother's wife, a drab, half-mad creature who is persona non grata to the entire family, including her husband. Also in the party is the daughter and husband of the woman who serves as chief protagonist, a happy-go-lucky pair in strong contrast to the wife of their uncle. The development of their lives is told simply, but with clarity, and all stand out vividly from the page, clean-cut and authentic character drawing showing a deep insight into psychology. Sexy in spots, but not raw; gloomy, but not depressing. Best of all, Miss Whitcomb does not find it necessary to resort to profanity to strengthen her dialog. It should go places, but probably not to Hollywood.

Casual

Though tabbed a novel on the jacket, Frances Frost's 'Innocent Summer' (Farrar & Rinehart; $2.50) is rather a series of character sketches of children in a small town. The incidents all trend in general direction, many are delightfully drawn, but it does not add up into a novel, since it works to no definite end. It will be read with interest because of its charm rather than because of its narrative value.

The characters are too immature to interest the picture makers, and the development is not sufficiently marked to form a picture plot.

Hollywood's White Mayfair Made Bankrolls Pale; Expensive But Successful Sartorial Parade

Beverly Hills, Jan. 28.

The white Mayfair, Saturday night (25), was a novel—and expensive—success. Conservatively estimated that the 180 women present in a total crowd of 350 must have spent at least $50,000 on gowns alone. To say nothing of accessories costing $18,000; $200,000 wouldn't have bought their wraps!

The lads went out for Inverness capes to match their top hats, white tie and tails.

For days the stores catering to film luminaries were sold out of white gowns. One shop had two buyers in New York shipping 'em out by airmail to special order. Another reported only four white gowns in stock two weeks before the party. One local shop bleached a cafe au lait dress to white, and worn with a floor-length cape it was made to do. This was one time the girls just didn't care.

Tournament of Flowers

flowers for decorations ran over $1,000. What the gals spent for flowers worn in every conceivable fashion may never be known, but it must have slipped the bank roll plenty. Woven ropes of velvety gardenias, leis of fragrant camellias, corsages of white and lavender orchids were seen on every hand. White violets bunched at the belt and worn as shoulder straps, flower wreaths in milady's hair... plenty went for these.

Many of the gowns were specially designed. Some of the stars had theirs made by their studio designers. Travis Banton (who did Carole Lombard's), Omar Kiam and others were pressed into service. Jewels were dug out of the vaults for the occasion. One gal sent to New York for hers. Miss Del Rio wore her rubies. Miss Lombard and Jeannette MacDonald wore star sapphires big as hen's eggs. It was case of real stones or no jewels at all!

Background for all this was the Victor Hugo, chosen probably because of its resemblance to the Crystal Room in the Hotel Ritz-Carlton, where the gals like to come down the stairs. Room was massed with white sweet peas and stock. White peas floated in the fountain, white stock lined the banks of the falls, branched out from tall frosty crystal stems on the tables. Silvery branches outlined the bandstands, from which Cab Calloway's hot rhythms and Eduardo Durante's rhumbas throbbed. Entrance fee was $10 per, and a total of around $3,500 was taken in, but practically every cent of it was spent for food, decorations and music. The two dance floors were crowded to capacity, and the crowd milled about in the foyer and bars, giving the femmes a chance to show off their scenery.

In of White Maline

Carole Lombard, whose idea it was to have this novel white affair and who was official hostess, floated by in a mist of white maline, decorated with two huge bunches of artificial white flowers, one at the belt, the other over the shoulder. Pauline Gallagher wore a Grecian gown of white crepe with a very long panel of unstitched pleats from shoulder to hem.

Loretta Young was gowned in white taffeta, very full skirt with six rows of cords around the hemline. Mrs. Lou Brock's gown of white crepe was worn with a cape of the same material and trimmed in mink. Janet Gaynor wore a severe white crepe gown trimmed in gold kid, with gold belt.

Marion Davies wore a simple dress of white starched chiffon embroidered with white flowers. Evelyn Venable's dress of bone-white taffeta was gathered in a bustle at the back. Mrs. Pat O'Brien (Eloise Taylor) wore a beaded white chiffon, iridescent with rhinestones, but in simple lines with gathered bodice, against the center of which she wore white orchids. Irene Hervey wore a white crepe gown of Grecian influence. Carmel Myers peeped out from beneath hooded cape, trimmed in mink, as she entered the place. Alice Faye entered in a wrap of white ermine.

Norma Shearer, in red crepe with new front fullness; Mrs. Joe E. Brown, Sally Eilers, in blue chiffon with mantle sleeves, and Jeannette MacDonald in pale orchid satin and crepe with skirt split to the knee, over which she wore a brown floor-length coat, contributed the only touch of color to the white Mayfair. Lina Basquette wore a dress of white pleated chiffon cut in simple lines.

Gold Dots on Field of White

Merle Oberon's dress of white was studded with gold dots. And Virginia Bruce rustled by in white brocade cut very full with an overskirt meeting in the front. Mildred Lloyd wore white starched chiffon with cut-out figures and shoulder cape of white gardenias. Dolores Costello Barrymore was sheathed in white satin cut in 1865 fashion with lace over the shoulders and wore a white wig in which she had tucked two white gardenias. Mrs. Harry Lachman's dress of white taffeta was draped with blue velvet ribbon catching the full skirt. Mrs. Bill Gargan wore a white crepe gown of Grecian lines, studded with turquoise and with nails tinted to match th e trimming.

Dolores Del Rio wore a white crepe of Spanish design with white fringe falling diagonally across the dress from shoulder to hem. One shoulder was bare. Barbara Stanwyck was resplendent in a wrap of white ermine with shoulder cape effect of silver foxes. Mrs. John Considine wore white peau d'ange lace around the hem of which was a band of red. Sandra Corday wore pleated white chiffon. Pat Paterson (Mrs. Charles Boyer) was sheathed in white satin beheath an ermine wrap, June Collyer wore white crepe with long flowing scarfs of white chi Mrs. Donald Woods wore white lace cut in simple lines. Anita Louise wore white velvet with slight train, and Lili Damita wore white satin beneath an ermine wrap. Bette Davis wore a slim fitting skirt of white crepe and blouse jacket of white velvet.

Big Night for ressers

The photographers had little trouble in securing pictures in the midst of all this fluffiness and there were plenty of shots taken by George Watson and Paul Scrite of Acme; Herb Dallinger of Wide World; Jack Albin of INS; 'Scotty' of Dell Publications; Hymie Fink for MacFadden; Charlie Rhoades of Fawcett group; Bill Phillips, Daily Variety; Allen Berg and Bob Wallace, freelancing.

With the success of this one, there is little doubt that the next Mayfair, which will probably be held around close of the racing season, will be a novelty affair and will perhaps carry out theme of the turf.

Among the Women

By The Skirt

BEST DRESSED WOMAN OF THE WEEK
GRACIE ALLEN
(State)

When a theatre can be filled to over capacity at 11:30 in the morning, there must be some attraction, and at the State there is a super-attraction, Burns and Allen. Away from Broadway for too long, this team is back and doing an act that's by far their best.

Gracie has never looked so lovely. She wears a black silk dress dotted in gold made with full skirt. She changes to a navy blue net with a sprinkling of sequins of the same color. A sequin jacket is also of blue.

Georgie, Gracie and Ben Blue do a minuet that is a knockout. For this dons a full crinoline skirt over her black and gold frock. The young miss with Cardini is a cadet in blue and grey. The girl of Vernon and Stone does her adagio work in a leopard skin.

Well Dressed Thief

Myrna Loy is at the Capitol in 'Whipsaw.' Miss Loy joins up with a gang of jewel thieves and throughout the picture is seen in a varied outfit of tailored suits, cloth dresses and a few negligees.

One coat has a band of krimmer up both sides, with collar matching. A small hat has a brim. A cloth dress has many metal buttons up the back and down the sleeves. A sport coat is of checks. One dark dress has the new full front with the bodice in surplus.

A dark suit is worn with a light blouse caught at the throat with a circle of pearls. One of the negligees has the full sleeves shirred at the top. It is of a heavy satin. Another satin robe is smartly tailored. One black velvet suit has an upright collar of lace. The hat is tricorned in shape and a bunch of orchids grace one shoulder.

ive Reasons

It looks like happy days are here again at the Paramount. Saturday in two hours there were at least three turnovers. There are five reasons.

The picture, 'Collegiate,' with Joe Penner and Jack Oakie and Hal Kemp's orchestra, and the Yacht Club Boys on the stage. Picture is all Oakie. He has everything his own way.

The girls of the school in the film are in dark skirts with middie blouses of white with blue collars. Oakie, taking over the school, transforms the girls from ordinary looking mortals to beauts in shorts and bare legs. For graduation exercises the girls wear satin shorts, cloaks and mortar board hats.

Betty Grable is lovely with her blonde hair tied with a narrow ribbon. Jane Cooper does some intricate stepping in chiffon pants and velvet bodice. With Hal Kemp's orchestra is a young brunet named Maxine Gray. She wears a white satin ensemble, a long skirt and tuxedo jacket and bluet ascot tie.

Irene Franklin has a bit in this picture, the head of a beauty shop. Her hair is now almost platinum. A standing collar of white is the feature of her black dress.

Roxy Goes Strip

At the Roxy Ed Sullivan is once again putting the Gae Foster girls through their paces. The girls in the first number are in short red satin skirts and brassiercs. Collars are white as also are the high top hats. Diamond buttons adorn the brassieres.

Ruth West is out in front in a white satin skirt and black chiffon riding coat. Accessories are white. Six girls parade in the almost nude, a surprising set of costumes for this house. For the most part the coloring is in red and white. One girl in particular is lovely in her long chiffon train. The girls are in long crimson satin trousers with tiny bodices, pink hats and gauntlet gloves, for more of Ed's clowning. The limbs of the Foster girls are encased in long sheer blacks tights and lace one-piece suits with paneled back and white hats and gloves, the best set of costumes seen at this house in a long time. A number done with hugs brown balls has the girls in short green frocks made with rippling skirts. Hats of white have brown crowns. Frazee Sisters were in backless dresses of chartreuse satin. There are two Columbia pictures, one a short and one a full length, latter, 'The Calling of Dan Matthews.' A question which caused the most laughter. A new face is that of a young woman called Charlotte Winters.

Miss Winters shows a varied outfit. Sables and fox furs are worn with tailored suits and one evening gown with a V shaped bodice held in place with two clips. There are a couple of light cloth dresses. The hats are all small of the off-the-face variety. On the golf links this miss isn't so smart in short skirt, sweater and beret.

Del io's Duds

A Warner picture, 'The Widow from Monte Carlo,' has found its way into the Astor theatre. It's a picture with names, at least, Colin Clive, Warren Williams, Herbert Mundin, Dolores Del Rio and Louise Fazenda.

It jumps all over the place, from Monte Carlo to Cannes and then to London, and even Margate. But what is important is Miss Del Rio's clothes, and she is showing a wardrobe worthy of Hollywood.

At a gaming table Miss Del Rio is in black, with white collar and a half veil. A bathing suit, backless, sports a white collar also. A black cerl evening gown with V neck has a wide scarf over one shoulder. Two diamond clips attached to one side of the neck stand out in bold relief. A dress worth copying is a black taffeta skirt with hugh velvet dots applqued on the material. A short tiny bodice is of velvet with a wide belt and large buckle. One other black evening gown of some sumptuous material has the one bare shoulder effect, and very daring is a white lame gown with both shoulders bare. A matching cloak of the lame brings to a close a parade of real clothes.

Television

deemed in any wise competitive to picture biz.

Showmen's attitude on television for some time has been that it will be a novelty at first, with patrons attracted to it as such, and not expecting perfection. Television's province may be chiefly in the home, if for no other reason than that too many obstacles stand in the way of projecting large screen-size pictures into a theatre auditorium. Small sized televistic image makes it best adaptable for use in home sets. The question is how much and in what numbers it can keep them at home and away from the theatres. Radio has dented other and older forms of amusement, but pictures have not been greatly affected.

Any talk that television will dent talking pictures, as the latter shoved the legitimate drama into the background on the road is an erroneous calculation, in the opinion of Hay sians. Economics is the main reason talking films grew into big popularity, because of the small admission fees. Until television can be placed on a half-way comparable operating basis, showmen don't envision television usurping the boxoffice allure, whether fl stage.

Wash. Opera

Albion again appeared on the stage. 'We'll put the opera on with a piano,' she declared. A hurried search of Constitution Hall, local concert center, disclosed no piano was in the building. A music teacher in a box recalled that there was an organ 'somewhere around.' It was finally found, another music teacher volunteered to play the score to the opera, 'Lakme,' and finally, at 10:30 p. m., it got under way. It was conducted by a local chap who had rehearsed the chorus.

Despite no orchestra, no lighting, no scenery and only half the supers in costume, about 400 loyal music lovers stuck it out to the bitter end —which came about 1:30 a. m.

Albion, himself, did not take part in the excitement. Several newspapers reported him 'prostrated backstage,' but impresario insisted later that he was in costume as a Brahmin priest for his role in the opera and couldn't very well appear on the stage before it began. Cast was mostly local with leads, Armand Tokatyan and Bidu Sayo, imported from New York.

Why Union Was Tough

Hayden, local union head, explained later that contract had specifically called for cash and that the fact had been pointed out to Albions on afternoon of performance. He also added that Albions still owed Musicians' local about $4,000, and Stagehands' local $3,000 from similar ventures four years ago. He said he had agreed to supply musicians this time if they were paid cash for the job at hand and $150 on the old debt. Stagehands were to get $100 on their original debt.

Check which was refused was signed by Giuseppi Donze, Metropolitan Opera baritone, and endorsed by several local society leaders.

Second opera in series of two scheduled by the National Opera Association, Albion's producing title, went off per schedule Saturday afternoon (25) with piano accompaniment. Show, 'Hansel and Gretel,' was taken over and presented by National Music League of New York and played to audience of 1,200, mostly children. Even failure of portable switchboard, brought along by league, failed to stop performance. Somebody produced a flashlight and held it for the lone pianist.

THE EAGLE'S BROOD

Bretherton has fused proceedings to grip western fans.

Tedious opening sequences hurt the action that follows. Director goes out of his way to plant the idea that the grandson of a Mexican bandit is sought by band of outlaws. Mex outlaw has price on his head, but that does not prevent Hopalong Cassidy from showing his gratitude (when outlaw saves his life) and promising to return his grandson safely.

This forces Cassidy from office of sheriff and on the trail of gang that is after the youngster. Usual gun play in the town tavern, ambuscades, rescues, etc. Cassidy is aided by his cowboy friend, Johnny Nelson, though this contribution to story development is secondary.

Big lift to film given by William Boyd in this instance through his performance. Jimmy Ellison, as Johnny, seems a bit more acclimated to the western scene though he still looks too polished for cowhand character. Vivid portrayal contributed by Addison Richards, leader of the bandit band.

Joan Woodbury does a neat job as the dancing senorita who befriends the Mexican lad. Supposed to be her initial picture and indicates possibilities. Originally billed for production as Nana Martinez. George Hayes does well with a cigaret rolling bartender. William Farnum returns to do well by his interpretation of El Toro, the Mexican bandit.

Whole production is superbly mounted, plus scenic values. Archie Stout's cameraing very good.

DAYS OF FREEDOM

(GERMAN MADE)
(In German)

Berlin, Jan. 19.

Chancellor Hitler's presence at its Berlin premiere lent a special significance to this 30-minute film document of the German Army at the Nuremberg Party Congress last September. Full title is 'The Day of Freedom—Our Armed Forces—Nuremberg, 1935.'

Technically, this important propaganda film document is in the best German tradition of film making. Miss Leni Riefenstahl, who directed it, had seven first-class cameramen at her disposal. In 1933 and 1934 Miss Riefenstahl produced full-length films of the Party Congress at Nuremberg.

While the film is mainly designed to show all patriotic Germans what Hitler has done for them by restoring Germany's military freedom, it is specially recommended to the 'Hitler Youth,' who are urged to carry on the 'glorious Prussian tradition.' Chancellor Hitler's speech to the soldiers ('bearers of a great tradition'), in which he links up the new German Army with the old Prussian Army, is made the centre of the film.

Main impression gained from the production is not goose-stepping, which plays its part in the parade scenes, but the superlative mechanical arms created so swiftly by the newly created German Army. Tremendous speed and the possibility of swift attack make a profound impression. A battle between fighting planes and ground air defense guns evoked great applause here.

A shimmer of romanticism hardly in keeping with the grimness of modern warfare is given to the film by Miss Riefenstahl's beautiful shots of cavalry and swooping aeroplanes.

AZ UJ FOLDESUR

('The New Squire')
(HUNGARIAN MADE)

Budapest, Jan. 12.

Hirsch and Tauk production and release. Scenario adapted from Maurice Jokai's novel by Alexander Hunyady; directed by Bea Gaal; music, Tibor Polgar and Georgy Ranky; photography, Istvan Eiben; features Kalman Rozsahegyi, Theodore Uray, Julius Csortos, Paul Javor, Zita Gordon, Mary Egry, Gero Maly, Maria Lazar, and Zoltan Maklary. Running time, 106 mins. At Kamara, Decsi and Atrium Theatres, Budapest.

(In Hungarian)

For the first time in the history of Hungarian sound pictures, here is a real, thoroughgoing bit all the more remarkable because it represents a high standard of good taste and literary merit.

Miracle was achieved by realizing that Hungary has a treasure-trove of picture subjects in the works of her greatest novelist, Maurice Jokai. This was so obvious as to be overlooked. Save for one or two poorly turned-out silents, the works of Jokai, who wrote 100 volumes of colorful, human romance has remained unexploited so far.

Although Jokai often turned to national history for his subjects, he handled them so vividly, that translations of his works were widely read in his time. Newest proof of his international appeal is this 'New Squire.' In spite of distinctive local color and patriotic historical angle, negotiations to make German and Italian versions are afoot.

tory concerns the two daughters of a retired Austrian army officer who fought against the Hungarians during their struggle for liberty, but settles in the country afterwards and succumbs to the lure of the soil, which turns him into a true patriot of his adopted country. One of the daughters encounters tragedy and death as the victim of a fascinating spy, while the other finds happiness in her love for a gallant ex-enemy whom she rescues from prison, thereby reconciling the two hostile families. Period is the 1850's.

Theodore Uray, in the part of the attractive spy, is a great asset. He photographs well, speaks well, and acts with distinction. Paul Javor, who has done highly commendable work in previous pictures, is again good in the part of the other lover. Maria Egry, this year's local stage discovery, also promises very well. Maria Lazar looks superb. Rozsahegyi in the part of an estate agent, Somlay in that of the ex-officer and Csortos as his enemy are okay.

'New Squire' cost about $40,000, some 20% more than is usually spent on locally-made Hungarian films and shows it.

Train Conductor	Broun Barnaby

This remake of a German film would hardly take the prize for originality—the story of an enamored youth posing as a waiter in order to meet and woo the girl of his dreams—and she an opera singer, too! Originally a play, it did not cut much ice when produced locally, although on the continent it did well.

Conrad Nagel, though charming, at times doesn't seem quite at ease in the role of the young diplomat, Geneva-bound, who steps off at Cannes in pursuit of an unknown face and voice. His charmer returns his affection, even though at one time it looks as though he might be a much sought-after jewel thief. Marta Labarr, in this role, is effective, although the beauty of her voice seems to lose in recording Lu Anne Meredith and Fred Conyngham are admirable singing, dancing and light comedy support. Whole just barely gets by.

Dem.'s Theme Song

Lindsay McPhail's political theme song will be introduced by the Nat Harris orchestra from the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, at the President's Ball tomorrow night (30). Michael Sherry will do the vocal.

Show Biz Vexed As South Plans More Nite B. B.

Irmingham, Jan.

Looks like show biz will have a real competitor in night baseball in the Southern League this year. Every town in the eight-team league, except two, will be lighted for night games. Theatre operators are worried.

Birmingham team will illuminate Rickwood Field, and New Orleans' Heinnemann Park will also be set aglow. This leaves only Memphis and Knoxville without lights. Both of the towns would like to have them, but for two reasons neither is likely to install lights. Knoxville lacks the money, Bob Allen, owner of the team, says, and Memphis has been unable to put floods in because the park is near a hospital. Night games, it is contended, would interfere with the sleep of patients.

Atlanta, Little Rock, Chattanooga, and Nashville are the other cities using floods. All of them had them last year and Little Rock used them the greater part of the summer. That's another point. In the north night baseball is not as big a competitor of show business because summer is longer arriving and the teams can play at nights only a certain number of times. Down here, though, the summers are long and more games are played after dark.

Both Birmingham and New Orleans vowed they would not install candlepower. Both teams are owned by old heads in the baseball business who originally contended that night baseball was just a fad and would fade.

FRANCO-GERMAN BOUT NO BATTLE OF MARNE

By JACK PULASKI

'Hey, don't you guys ever get hungry? Asked a hot dog seller at Madison Square Garden Friday (24), when another fight card was very slimly attended. 'A couple of mickey finns!' yelled a galleryite, just a little bouquet for the main eventers.

Such remarks tended to keep the few customers awake until the last bout, which was on the verge of a drag 'em out encounter. Some muggs upstairs started a sing, and that got a hand during the 10-round event between Andre Lenglet of France and Hans Birkie; Latter is from Germany, but was introduced as coming from the Coast.

Lenglet promised to do things to Hans, cracking him with well-intentioned rights, but nothing happened, not even a scarlet schnozz. Fact is that Birkie, always a second rater or worse, is one tough guy. He has met plenty of pugs, and, although he's been outpointed, always finishes vertical. As for the Frenchman, it is a question if he means anything in the heavyweight division. The fans didn't care, as indicated by the fact they wouldn't attend. Also, they must be offered something better to kick in five bucks top.

Finale Fireworks

The South American, George Brescia, and Frankie Connelly of Boston provided the finale fireworks. Right socks cut Connelly's left ear and eye early in the going, and the gore was plenteous. Frankie tried to break George in half with body blows, and about round three Brescia sunk to his stool as though all in. That was blamed on low blows, and Connelly was penalized two rounds for that nice work. The other guy won them, anyhow, and copped the match with something to spare. Brescia is one of the best of the new heavyweight crop.

Recently the Garden broke the record for poor attendance. This time it was busted again. There were 2,338 in the house, with the gross $5,342.

It's No Racket, Say Due Bill Boys; Why They're Public Benefactors

Anent the due bill business, brokers of same tell their side of the story. Following is an account of opinions expressed by the unofficial president of an unofficial organization of men banded together in common defense.

Traffickers in due bills no longer regard themselves as a group hanging on the edge of legitimate business and picking up discarded crumbs. They like to think of themselves as 'underwriters' and general benefactors of the public at large. What was once a fly-by-night enterprise now boasts about 20 recognized offices in New York city alone. Perhaps that many more maintain offices in their hats.

Methods of operating are all in favor of the proprietors and issuers of due bills, says headquarters. Biz is operated on a strictly confidential basis without solicitation or advertising. No cash patrons are ever lured away with cut rate inducements to further a sale at expense of an establishment. If making overtures to a broker a 'regular' is discouraged because of retroactive effect of stealing. By protecting issuer, the broker protects himself. If catering to a preponderance of bills any biz is sure to go down the chute. But, as an advertising medium, bills are still looked upon as stimulants.

The Buildup

Mouth-to-mouth buildup is the only means of furthering grosses, according to due billers. No business is openly sought out. Recommendations are the only impetus rendered. Even in cases of reference by a friend, no random sale is consummated. Every precaution is taken to avoid getting the wrong people.

Categorized as profiteers, brokers claim this is unjust as they actually realize only about 10% gross profit on any sale. Out of this they must maintain an office, keep themselves, pay traveling expenses and general operating nut.

Idea was generated around an advertising principle. This is slowly being forgotten in favor of the underwriting. By this is meant the carrying of night clubs, restaurants and in some instances hotels over rough spots, enabling them to continue operating. Due billers band when necessary in advancing cash sums with which clubs, etc., are redecorated, refurnished, brought out of red or clutched from sheriff's paws. Even hotels have been advanced coin for improvements.

In payment brokers get double the cash outlay in due bills. Profit in hotels, restaurants, etc., represent about 50% of intake. Result is that issuers loose nothing by practice and have use of ready cash without interest payment, the due-billers aver. Further advantage is seen in bills being utilized over a long period of time and not lumped up on issuer. In turn, bills are released at about 10% profit by arranger. Little of the old advertising agency contact remains in distributing sheets. Papers have many names, such as Trade Contract, Due Bill, Certificate of Exchange, Exchange Contract, Trade Order, but all boil down to due bill.

They're Crying

Boys are crying that, even with the 10% clip they garner, they are often out in the cold. After advancing dough they are left holding the bag by places going out of business with a lot of paper outstanding. If a customer of broker is caught in a shutdown, he redeems his paper for cash with his dealer, if same is reliable. Broker has no redress for foldup, unless owner feels personally obligated.

Reason quoted for profusion of bills is that, regardless of type of business, little stands to be lost by practice. Hotels are taxed for empty rooms, restaurants must have food wastes, night clubs have overhead. Hotels can service the same rooms for practically nothing daily, profits in others are so that presence of a few 'cost' customers add to appearance. Psychology of few wanting to sit in an empty nitery or restaurant is considered. What is not made on due bills is compensated for in presence of crowd retainers.

Virtually all businesses familiar with due bills are anxious to use them when the butcher, baker and candlestick maker puts in squawks for outstanding tabs. Only reason swankier type places are reluctant to use this service is that due billers cannot guarantee the type of patronage. If once this could be made reasonably certain, the boys feel they would have little difficulty in establishing themselves with the ultra spots.

As benefactors the due-bill boys regard themselves in a sacred light. They point out availability of poorer classes and younger set to places that would ordinarily be prohibitive to them without due bills. Sea trips, niteries, swank restaurants, hotels, etc., are all brought within reach of the 'general public' through this medium. School kids with little to spend are frequent callers. Stenos, et al., are all given an opportunity for 'that fling' through due-bill agents.

Citing a specific case of granting a new lease on life for a resort hotel, the boys showed where they enabled inn to life a $20,000 note from a bank and continue in business. During depresh a certain bank was hard hit and offered a note around for $5,000. Hotel approached group of billers for cash, and boys acquiesced. Hotel then presented $10,000 worth of credit in return. By this method hotel avoided an interest payment of $1,200 and actually paid only the original $5,000, in addition to saving the house. So the due-bill boys claim.

A. K. FLA. TOWN SEEKS ENT'MENT

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 28.

Chamber of Commerce here is angling for an outdoor attraction in local ball park. Only form of entertainment at present is a film house and coming 'Three Men on a Horse' road company some time this month.

Board is contacting New York promoters for ideas and estimates.

This town is strictly an a. k. sort, frequently more by elderly people than the younger, fun-seeking crowd that hits east coast resorts. St. Petersburg hasn't even one night club. Legit house, established last year, is now a picture theatre, but this is where 'Horse' will play.

Chamber of Commerce doesn't exactly know what it wants, but it must be an outdoor attraction to be given at night. N. Y. Yankees will train there in the daytime later in the winter, but the ball players must adhere to a curfew. Usually have to be in bed by 10 p. m.

1,000 AT CHEESE CLUB'S DINNER TO HERSHFIELD

Cheese Club's dinner to its prexy, Harry Hershfield, at the Astor hotel, New York, Sunday night (26) brought out the greatest galaxy of civic and commercial celebrities at a banquet in recent years. About 1,000 attended at $7.50 per.

Among those on the dais were N. Y. Supreme Court Justices Ferdinand Pecora and Aaron J. Levy; David T. Wilentz, attorney-general of New Jersey; Grover Whalen, David Sarnoff, J. V. Connolly, head of King Features Syndicate; Edward G. Robinson, Alfred J. McCosker, president of WOR; Donald Flamm, prexy of WMCA; Phil Baker, Bobby Clark, Gene Buck, Louis Nizer, Joe Laurie, Jr., Morris Gest and George Gershwin. Buck acted as toastmaster.

James J. Walker, though not on the dais, was one of the speakers and presented Hershfield with a watch from the Cheese Club. A silver loving cup was also given Hershfield as a gift from 400 boys in a Hebrew orphanage.

Due to the number of speakers, the stage show part of the program was curtailed so that the affair could wind up at 1 a.m. Irving Caesar, Laurie and J. C. Flippen m.c.'d the abbreviated show, most of the acts coming over from the Actors Fund benefit at the 44th St. theatre.

OBITUARIES

HARRY T. MOREY

Henry Temple Morey, 63, No. 1 villain in the early days of the Vitagraph company, died in Brooklyn Jan. 25 of an abcessed lung. He is survived by his widow, his mother and two brothers.

Morey quit the University of Michigan in his sophomore year to join the Robert Downing company, but made his early career in light opera, opening with Francis Wilson in 'The Oolah' and remaining for several other productions before joining the Montgomery and Stone production of 'The Wizard of Oz.' He did comedy bits with Weber and Fields, played in musical comedy with Marie Cahill, Raymond Hitchcock and Anna Held. His last stage performance was with Louise Gunning in 'Marcelle.'

He was a member of the old Vitagraph stock company in its early days, playing heavies to the leads of Maurice Costello and Leo Delaney. John Bunny, Flora Finch and others were with the troupe. When Vitagraph went into eclipse he went to Hollywood where he worked for Selznick, Robertson-Cole, Metro, Goldwyn, Associated Producers and other important companies. He has been infrequently in recent years, mostly in shorts and commercials made in the vicinity of New York.

NATHAN VIDAVER

Less than a week after he returned from a recuperative trip to California, Nathan Vidaver, veteran theatrical attorney, experienced a heart attack last Sunday (19) which proved fatal three days later. He died Jan. 22 at his home in Pelham, N. Y., at the age of 64. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Nellie Ruth Vidaver; a daughter, Mrs. Robert C. Buttolphe; a brother and five sisters.

Born in Boston, he was educated at the University of California, practicing for a time in San Francisco and Scranton, before coming to New York. In the first decade of this century he was prominent in N. Y. politics but almost exclusively thereafter he engaged in private law practice, principally theatrical.

Among his show biz clients were numbered David Belasco, Marie Dressler, William A. Brady, the Shuberts, Oscar Hammerstein, Arthur Hopkins, Marcus Loew, David Warfield, Oliver Morosco, Clara Kimball Young, Theda Bara, Paragon Pictures, Lewis J. Selznick, World Film Corp., et al.

Vidaver made a name for himself in theatrical legal practice for his vision in drawing agreements and contracts, many of his covenants and provisions, as originated by him, becoming common legal custom in show biz agreements.

Burley Comics

comedians themselves that they are tolerated rather than enjoyed by modern audiences. Show is the strip, by the principal women and the chorus girls, and the burley producers of today concentrate on this. New producers know nothing about staging a 'book' or comedy scene, and the older producers don't bother with that phase of the entertainment any longer. The comic and his straight man are left strictly on their own, with neither material nor the means for obtaining it. Nothing is done to help the comedian, and the comedians claim that under the circumstances they're unable to help themselves.

Decline of burlesque as an important form of amusement runs parallel with the deterioration of its comedy. When the managers went peel crazy in an effort to outstrip each other, through the featured women in their shows, they turned their backs on comedy development entirely. In the past four years burlesque has recorded not a single move by any manager to give importance to comedy presentation.

For some time burlesque has been a complete washout as a producer of new talent for other branches of show business, and the present day comedians maintain that, unless burlesque restores its lost comedy value, it will remain sterile. Strippers are useless for any other work, except perhaps nite clubs, and in burlesque today a woman hasn't a chance if she doesn't strip. That narrows the field of possibilities down to the men of burlesque, aver the comics, but the men can't get anywhere either under prevailing conditions.

Burlesque has lately been the ruination of much promising comedy timber, the comedians declare. Several young comics with brilliant prospects have entered burlesque to gain 'experience,' ut instead of getting it, they've lost most of their ability. Average youngster entering burlesque is ambitious and that attitude is enough to make him stand out at the beginning. In a short while he learns all the established bits and from then on he finds there is nothing left to learn. As time goes on he sees his chances of graduating from burlesque lessening, and in a couple of seasons his work is no different from that of veterans of 10 and more years in the business.

Ad libbing, an art which once distinguished comedians of burlesque, and those who were schooled in that field, is practically extinct nowadays. Boys haven't the time on stage to practice extemporaneous quips. If ad libbing at all, with the present day strip-minded audiences, they've got to be dirty or else, and the dirt stuff disqualifies the comedians from consideration by pictures, radio, etc.

One of burlesque's proudest possessions is the knowledge that it produced such comedians who went places as Sam Bernard, Jack Pearl, Bert Lahr, James Barton, Joe Penner, Bobby Clark and many others. Today's comedians, held down by ruinous restrictions, would like to go places, too.

Strawberry Point, which is noted for its large tomatoes, its basketball team and the biggest Epworth League glee club in the state.

'Myrt and Marge' used the civic salute gag for Wrigley's and Benton & Bowles made an imaginary tour of ocean, river and lake ports with its Maxwell Showboat. Today the best known user of the stunt is Major Bowes. Atlantic Refining and Gulf ll other sponsors who 'visit' various cities.

So effective has a little flattery proven in getting attention and favors and even cracking open the radio-hostile columns of local newspapers that numerous regional programs also are using a shovel. Smaller towns and villages respond to a county-to-county hookup like the bigger burgs respond to coast-to-coast temptations.

Pure Oil Bows

Latest to try this stunt is the Pure Oil company which is making a test of this plan on WSM, Nashville. Besides its regular 'Jimmy Mattern' script, Pure Oil is testing the 'salute' on the Nashville stations with a bow each week to some leading southern city. If a click there, will move to Chicago for a bow to midwest towns, and then east and west, each time on a 50 kilowatter.

This 'salute' program idea has brought into the radio picture a flock of one-time-shot' advertisers, among whom a leading example is Numismatic. This firm has a standing order with some 80 stations over the country to take the 15 minutes immediately following a 'salute' program on that station in the town that's being saluted. Figure that this municipal plug program will have everybody in that town listening and the follow-up shows can, in this way, snatch off the gravy of this concentrated listening audience.

THE PURITAN

successful set-up, showman being unfettered with the usual managerial annoyances.

First of the two acts starts with a homicide. Francis Ferriter, a young journalist, slinks upstairs in a Dublin rooming house and stabs a woman in the back. He is a rabid reformer, believing it is his divine right to help stamp out vice. The murdered woman was a prostitute.

There is an investigation along the polite lines of the police over there and, although the inspector finds a blood-stained 'kercheif in Ferriter's room, the man is permitted to remain at large until midnight, on his promise to turn in the killer. Scenes include the inspector's office and there the most lively dialog of the play is spotted, some of it highly witty.

Second act, however, does a flip-flap and ends with the ravings of the puritanical assassin who plunges the dagger into his own heart. That he was in love with the prostie is indicated and he consorts with another woman of the streets, also. She starts to disrobe but recoils and flees when he confesses the murder.

Scenically the play is generously outfitted, and the changes are swift. One is within the home of kinfolks and there is a certain amount of naturalness there. Ferriter fails to respond to the kindly conversation of the others and stumbles forth on his mad ways. Another scene within a church has the revolving stage visible. Some of the lighting is too impressionistic, while the raving of the man in the confessional may draw some criticism.

Denis O'Dea was brought over from Dublin's Abbey players for the lead, a Hamlet-like part with many sides. O'Dea has his moments, but his assignment is so wordy that the final curtain seems welcome.

Gavin Muir as the mannerly inspector, Jack Hartley as the slain woman's lover and Gertrude Flynn as a scarlet woman are among the leading people in support, while Beatrice Hendricks makes a small part stand out.

Erskin will probably have better luck next time. He deserves it.

TONIGHT AT 8:30

admirably acted by Coward as the husband and Alison Leggatt as the wife. Gertrude Lawrence, while quite good, seems to lack sufficient sincerity as the home-breaker.

'Red Peppers' is the familiar plot of skits seen in the States on the subject of a cheap variety team doing a singing, dancing and crossfire act in one, then going into full stage dressing-room interior, where they squabble over their work, etc. In this capably written mass of low comedy, Coward does a red-nosed comic seriously, perpetrating gags that he tells his wife were good enough for his parents. In this, Miss Lawrence plays the other half of the team and does her best work, being essentially a revue comedienne.

From a box office standpoint the second trio of playlets, produced Jan. 13, is far superior to the initial ones. They have more general appeal. Opener is 'Hands Across the Sea,' a light comedy. Scene is the drawing room of a Commander of the Royal Navy (Coward), and his wife, Lady Maureen (Miss Lawrence). She has just returned from a tour of the world and, in several places, was entertained by local personages whom she had invited to look her up when they came to London.

Enter Mr. and Mrs. Wadhurst from Malaya. Lady Maureen cannot remember their names or just where she met them, and there ensus a series of amusing complications. Smart cocktail set is typified by everybody referring to everybody else as 'darling.'

Coward and Miss Lawrence jump from these snobbish characterizations to cockney types in 'Fumed Oak.' They are man and wife residing in South London, with a 18-year-old daughter and the wife's mother. First scene opens at breakfast, where the child is getting ready for school. Grandma sits there nagging assiduously, while smarls and Daddy has his breakfast thrown at him without saying a word. He is a floor-walker in a shop and they have been married 15 years.

Curtain lowered to denote passing of time until evening of the same day, when he returns after a couple of drinks. It develops he had been earning more money than he had told his family, and secretly saved up something like $2,500. He is about to make a drastic change in their lives. As he enters, the three females had already had their evening meal, and are getting ready to go to the pictures. On the table is a plate of cold ham for father.

Old boy opens up and wife wants the child to leave the room so she won't hear him. Father insists they all stay. He starts in by calling mother-in-law 'an old bitch' and knows that she has hoarded up her money without having contributed a fair share for her keep; tells the wife she is cold and unfeeling, had snared him into marriage by saying she was about to have a child; tells the daughter she's an ugly brat, in whom he has not the slightest interest. Informs them of his savings, leaves $250 on the table to give them a start and says that if they use a little sense they can get along very well without him, and that he proposes to embark upon a life of adventure. He has already booked his ticket and is off.

Splendid character drawings, and stamps Coward as an even more versatile actor than heretofore given credit for.

Third is 'Shadow Play,' containing three musical numbers. Opens with a society couple who have been married 10 years, and are on the verge of splitting up. He is interested in another woman and another man is endeavoring to thrust himself upon the wife. She takes an overdose of sleeping tablets just before hubby enters and asks her to divorce him.

Then there is a fantasy depicting her delirium, which takes the audience back to their honeymoon. This is shown through the medium of black curtains and cleverly arranged lighting effects. Back to the honeymoon in Venice, and so on, finally returning to the original scene, where they are administering black coffee and bringing the wife back to normality. Her ravings during the delirium decide the husband to try once more to resume life with her.

These two sets of playlets will alternate for 12 weeks, which is the limit set by Coward for any of his stage appearances in the past few years. He closed 'Private Lives' at the same theatre after three months when it was playing to capacity. Coward's personal drawing powers at the present time here are sufficient to attract paying audiences for that length of time with anything he writes and appears in. Orchestra seats were sold out solidly for the first fortnight before it opened. Engagement is certain to prove a highly profitable one.

FRAU POLENSKA

Berlin, Jan.

Farce with an introduction and three acts by Grete Wilhelm; produced at the Komodie, Berlin.

Anna Petrovna Polenska.....Ida Wuest
Natascha, her daughter.....Paula Denk
Grandduke Vladimir Alexandrovitch Narishkin.....Paul Henckels
Paul Narishkin.....Curt Ackermann
Prince of Illyria.....Albert Horrmann
Baron von Brouillard....Rudolf Klein-Rogge

One of those farcical comedies which is written with a healthy regard for effects and situations without bothering to inquire into originality. But what carries the play to unusual success is the drastic character of Anna Petrovna Polenska who, almost single-handed, holds down the boards for over two hours. This is one of those juicy star parts that dangle enticingly before every comedienne's vision.

Ida Wuest, a German Mary Boland, but with a twinkle and a smile, has a chance here to run the gamut from the resolute mistress of a dinky saloon at the Polish-Russian border to supercilious grandduchess in a Riviera hotel. In a torrent of language, abusive and humorous, she sweeps everything before her, aided by the very effective stage prop of a broom. The evening is hers. Though Grete Wilhelm, a new authoress, did nothing more than competently varnish the well-worn farce steps, it is sufficient basis for the jovial capers of Miss Wuest.

Story is set in the Winter of 1918, at the time of the Russian revolution, when a large exodus of Russian fugitives crossed the Polish border, a remunerative business for Mrs. Polenska's border saloon. One evening a man falls dead drunk into her door. It is Ivan Stepanovitch, valet of Grandduke Vladimir Alexandrovitch Narishkin. His master had been shot by the Bolsheviks and, together with a sleigh full of booze, he had stolen his master's identification papers, which Anna Petrovna finds. To her he is the Grandduke, and Ivan thinks it wisest to stay mute and keep under a steady and comforting influence of liquor.

To brighten the future of her daughter, Natascha, with a glittering title, Mrs. Polanska proposes to, and marries, the supposed Grandduke; sells her den of iniquity, where she had made a tidy sum, and goes to live in the splendor of a fashionable Riviera hotel. Here Paul, the only son of the real grandduke, is engaged as a gigolo, and Natascha prefers him to the Prince of Illyria, whom her ambitious mother had selected for her. Paul recognizes his father's former valet, gets his support to marry Natascha, and having now recovered his father's papers, he can at last get at the family fortune, which is deposited at a Paris bank.

There is a pleasant glamor over the performance, for Ida Wuest's resoluteness never lacks humor, and Paul Henckels, as the pseudo-grandduke, makes his weakness for alcohol an amusing vice.

Play will undoubtedly have one of this season's longest runs here.

Meltosagos Asszony

('Her Ladyship')

Budapest, Jan. 3.

Comedy in three acts by Istvan Bekeffy and Adorjan Stella, at the Andrassyut Theatre. Cast: Ida Turay, Martha Lendvay, Ferenc Deliy, Kalman Rozsahegyi, Martin Ratkay.

This is by far the gayest, pleasantest and most amusing comedy here this season. A first-rate production does a great deal towards making it a hit, but it's the author's happy idea which gives the cast their chance.

Ida Turay has the part of a 17-year-old schoolgirl with whom a famous, titled, hard-working surgeon falls in love. He marries her before she has graduated from high school. Girl loves her husband but feels incongruous as a hostess to his dignified establishment; Her Ladyship does not know what to do with herself while the husband is professionally engaged, and feels homesick for the fun, the duties and the pranks of school life which belong to her age. So she secretly goes to school under her maiden name in the mornings and plays Her Ladyship at night.

The double life leads to amusing complications, she gets into trouble with the school authorities and her fibs make her husband suspect worse things; until the pseudo-schoolgirl finds a solution by discovering she is going to have a baby. Now she no longer needs school to keep her busy.

Universal has already bought the play for a Francisca Gaal picture, shortly to be done here in German. Play has a good chance both on stage and screen if the performance is as spirited and the cast as good as here.

Beside Ida Turay in the name part, a young actress, Martha Lendvay, attracts much attention in the part of her school friend. Martin Ratkay is admirable as a kind old professor.

CHI EXPLOITATION EXPO

STATE TO AID RACING AT MANY MICHIGAN FAIR

Detroit, Jan.

Along with likely legalization of bookies, Michigan will probably aid the breeding of race horses this year. Latter was the keynote of speech last week by A. C. Carton, director of State Department of Agriculture, before Michigan Association of Fairs.

Suggestion is complete reversal of previous department policy, which has been to discourage emphasis on horse races at county fairs, etc. Change is due to altered public opinion, Carson declared, and urged State to contribute to horse purses at State and county thus aiding breeding.

Neb. Outdoors

Lincoln, Jan. 28.

Election of officers for the State Association of County Fair Managers at annual meeting here finds the 1935 crew riding intact, R. C. Johnson, Mead, president; Stan Matzker, Seward, vice-president; and Chet G. Marshall, Arlington, sec. and treas. At the same meeting the State Fair board also stood by intact.

Attempt was made to reorganize the State Fair body and make provision for the hiring of a man who would be showman enough to get the fair back into the profit column. The salary of executive officer is now $2,400 a year and goes to the secretary. Hope was to jump this to attract a man with the needed ability, but well oiled political processes made it easy sledding for the old board to rule.

More contracts were sold this year by attractions men than in many a year. Lew Rosenthal landed the largest one, the Belleville, Kans., fair for which he got $2,300.

Maybe a Tenter

Schenectady, Jan. 28.

Doc Schneider, of Schneider's Texas Cowboys, broadcasting daily over WGY and personal-appearancing within a 150-mile radius, is air-announcing that he will have two tent shows the coming season (he operated one last summer while miking via WGY).

A new outfit, seating 1,700 and said to be one of the largest of the kind for this section, is now being built in Chicago.

veal that only 105,000 of these have been carded at Ottawa, this including the WB repertory. Which are WB are not yet determined, but the latter claim that they control 25-40% of the modern music played.

Subsequent complication is the division of the 8c a receiving set tariff between CPRS, as representing ASCAP, and WB, which want their share. The Canadian Association of Broadcasters takes the stand that the appointment of the appeal tribunal is immediately necessary to adjudicate this question, but certain station representatives refute this and claim that the collection and payment of 8c a set to CPRS completes the transaction as far as the broadcasters are concerned, and that the splitting of the fee between CPRS and WB is the personal squabble of the latter two bodies and none of the broadcasters' business.

This is put forward as another argument for the appointment of the tribunal, but even this body will be checkmated in negotiations until WB file their repertory and register their tariff scale wth the Canadian Radio Commission, under whose rules and regulations the independent stations operate.

Code of Ethics

Another outcome of the CAB conference will be the establishment of a code of ethics and the maintenance of card rates. Committees have now been named to draw up details and necessary qualifications of agencies which will be recognized under rules similar to those of the Canadian Daily Newspapers' Association in dealing with straight newsprint advertising. The aim of the Canadian broadcasters is to align themselves with reputable agencies and firms seeking ether outlets and to see that rackets are not put over on the public. Complete supervision of programs will be sought and an attempt will be made to exclude any nauseating features, the patent medicine advertising over the air being presumably the chief target.

Claim of CAB is that their primary interests are toward radio listeners, that their reception spells the success or failure of a program and that advertisers must be persuaded that the listener is the ultimate determining factor. Attempts of certain concerns to get radio publicity without paying for it is to be discontinued. The further education of commercial sponsors as far as showmanship is concerned is to be stressed.

Along with the suggestion that the Government's promised legislation regarding an amendment to the Copyright Act and the appointment of an appeal tribunal to put through as soon as possible in order that the present chaotic situation may be clarified, the CAB will also seek the loosening of certain Canadian Radio Commission regulations in order that Canadian stations may be put on a more equal footing with American stations. This particularly applies to the banning in Canada of spot announcements from 7:30-11 p. m. and the complete prohibition of price mentions. Several national advertisers in Canada, some whose parent companies are in the United States, have been protesting the price mention ban in recent months, and some important accounts have left the air because of this stipulation. From the standpoint of station revenue, the CAB also feels that the banning of spots needs reconsideration.

Harry Sedgwick, CFBR, Toronto, was re-elected president at the close of the conference; ditto Arthur Evans as secretary-treasurer. New board of directors are: Major William C. Borrett, CHNS, Halifax; J. Narcisse Thivierge, CHRC, Quebec; Phillip Morris, CFPL, London; A. A. Murphy, CFQC, Saskatoon; H. Gordon Love, CFCN, Calgary; George C. Chandler, CJOR, Vancouver.

BUILD FAIR ON 25-YEAR PLAN

Permanent Exposition on Site of Century of Progress—Outdoors Recreational Center, Opera, Symphony—Carnie Gaffs, Red Noise Out—Chicago Seeks to Hold Attention of Midwest with Steady Stream of Attractions

10-MAN COMMITTEE

Outcropping of world's fairs and expositions throughout the country, in Dallas, New York, San Francisco, San Diego and most recently in Seattle, has spurred Chicago leaders into a frenzy of activity on a permanent World's Fair in this town, so as to keep the midwest attention directed in towards the loop and to hold the eyes of the country. After a taste of the boom times of the Century of Progress, the local business men have their tongues out for more of the same.

Present plans are vague, but there is a committee of 10 men, headed by Walter Gregory of the Palmer House and chief of the State Street Council, working on the basis of an angle for the giant exposition. Council has secured a grant of $7,000,000 from the government for the primary landscaping of the proposed location, which is a portion of the grounds used by the Century of Progress. This $7,000,000 is being spent on WPA workers in planting trees, setting up walks and growing grass.

Basis of the plan is to set up a beautiful park first, and then tell the citizens of Chicago that is the proposed site and then start a campaign for funds. It is estimated that approximately $40,000,000 will be needed to build the original permanent exposition, and the funds will probably be raised by the floating of a revenue bond issue, in the same manner as the World's Fair funds were subscribed.

Committee has laid out a plot of 181 acres for the Chicago Exposition, running from about 14th street, which is just south of the Planetarium and Soldier's Field, to 23d street, which was the site of the Streets of Paris during the World's Fair. Exposition grounds will also include Northerly Island, which was the site of the Midway during the second Century of Progress season in 1934.

No Gaffs

Basis of the plan as contemplated by the committee is to make the Chicago Exposition a recreational center rather than an amusement center. It is figured as a sort of combination of the best features of Playland in Rye, N. Y., and Jones' Beach. It will be a year-round proposition, if possible, though there is a likelihood that the recreational sections will close down during the three severe winter months.

Plans include primarily a giant bathing beach, topping anything in the world. The angle here is to make it a play beach for recreation rather than a bathing beach, since the committee on research has reported that 60% of the people going to any sort of beach never go near the water.

There will be a convention hall seating 25,000 people. There has been some squawking around that the city has enough convention space now in the Coliseum, Stadium and the International Ampitheatre at the stockyards, but the committee proceeding on the basis that all of these meeting places are inaccessible and that the town needs a convention hall more convenient to the downtown sector.

Other plans for the permanent fair include exhibit and exposition halls of the type of Hall of Medicine and Health, Hall of Agriculture and commercial exhibit halls. Opera house with a sliding roof for both winter and summer season, particularly the summertime to take the place of the defunct Ravinia Opera in the north suburbs of the city, an open air arena for symphony concerts, with or without commercial sponsorships.

Two Bits Top

Admission will probably be fixed at 25c, with additional charges inside the grounds for rental of bathing suits, etc. The exposition itself will have full control of all concessions, from bathing suit rentals to the sale of hot dogs. This means that the exposition will hire men to run the hot dog stands, the bathing suit dispensaries, post card stands, photography shops, and the rest. This will eliminate the system at the Century of Progess in which the Fair took a percentage of the individual grosses with the individual operator standing for any losses.

There will be no Midway, which means no red noise and fire, no rides or shooting galleries. There will probably be two or three villages such as helped the Century of Progress. They will be primarily devoted to restaurants and cafes, however, with the cafe portion of the Villages dishing up floor shows along with the food.

Hot or Cold

Big item being worked on by the committee is year-round ice facilities, particularly during the summertime, the committee believing that this will figure as a great attendance attraction.

The entire plan of this permanent exposition is set as a long-time pull, covering a period of 25 years as a minimum which the period covered by the original lease to the property by the Exposition. There is no opening date set. Maybe in three years, maybe in five, maybe in 10. This is not figured as another World's Fair. And, of equal importance, the committee is stressing the fact that this Exposition will always be changing. Buildings will be wrecked and others put up as new ideas come in and new needs arise.

Revolving Hands

Committee of 10 men have their positions covering from one to 10 years each, which means that the committee automatically changes personnel continuously, to keep the members from getting into a rut and from splitting up into petty factions.

At the end of 25 years the citizens will decide whether they want to take the land back again and discontinue the Exposition or can lease the Exposition grounds (now known as Burnham Park) to the committee for another 25 years or so.

Included in these plans is a project for an airport on the lake front just south of the Exposition grounds. Business men of the city have been complaining that the present airport is too far away from the center of the city. City planners also have begun to raise a fear among Chicagoans that the transcontinental airplane service is passing to the south of the country bit by bit, and that unless Chicago comes through with the greatest airport in the nation that the city will lose the major portion of the cross-country airplane traffic.

Ex-P. A. Sentenced

Robert Sterling, for advance man for various circuses and carnivals, was sentenced to a term of from six months to three years in the penitentiary Monday (27) by the Justices of Special Sessions, New York. He had pleaded guilty to a charge of petty larceny. His police record covering the entire country showed 14 prior arrests for larceny and check passing.

Sterling was arrested Jan. 4 while attempting to rifle a cash register in a store at 250 Fifth avenue. At the time he told police he was without funds, having just arrived from the west to take a job as a waiter at Jack Dempsey's. No one knew him at the restaurant.

$1,037,000 Raised for Cleve. Expo Opening June 27 for 100-Day Run

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

Angeled to the tune of $1,037,000 by almost 300 local business firms, a 'Great Lakes Exposition' will open here June 27 for a 100-day run as highlight of Cleveland's centennial celebration. Chamber of Commerce boys are making it biggest thing in history of city, expecting 5,000,000 visitors as it will be held same time as Republican convention meets here.

Nut of $1,000,000 was original goal set by Dud ley S. Blossom, general chairman, but it was so quickly reached that another $300,000 may be underwritten for extra features.

Patterned after Chicago's Century of Progress, the exposition will be staged on lake-front near downtown section. One hundred acres are being graded for exhibit buildings. It will be a Roman holiday for local architects, since blueprints call for a new $100,000 bridge to lakefront besides a 60-foot wide subway to the midway and the erection of about 230 buildings.

Sensational stuff like Chicago ballyhooed has been tabooed by Lincoln G. Dickey, general manager, who formerly operated Atlantic City's Steel Pier. Amusement zone to feature a ten-acre village tagged 'Streets of World,' designed by Richard Rychtarik, who does settings for Cleveland symphony operas. Entrance will look like old European castle and streets will have architectural atmosphere of different nationalities.

Entertainment budget of about $340,000 being handled by Frank Hines, one time RKO theatre manager and a protege of John Royal. Reported he is dickering for appearances of Major Bowes and his amateurs in lagoon theatre; also Amos and Andy, Paul Whiteman and other name acts for short engagements. There's talk about bringing 'Jumbo' into civic stadium, which has 100,000 capacity, but deal with Billy Rose not yet set; Outdoor opera, 'Pageant of Nations,' backed by newspaper; athletic tournaments and aerial shows are events definitely lined up.

Midway's biggest novelties call for a record-high steel tower for air rides and mooring blimps; a midget village and wild animal caves; a horticultural exhibit in a three-story building that may become permanent; miniature railroad, an old-time variety theatre, reviving blood-and-thunder melodramas, and a 'Wonderland' playground for children. Concessions supervised by Almond R. Shaffer, associate director, who says that cheap grafters and wheels will be nixed.

Threat of rain not worrying backers, as exhibits of iron, steel and heavy machinery industries will be housed in city's permanent underground exposition hall. In case of drizzly weather, outdoor acts will move into civic auditorium, which has 15,000 capacity.

Dickey has already started work on exposition, which will run up to October. Executive staff includes Peg Whlin Humphrey, assistant general manager; William C. Dunlop, sales director; Ernest S. Porter, associate sales director; William Ganson Rose, promotion head. New York branch offices are being opened by E. A. Teven in Grand Central Palace.
